Bitter Accusations Deepen Impasse at Peace Talks

U.S. SENATE REJECTS GUN-LICENSING BID

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States Senate rejected today an amendment to the firearms control bill to require the registration of all firearms and the licensing of their owners.

Senator Joseph D. Tydings (Dem., Md.), calling the proposal an anti-crime and not an anti-gun measure, offered it as an amendment to a bill barring interstate mail order sales of rifles and shotguns.

Jail Head Residence Dynamited

MONTREAL (CP) — A bomb blast early today ripped the back porch off the home of Albert Tanguay, governor of Montreal's Bordeaux jail.

The explosion shattered several windows in the house, opposite the jail in north-end Montreal, and in neighboring houses.

Police said the bomb was made of two sticks of dynamite and was shoved under the porch. It exploded about 3 a.m.

Governor Tanguay said he believed "terrorists" set the bomb. He heard two cars pulling out of his driveway shortly before the blast.

Prisoners in the jail have been involved in a hunger strike for the last two weeks. There were reports that two accused terrorists, being held for trial, started the hunger strike by more than 350 prisoners.

Governor Tanguay has denied that a hunger strike had swept through the jail, but he told reporters:

"No matter what its status, the prisoners ate their supper last night."

Police found a typed note at the front entrance of the governor's house on Gouin Boulevard.

Written in French, it said:

"We heartily support Gagnon and Vallieres in the valiant fight they are waging by their hunger strike."

It complimented the "hundreds" of other prisoners who had joined the strike and ended with: "Vive la revolution. Vive le Quebec libre."

Charles Gagnon is currently on trial on a charge of conspiracy to commit an armed robbery of a north-end theatre in August, 1966. Pierre Vallieres was convicted of manslaughter in the death of a woman in a time-bomb explosion at a strike-bound shoe factory in June, 1966.

In the Gagnon trial the Crown has alleged that the attempted theatre robbery was to raise funds for the terrorist Front de Liberation Quebecois.

BLAMES FLQ

Governor Tanguay said he believed "the FLQ is to blame" for the bombing of his porch, which was shattered into a pile of broken wood and glass.

A police spokesman said: "It may be connected with a hunger strike by the inmates, although this seems a rather drastic step for them to take."

The hunger strike story reached the courts Tuesday when a man fainted in Sessions Court because he said he was weak from a lack of food at Bordeaux jail.

Edouard Lefebvre, 29, was appearing on a charge of car theft.

He told Judge Marcel Gaboury he and several other Bordeaux prisoners had been on a hunger strike since last week "because the food they serve us is plainly inedible . . . unfit for human consumption."

Lefebvre was convicted of the charge and is to be sentenced Oct. 10.

SENATE PLANS POVERTY PROBE

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A poverty study may be undertaken by the Senate.

A broad study of all aspects of poverty in Canada was recommended last week by the Economic Council of Canada in its fifth annual report. It claimed that nearly 5,000,000 Canadians are poverty stricken.

Sen. David Croll, Toronto, an active and influential Liberal member of the upper house, gave notice today in the Senate of his intention to move to set up a special committee. It would be empowered to investigate and report on all aspects of poverty.

The terms of reference he proposed are contained in his motion: "To define and elucidate the problem of poverty in Canada and to recommend appropriate action to ensure the establishment of a more effective structure of remedial measures."

The committee would be asked to report on all aspects of poverty, urban, rural, regional or otherwise.

It could engage the services of such counsel staff and technical advisers as necessary. It would have power to send for persons, papers and records and to examine witnesses and report from time to time. Mr. Croll suggested 17 senators be named to make up the committee.

The Senate has in the past been asked by governments to carry out in-depth studies of the type normally entrusted to royal commissions. It was such a Senate inquiry in 1961 that cleared the way for introduction of the ARDA project.

Terrorism Try Claimed by U.S.

PARIS (AP) — American and North Vietnamese envoys traded bitter accusations about each other's war aims today, deepening the deadlock already snarling the peace talks.

United States Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance charged Hanoi is trying "to terrorize and coerce" the South Vietnamese into accepting communism. Those attempts are futile and will fail, he said, because of the resistance of "the vast majority of South Vietnamese."

Ambassador Xuan Thuy countered with the claim that American protestations of peace are aimed only at masking an escalation of the war. He asserted also the U.S. is out "to perpetuate the partition of Vietnam."

Not a shred of visible progress marked the 2½-hour session although both sides arranged to meet again next week.

Vance said at the 22nd session of the Paris peace talks that both the Viet Cong and its National Liberation Front were created and are controlled by the Hanoi government.

"Neither the regime in Hanoi nor its agents in South Vietnam can achieve their political goals through the use of force," Vance said.

Vance urged Xuan Thuy, chief North Vietnamese delegate, to accept Washington's invitation to join in a program to "reduce the level of violence" in Vietnam as the start of a process of withdrawing all troops from the South—"yours as well as ours."

Earlier Vance brushed aside a public call by United Nations Secretary-General U Thant for a halt of the bombing of North Vietnam.

Before entering the session, Vance told reporters: "Mr. U Thant knows our position very well. Our position is that we are prepared to stop the bombing when we have reason to believe that the North Vietnamese seriously intend to move with us to de-escalate the fighting and to move toward peace."

Nigeria Steps Up Big Push

LAGOS (Reuters) — Federal Nigerian troops are pushing toward Umuahia, breakaway Biafra's last major town, and the city may fall in seven to 10 days, informed sources said today.

The push follows the capture of Owerri two days after an eight-hour assault with heavy armor and infantry led by Col. Benjamin (Black Scorpion) Adekunle, commander of the 3rd Marine Commando Division.

Federal reports here said the Biafrans fought tenaciously for Owerri. Federal troops holding Aba, captured 12 days ago, were moved in to help hold Owerri.

No federal troops were killed or wounded, the reports said, adding that civilians who had fled into the bush are already returning to their homes.

Radio Biafra said today Russian-built Ilyushin bombers of the federal air force made raids on Umuahia, killing five persons and destroying several homes.

Radio Biafra also said the Ilyushins bombed a village in Owerri province in what it called "the most dastardly raid of the civil war." A rocket attack on the local market place killed 510 persons and wounded twice as many, some seriously, it said.

The name of the village could not be heard because of partial federal jamming of the broadcast.

Grits Lashed, Win Test Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition pummelled the Trudeau government verbally all day Tuesday but lost the match as the government easily won its first confidence vote of the new Parliament.

The test came in the first roll-call vote of the session on a New Democratic non-confidence motion.

The score: Liberals 145; opposition 101.

A united opposition supported the NDP motion criticizing the government for not responding to Canada's social problems, "including housing, urban development, unemployment and poverty."

The motion was made as an amendment to a Conservative motion which will come to a vote Thursday night.

MEET TODAY

Creditiste MPs were to meet today to decide whether they will introduce their own motion, which also would be voted on Thursday night.

In Tuesday night's vote 67 Conservatives, 20 New Democrats joined in opposing the government.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons is: Liberals 155, Conservatives 72, NDP 21, Creditistes 14, Independent 1, Vacant 1.

On Tuesday's second day of the eight-day throne speech debate the government took the most consistent pasting on its agricultural policies, particularly those concerning western wheat.

LIBERALS BACK PM

The few Liberal speakers in Tuesday's debate kept their speeches short and non-controversial. They expressed their confidence in the leadership of Pierre Elliott Trudeau and their gratitude to their constituents for sending them here.

In his maiden speech Ray Perrault, former British Columbia Liberal leader who defeated NDP leader T. C. Douglas in the federal riding of Burnaby-Seymour, laid down a challenge Tuesday to the views of the Bennett government on confederation and the constitution.

PERRAULT
. . . bilingual speech

In sharp contrast with the position of the provincial government, stated repeatedly at federal-provincial conferences, that B.C. takes a "pork chop" approach to confederation, Mr. Perrault said people of B.C. are as concerned about national unity as we are about economic growth.

Mr. Perrault, who spoke in French as well as English, charged that "some of those who claim that they are speaking for our province seem to think that there is an impassible stone wall between British Columbia and the remainder of Canada."

He said most of the people of the province "are ready to strengthen the ties of confederation and make all necessary adjustments which could be required in the process."

Some people were afraid of being forced to speak English or obliged to speak French, Mr. Perrault said in French. But he said the Canadian of tomorrow "should know English, French and as many other languages as he can assimilate."

Czechs Show Daring, Open West Frontiers

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

PRAGUE — The durable Czechoslovak Communist regime waxed ever more confident Tuesday in its rear guard action against the Kremlin super-power on its soil.

In a remarkable display of bravado, the government approved the opening of the blocked western frontiers as well as complete normalization of tourism with western Europe, an inflow which has been cut to a trickle at Soviet behest since the Aug. 21 invasion.

Meanwhile, the Czech leaders have demanded that the Soviet military authorities order a halt to a series of incidents in which journalists have been intimidated in violation of the Kremlin's promise of safety for progressives and intellectuals.

The protest against the incidents was made at a secret meeting with the Soviet high command in Prague, called at the request of Premier Oldrich Cernik. Among those representing the Czech position was deputy premier Frantisek Hamouz, who is respected by Moscow and who has been taking an ever-larger role in matters concerning the press since the invasion.

According to reliable informants, the Czech complaint dealt with the 24-hour seizure over the weekend of the progressive chief editor of the Ostrava Pape, Nova Svoboda, and with repeated firm "invitations" to the editor of the Prague daily Malda Fronta, to visit the Soviet military command this week.

The Malda Fronta editor, Miroslva Jelinek, was telephoned Monday and Tuesday by the Soviets and on both occasions refused the invitation after conferring with Czech government officials.

Amnesty Granted In Liberal Move

BUCHAREST (AP) — Romania's Supreme Court announced today the rehabilitation of four former Communist party leaders and a group of prominent non-Communist victims of Stalinist trials in an apparent move toward some liberalization with distinct anti-Soviet overtones.

The party leaders, who served as central committee secretaries before their purge in 1954 on charges of economic sabotage and political deviation, include Vasile Luca, a Moscow-trained trade union chief condemned to death and later pardoned. He died in prison in 1960.

The second group, mostly engineers and administrators, received death sentences or long prison terms in the infamous Danube Canal trial of 1952, reported to have been staged on orders from the Kremlin following failure of a Soviet-sponsored Danube Canal project on the Black Sea coast.

The Supreme Court ruling published in the Communist party newspaper Cinteia said the charges and verdicts against both groups were "illegal and without justification" and the "innocence of these sentences was clearly established." It was not known how many of them are still alive.

Hit-Run Raids Stir Israeli-Arab Strife

AMMAN (AP) — Jordan said today that it drove off an Israeli hit-and-run sabotage team that tried to cross the Jordan River Tuesday night.

A Jordanian army spokesman said the Israelis tried to cross near the Sheikh Hussein Bridge in the north Jordan Valley, but were driven back by machine-gun fire. The spokesman said the raiders were thought to have suffered casualties.

Israeli and Jordanian troops continued their almost nightly artillery duels across the river, and the United Nations Security Council neared approval of a resolution calling once more on Israel and her Arab foes to observe a ceasefire.

MEDICAL SERVICE PLANS DENTAL CARE COVERAGE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Medical Services Association said Tuesday its extended health plan which covers prescription drugs will be enlarged to include some dental care.

The prepaid medical plan said the dental care will be available October 1 to groups of 10 or more which are covered by the extended health plan.

The extra cost would range from $1.40 a month for single persons to $4.20 a month for families.

Benefits would cover two yearly oral examinations, some X-rays, cleaning and scaling twice a year and fluoride painting once a year. There would be no limit on extractions but fillings would not be covered.

Trustee Blasts Aldermen On One-Sided Probe

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

VANCOUVER — The usually-placid prelude to the annual convention of municipal governments was shattered this morning by an incisively-critical school trustee.

J. M. Campbell, Saturna Island, vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, was the man who foresook friendly greetings to attack the Union of B.C. Municipalities' pet project.

Delegates already had in their hands a comprehensive report describing a now-in-progress study of municipal and provincial financing being paid for by the UBCM and the provincial government. The study has been described as a "massive and exciting undertaking."

Mr. Campbell, the fifth speaker of the morning invited to extend greetings, chose the opportunity to tell the 1200 delegates that the terms of reference for their study could only be regarded with grave suspicion by school trustees throughout the province.

"I know that there are times when school trustees fail to realize that their expenditures affect and sometimes curtail other municipal projects" Mr. Campbell said.

"But it must also be stated that it is not always understood by municipal councils that their expenditures can often be the straw that breaks the taxpayer's resolve to support education."

Mr. Campbell stated that any study of municipal financing which excluded representatives of school boards could only lead to controversy.

"This study has been termed the third round of a fight to get a better understanding of municipal financing. It will not be the last round unless school trustees become involved. Controversy is bound to follow a study as one-sided as this one where the options are being used unilaterally. Whatever decisions you arrive at they will be suspect."

Mr. Campbell said he is not complaining about the conflict between school trustees and municipal governments but that he hoped that conflict would not develop into a quarrel.

"I would be less than honest if I did not tell you that we regard the concept of your finance study as entirely inappropriate and we hope that before it is too late you will come to realize that school trustees and municipal governments actually form one level of government.

"Our functions are the same.

Russia Pressures W. Germany

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union is ready to take effective steps to suppress neo-Nazism and militarism in West Germany should the need arise, the Communist party newspaper Pravda says.

The Pravda statement, written by commentator Vladlen Kuznetsov, comes a day after the U.S. warned the Soviet Union Tuesday that Communist military action against West Germany would bring an immediate response from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The newspaper clearly indicates that it considers the legal basis for such steps in the Potsdam agreements with the United States, Britain and France, rather than in the United Nations Charter provisions on former enemy states.

Kuznetsov makes only passing references to Articles 107 and 53 of the United Nations Charter, which West Germany feels the Soviet Union might interpret as justifying an armed attack.

He writes:

"The Soviet Union assumes that the powers of the anti-Hitler coalition, in accordance with their commitments under the Potsdam and other international agreements, continue to bear responsibility for the prevention of a rebirth of German militarism and Nazism.

"As a participant in the Potsdam agreement, the Soviet Union will continue to be ready to take, in case of need, the necessary steps together with other peace-loving states to suppress the dangerous activity of neo-Nazism and militarism."

The Soviet commentator indicates his surprise at a report that the U.S. regards as invalid provisions of the United Nations Charter which empower signatories to act against former enemy states without Security Council approval. But he does not take issue with the statement.

Today's commentary was the first reference in the Soviet press to the two controversial UN articles since the middle of July. Then the government newspaper Izvestia published the text of the memorandum to Bonn which said they fully apply to West Germany "in the case of renewed aggression."

This passage in the memorandum caused fears in Bonn after the occupation of Czechoslovakia by the Soviet Union and four Warsaw pact allies.

Kuznetsov describes these fears as "hysterical" and implies that Bonn is using them to drag its NATO partners into "a risky revanchist game" whose goal is to avoid fulfilment of the obligations imposed on post-war Germany by the Potsdam agreements.

Bonn, he says, is also trying to cast doubt on the obligations and rights of the Big Four wartime Allies, "which bear responsibility for the prevention of the rebirth of German militarism."

Wallace Presidential Bid Gathers Strength

WASHINGTON (CP) — Behind the fireworks of the U.S. presidential campaign there lurks the nightmarish possibility that come Nov. 5 no one will be elected.

And it could be that the man who comes second in the popular vote eventually is named president. It has happened before.

Perhaps even more amazing is the possibility of a president of one party and a vice-president of another.

It's the candidacy of George C. Wallace, segregationist former governor of Alabama, whose spirited third-party campaign is attracting amazing response, that threatens breakdown of the complex U.S. election machinery.

This horror has been inherent in the electoral system since an amendment of 1804, but the growing possibility that Wallace could keep both Republican Richard M. Nixon and Democrat Hubert Humphrey from getting a majority has brought new urgency to calls for change.

VOTE FOR 'ELECTORS'

Such confusion is possible because Americans don't vote directly for the candidate of their choice but for slates of "electors" who, if true to their trust, cast their votes as directed.

Usually the counting of their ballots in Washington Jan. 6 is but a formality since the winner already is known. But if none of the candidates has the necessary 270 electoral votes, the decision goes to the House of Representatives with each state having one vote.

It is at this juncture that Wallace, who on the basis of current polls is expected to get at least 20 per cent of the popular vote and several state's electoral votes, could be in a powerful bargaining position.

Most observers discount the content that the fiery little right-winger could "name" the next president since neither opponent is likely to go far in meeting his demands. But any appearance of back-room dealing could have incalculable repercussions in a nation already beset by misgivings about some of its institutions.

THIRD-PARTY presidential candidate George Wallace exchanged handshakes and greetings with a group of welcomers at Dallas, Tex., when he arrived at Dallas' Love Field. The former Alabama governor attended fund-raising dinners and the Texas convention of the American Independent Party. (AP Wirephoto.)

Three times in the last century the man who lost in the popular vote was elevated to the White House through the Electoral College.

And political historians recall with chagrin the 1824 election of John Quincy Adams by the House despite the plurality for Andrew Jackson in both popular and electoral votes. Adams apparently made a deal with Henry Clay to break a four-way Electoral College deadlock.

While the House tackled the problem, the Senate would try to elect a vice-president, creating the possibility of selection from different parties.

If the House remained deadlocked and the Senate named a vice-president, he would act as president until the deadlock was broken.

If neither the House nor the Senate was able to produce a majority by Jan. 20, when President Johnson's term expires, it then would be up to Congress to decide what should be done.

WALLACE GETS NAME ON EVERY BALLOT

TULSA, Okla. (Reuters)—Aides of George Wallace, third-party candidate for United States president, announced Thursday night that Wallace's name now is on the presidential ballot in all 50 states.

Washington and New York were the last states in which Wallace workers obtained the required number of signatures to put his name on the ballot.

Wallace, a former governor of Alabama, commented that he now led a national, not a regional movement.

Nixon Indicates Desire To Debate With Humphrey

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Richard M. Nixon, Republican candidate for president of the United States in the Nov. 5 election, has indicated he might be willing to debate with Democratic nominee Hubert H. Humphrey—but not if the debate had to include third-party candidate George C. Wallace.

Nixon called on Humphrey at the same time Tuesday to repudiate what he called evidence of a developing collusion between some Wallace backers and southern Democrats to throw the presidential election into the House of Representatives.

Humphrey, who has been pressing hard for a debate, accused Nixon meanwhile of "playing with the lives of humanity" on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty issue. He also said Nixon is more hawkish than anyone in the Johnson administration on the Vietnam war.

COMMENTS ON DEBATE

Nixon's comment on a proposed nationally televised debate and an alleged collusion came at a news conference.

Such a debate between the two major party candidates "would serve the public interest," he said. But he said equal time for a third or fourth party candidate would not serve that interest.

Nixon said there were reports that the aim of the alleged collusion between Wallace backers and southern Democrats was to win states for Wallace, not Humphrey, and thus throw the presidential race into the House.

The election would go to the House if none of the candidates has the necessary 270 electoral votes necessary for becoming president. U.S. presidents are not elected by popular vote but by an electoral college. Electoral college votes go to candidates with the most popular votes in a state.

In the House, each state delegation would have one presidential vote.

Trudeau Given Mother's Tartan

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau received an Elliott tartan kilt today before a meeting of the Liberal parliamentary caucus.

"Just what I've always wanted," the prime minister told Mr. Danson.

Mr. Trudeau is descended from the Elliotts of Scotland through his mother.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cool air covered most of western Canada Tuesday night and clearing in central and northern parts resulted in a threat of frost in these areas. The central interior of B.C. escaped the frosts but many parts of Alberta were not as fortunate. The threat, however, remains for the central interior and frosts are expected there tonight. A large area of rain lies over Washington and Oregon states and the northern edge of this rain area extends into the southern interior. The weather system causing the rain will move slowly southeastward and the rain will end in the southern interior late today. Behind it in the cool moist air covering B.C. there will be considerable cloudiness and some shower activity.

. . . CZECHS

The Czech regime is concerned that the Soviet Union may be embarking on a campaign of subtle harassment and repression which would make a mockery of the leadership's promise to all Czech citizens last week that they were safe and subject only to the laws of their own country. This pledge was made after consultation with the special Soviet emissary here, Vasily Kuznetsov.

No harm has come to either journalist. The Soviet Union insists that the Nova Svoboda editor, who was taken from his editorial offices Saturday by Soviet military vehicles to the Trencin headquarters in West Slovakia, went voluntarily.

However, reports of the meeting between the journalist and top soviet military brass indicate the session was long and gruelling. He was returned to Ostrava Sunday. The first secretary of the Ostrava Party committee was also brought to Trencin.

The Nova Svoboda offices were occupied by soldiers Saturday after the newspaper had refused for a full week to print a letter from a conservative group in Ostrava "greeting" the Soviet military presence. The building was cleared again late Monday.

The incident was the first recorded case of an actual seizure of an intellectual by the Russians since the invasion and it has caused a wave of anxiety among journalists and writers. But the government's resolute response, coming with other signs of Czech refusal to be crushed into submissiveness, is taken as heartening.

NORMALIZATION PLOY

The announcement Tuesday morning of the opening of the Czech borders to western tourists, for instance, is an example of how the Prague authorities are able to use the Soviet demands for normalization to their own purpose. "Normalization" of the tourist traffic means returning to one of the most liberal travel policies of all the east European countries — and one approved under the conservative regime of Stalinist Antonin Novotny.

The Party paper Rude Pravo announced that "within the next few days" the tourist traffic is to be resumed. Czech diplomatic offices will again be open to grant visas, both for guided tours and private individuals. The paper also stressed that "normal conditions" apply to the issuance of travel documents to Czech citizens.

In regard to incoming tourists, officials at the government travel agency Cedok indicated Tuesday that it would once more be possible to obtain visas at the border crossing points or airport.

One of the major Soviet grievances in the past eight months has been the alleged infiltration of Czechoslovakia by West German and American agents disguised as tourists.

In fact, the "securing" of the western borders with West Germany is now the main justification remaining to the Soviet Union for its intervention, now that its claim of being invited in has been discredited.

The almost complete stoppage of the burgeoning flow of western tourists, lured by the picturesque "golden city" of Prague, has been one of the most depresssing aspects of the invasion. Streets and night clubs crowded until late in the evening in July are now dreary and half empty, like those of East Berlin.

HUGE LOSS

The economic loss is incalculable and believed to be well into the millions of dollars in desperately needed hard currency.

In a similar vein to the border move, there were other signs that the Czech regime was probing to see how much line the Soviet Union would give. For instance, diplomatic sources said they were being told by the Czech foreign trade ministry that all business deals being worked out before the invasion are still open. And a delegation from the ministry is due to leave for South America in a few days.

The progressive weekly magazine, Reporter, one of the most barbed of all Czechoslovak publications during the January to August period, is due to publish its first post-invasion issue Wednesday. It is to include commentary about Czech patriotism and national spirit which has supported the government in the last few weeks.

N. Vietnamese Infiltration Diminishing

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam appears to be on the downward trend but is still estimated at 20,000 men in August, United States military sources said today.

Their estimate continued an up-and-down trend that has prevailed for the last four months: 30,000 in May, 20,000 in June and 30,000 in July. All are estimates.

The sources said they did not consider the estimated reduction a sign of de-escalation in the North Vietnamese war effort.

They suggested three possible reasons for the reduction: The Communist command may have filled its units to the strength it feels it can support, air strikes by American bombers on infiltration routes, and monsoon floods which slowed traffic along the Ho Chi Minh trail through Laos.

Meanwhile, U.S. infantrymen knocked out nearly half of an attacking Viet Cong battalion Tuesday northwest of Saigon, raising to at least 259 the number of troops they have killed in that war hotspot this week.

The U.S. command said 131 of the attackers were killed, while American casualties were four dead and 48 wounded.

Soviets Deny Space Shot On Way to Moon and Back

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet government spokesman today denied a British report that a Soviet space shot had passed within 1,000 miles of the moon and is believed on its way back to the earth.

The spokesman said the report from Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Britain's Jodrell Bank Observatory, "does not correspond to reality."

The spokesman said he had no information on the flight of the Zond V unmanned spacecraft, which a Soviet announcement Sunday said had been launched into space from a parking orbit around the earth. The spacecraft's mission was not specified then, and there has been no further announcement about it.

"We are not backing down on anything," said a spokesman at Jodrell Bank. "We only said we believe the probe had passed near the moon and was now headed back.

'NOT IN ORBIT'

"From the signals so far, we are certain that it did approach the moon. . . . Now it is leaving the moon's vicinity and is not in orbit around it."

Lovell said the spacecraft did not go around the moon, but passed on one side of it, and then the signal strength increased many times as it turned toward earth. He predicted that the Russians would try to recover it Friday, which would be another space first for the Russians and an important step toward landing a man on the moon.

It is only the nature of the functions that are different."

Mr. Campbell appealed for greater mutual trust between school trustees and the UBCM.

"Instead of looking askance at each other we should be trying to find ways which would unite us in a common cause to stand against the provincial government which magnaminously gives out responsibilities without authority and without the wherewithall to fulfil those responsibilities.

"We spend our energy attacking each other when we should be fighting a joint battle to obtain the authority and the wherewithall to fulfil the responsibilities so easily placed on our shoulders."

Injured Woman's Condition Fair

A woman critically injured in a car crash early Sunday is listed in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Noreen Hesjedal, 21, of 1222 Lockley, who suffered head injuries and severe lacerations when she was thrown against the windshield of the car, was reported at first as being in poor condition.

Explosive Papal Document

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican will issue in two or three weeks an "explosive" papal document laying down guidelines for closer relations between the Roman Catholic Church and Communists and other atheists, Vatican sources said today.

The sources said the document would probably cause "disquiet or even dismay" in conservative circles of the church. They said issuance of the document had been delayed by opposition from Vatican conservatives.

The document was drafted by the Vatican secretariat for non-believers and approved by Pope Paul. It was drawn up to fulfil the Vatican ecumenical council's call for a "dialogue . . . with those who oppose the church and persecute it in various manners."

Canada Could Use Aussie Vote System

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Representation Commissioner Nelson Castonguay says Canada could have a permanent list of voters and absentee voting but at great expense.

His report on these subjects to Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, tabled Tuesday in the Commons, is expected to go to a committee where MPs will decide whether they really want such a system.

Mr. Castonguay, former chief electoral officer, examined systems in use in many countries, concluding after two year's study that Australia's could be modified to fit Canadian electoral laws. He was not asked for an opinion on whether the step should be taken and he volunteered none.

CASTONGUAY
. . . two-year study

A workable modification of the Australian system would mean:

—Compulsory collection from every voter of a witnessed signature on a card giving name, address and occupation.

—Compiling of a central voters register in Ottawa and a list for each of the 263 constituencies.

—Continuous revision of the list to take into account people moving to new ridings, becoming eligible to vote or losing their eligibility for some reason such as going to prison.

VOTE BY MAGIC

—Machinery to enable voting by mail by persons in hospital or away from their home riding and home province or out of the country altogether.

—Machinery for absentee voting by persons away from their home riding but still in their home province.

This system would halve to 30 days the time now needed to hold an election and shorten the time available for election campaigning to that period.

"However, it is my belief that the adoption of such a system would prove to be very costly," says the report.

Australia's costs are about 45 cents per voter per year, a total of $2,700,000 in 1965. With double the voters, a high rate of voter mobility and higher salaries for electoral workers, Canada's could cost $1.50 per voter per year or about $16,000,000.

The current enumeration of electors in a six-day period just before each election is about $12,000,000, recurring once every four years or so.

CHANGES ARE MANY

Among the many consequences of grafting a modified Australian system onto Canadian electoral machinery:

—An estimated 1,000,000 more Canadians would have a chance to vote by absentee or by mailed ballots.

—From a permanent staff between elections of about 22, the electoral staff would jump to between 600 and 700 to make continuous revisions in the voters list.

—The strvicemen's votes, now taken by mail and announced a week after election day, would be taken at the same time as the mailed votes of civilians.

—This would mean that the final result of voting in close contests wouldn't be known for two or three weeks because of the need to count civilian and armed forces mailed ballots.

—The long-standing complaint of servicemen that they are the only voters whose choice is clearly distinguishable as a group would disappear.

—Canadians might follow the pattern in Australia where only 10 per cent of those eligible make use of the expensive mailed-ballot machinery available to them.

—The current three-month period between dissolution of one Parliament and the earliest post-election date on which the new one could meet to deal with an emergency might be shortened to two months.

KEEP LIST REVISED

—Australia's continuous revision, involving house-to-house canvass provides a list at least four months or more out of date at any given point. Canada's current list is drawn up anew at each election in a six-day canvass by temporary employees.

—Enforcing compulsory registration and prosecuting offenders would bring problems. In Australia, 16,645 out of 6,011,034 names on the rolls were served with notices of contraventions in 1966. Of these 11,684 furnished satisfactory excuses, 3,751 were dealt with by electoral officers, usually by a $1 penalty, and 1,210 were prosecuted in court where first offences bring a $10 fine.

—One-third of Canadian voters who use rural polls—3,600,000 in the 1965 election—would lose the current election-day privilege of voting even if their names aren't on the voters list. Unlisted voters are allowed to vote at rural polls if a listed elector swears on oath that they are legal residents of the riding and entitled to vote.

—An up-to-date list of names and addresses would be available year-round to anyone—bill collectors, junk mail advertisers or civic authorities checking the tax status of property.

Canada tried a permanent list of electors once before, in 1934 but discarded it after the 1935 election. It was repealed in 1938, when the present system came into being.

BENSON

ECONOMY OUTLOOK HEALTHY

OTTAWA (CP) — The government sees a healthy short-term outlook for the economy despite fears expressed by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Tuesday.

He told a delegation from the chamber he sees the future more optimistically than they do. The chamber said there may be repercussions in Canada this fall and winter from an anticipated slowing down of the U.S. economy.

But federal officials believe Canada can weather it.

Benson told reporters after the meeting he does not think the anticipated slowdown in the U.S. will have serious repercussions in Canada.

Canada, he said, has overcome the hesitant period it had in the economy last fall and early this year, and now appears destined for steady growth.

The finance minister said he hopes to introduce a draft bill for sweeping federal tax form early next year, but it would not go initially beyond the first-reading stage in the Commons. It would be referred to a Parliamentary committee for study.

LBJ Gives Support to Humphrey

By CARROLL KILPATRICK
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Johnson announced Tuesday his unqualified, whole-hearted support of Hubert H. Humphrey for president.

The president praised the vice-president as "a fighter and a patriot" who has given "his courage, common sense and compassion to the cuase of America."

The president's comments were made in a telegram to the Texas Democratic Party convention in Austin and released at the White House.

The enthusiastic endorsement contained in the telegram appeared to be designed to put at rest rumors that Mr. Johnson was less than enthusiastic about the Democratic nominee.

The president earlier had told a news conference that he supported the Humphrey-Muskie ticket, but Tuesday's statement was the most outspoken in support of the ticket he has yet made.

After the nominations in Chicago last month, Mr. Johnson told the new party leaders that he would do whatever they requested to help the Democratic Party in November.

Endorsement Might Hurt Nominees

Mr. Johnson has recognized that he is an unpopular figure and he has not been certain whether an all-out endorsement would help or hurt his party nominees.

Because of the president's reluctance to speak out in a partisan way, rumors have flooded the capital in recent days that the president did not feel strongly in support of the Humphrey-Muskie ticket. Tuesday he declared flatly that a Democratic victory in November can mean the "difference between world order and world chaos."

"Unless we democrats unite to heal and lead America—America will never have the vision to heal and lead the world," the president said.

Eight years ago, he said in his telegram to the Texas Democrats, "I asked you to give your undivided support to the Democratic ticket.

"Your magnificent response spelled the difference between victory and defeat," he added. "This year, in another crucial election, I again ask you to close ranks behind our candidates."

The president asked the Texas Democrats "to give the same loyalty to Hubert Humphrey that he has given to the Democratic Party all his life."

He asked them to work as hard for Humphrey "as he has worked for America," and to give him "the same strength that he has given me."

Mr. Johnson said that he had stood beside Humphrey in battles for 20 years and had watched him give "his courage, common sense and compassion to the cause of America."

That is why I picked him as my vice-president," Mr. Johnson said. "He had earned my confidence and admiration as the man best qualified to serve a heartbeat away from the presidency. I feel even more strongly about his qualifications today."

Most of all, however, Mr. Johnson said, a Democratic victory this year will mean the difference between "a united and divided America—between constructive action and destructive reaction—between the progress that our Democratic party has always brought and the stagnation that the other party has always wrought."

NATO, Canada Go Slow Over Special Meetings

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—NATO has been talking about the political and military consequences of the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia since Aug. 20.

But it still has not decided whether to hold a special ministerial meeting on the subject.

The decision will not come for another few weeks, informants here say. And when it comes it may be merely to advance the time of the regular December meeting of foreign and defence ministers.

Object of this go-slow process apparently is to keep alive chances of negotiating with the Russians in fields such as disarmament.

West Germany has been the principal advocate of a special NATO ministerial meeting on Czechoslovakia.

CANADA MAY AGREE

France and Britain are said to be opposed. France on the grounds that there is no way NATO can give the Czechoslovaks any effective help.

Canada may be in agreement with this French view despite the recent bickering between the two countries in the cultural field.

Prime Minister Trudeau has publicly opposed NATO taking any stance which would either provoke the Russians or raise false hopes in Czechoslovakia of Western deliverance.

Informants said External Affairs Minister Sharp will have a series of bilateral talks with many of his NATO counterparts on the Czech situation when he goes to the United Nations early next month.

Mr. Sharp's timetable is getting fairly well filled because he will head a Canadian ministerial delegation on a Latin American tour late this fall.

The occupation of Czechoslovakia caught Canada in the middle of a review of its role in NATO.

Mr. Sharp said in the Commons Monday Canada has not given an undertaking to maintain its present forces in Europe—a 5,000-man infantry brigade and six squadrons of nuclear bombers.

Mr. Trudeau added that Canada's position in NATO "does not compromise any reassessment we might like to make."

VIET WAR DAY COSTLY AFFAIR

EDMONTON (CP) — Maj.-Gen. Bruce Fraser Macdonald said Monday the Vietnam war is costing the U.S. almost as much each day as the United Nations paid out for four years of peacekeeping in Cyprus. Maj.-Gen. Macdonald, deputy chief of personnel at Canadian Forces headquarters in Ottawa, said the Vietnam war costs $70,000,000 a day while the Cyprus operation cost a total of $80,000,000.

Traffic Deaths Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Traffic deaths in B.C. rose to 383 by the end of August—44 more than in the same period last year — a B.C. Safety Council spokesman says. He said drownings were up to 33, compared with 16 to the end of August last year.

DEAD COUPLE TO WED BEFORE BEING BURIED

CATSKILL, N.Y. (UPI)—A young couple who died together in a highway accident were to be united in marriage today before being buried side by side.

A symbolic religious wedding ceremony was to precede the services for Robert P. Kames, 21, of Catskill and his fiancee, Martha Levine, 21, a nurse at the Brookyn Jewish Hospital. They were killed with three other persons last Sunday in a two-car accident near Grant, N.M.

Rabbi Howard Joseph of Schenectady, who will officiate at both services, said the wedding ceremony will "declare them united by . . . the coincidence of their tragedy. In a symbolic way, they will be united forever in death."

Canadian Disunity De Gaulle's Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government has a right and a duty to protest against attempts by the French government to break up the country, Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday night in a television interview.

He said there are two ways to look at the future of French Canada.

"One is to cloister it into Quebec and to say this is the only place where French Canadians can be at home, and this leads to the breaking up of the country. This seems to be the option taken by the French government."

The other option was to have "the French fact exist in all parts of Canada, the option taken by the federal government.

"We don't want only the French Canadians in Quebec, but we want the French Canadians in Manitoba, in New Brunswick and everywhere else to have the same rights to use their language as the English Canadians in Quebec have—or had, until recently," Mr. Trudeau said.

"This is the basis on which our whole policy is established.

"Now, the French government apparently doesn't believe this. It's their choice, but it's certainly our right to protest, and our duty."

Mr. Trudeau was interviewed by Charles Lynch of Southam News Services and Louis Martin, host of the CBC-TV French program Two Plus One, on the English network program, Twenty Million Questions.

The prime minister said the government welcomes the help and assistance of France to French Canadians, but "we are just hoping that they (the French government) will behave in a way which is compatible with international law and custom."

"If they don't, I don't see why we shouldn't tell them what we think."

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1968

On With the New . . . Later

THE COMMONS REMARKS OF the opposition leaders in reply to the Speech from the Throne have been disappointingly trite and conventional.

Mr. Stanfield's comments have been in the same key and tempo as his recent election campaign: the proper things said, the expected stands taken, the old party game played. He appears entirely unaware of the new national atmosphere that the election produced, quite without appreciation that the political ploys and attitudes—honest and well meant though they were—which he displayed in the campaigning have been rejected by a great majority of Canadians in favor of a new approach: a climate not yet exactly defined, not quite understood, perhaps not even fully describable, but one which has captured the imagination of the country for the new promise which it holds. In this environment the time-worn political party cliches can receive scant attention.

Mr. Stanfield decries the Throne Speech for not challenging, exciting and articulating a Canadian ideal. Yet this was the very aspect of Mr. Trudeau's recent campaign to which Mr. Stanfield took greatest exception —he charged that the Liberal leader forsook specific topics to escape into broad generalities. Now, when the agenda of the session deals with the bread-and-butter jobs which must be done before further progress can be made, Mr. Stanfield takes the opposite tack. Where, he asks, is the idealism and excitement?

Mr. David Lewis, the acting House leader of the NDP, adopted much the same approach, and criticized the Speech for its lack of action and adventure. Behind all the criticism can be felt the frustration of the opposition leaders. Primed to pounce on any new departures in policy, ready to denounce the adventurous quality which they feared, they have been faced with a down-to-earth list of necessary housekeeping, and their prepared cries of outrage have died aborning.

The opposition dilemma is rooted in the fact that the Conservative and NDP members face a new type of government leader—perhaps a new flavor of government. The old opposition approaches do not quite fit the situation, and the unknown possibilities of Mr. Trudeau's handling of the powers of government pose an intensely worrying question mark for his opponents.

The next few months may tell the story; or the "adventure and excitement" of the Trudeau regime may not really hit the country until the next Throne Speech, when the accumulated debris will have been cleared away. By that time Mr. Trudeau will have proved the success of his personal revolution or demonstrated a failure to master the intricacies of practical government. It is one of the great gambles in Canada's history—and more Canadians have bet on him than on any other party.

A Question of Principals

THE DEBATE OVER USE OF the strap in Greater Victoria public schools has come to an unsatisfactory conclusion. The strap will remain in the teachers' arsenal of disciplinary methods, the School Board has decided, because the trustees lack the power to have it banished. Even though the Board itself is divided on the value of corporal punishment in the schools, the matter should not be allowed to drop.

The Board has been advised that regulations set by the Cabinet under provisions of the Public Schools Act put the question of discipline in the hands of individual teachers, enjoining them to act in the manner of "a kind, firm and judicious parent." It is doubtful whether many teachers could agree on rules of conduct fitting that definition.

It is interesting to note that the strap is used seldom if at all in some schools, while in others it is a regular form of punishment. This suggests the standard is not being defined by the individual teachers as the law states, but rather by policy dictated from the principal's office. It might be asked why the principals should be allowed to usurp this authority. The School Board would seem to have a better claim to make such decisions.

The question is one that needs fuller investigation at the provincial level. The time may have come to take another searching look at the goals and methods of education in the province. Many people believed the last such examination — the Chant Report — was already outdated when it appeared in 1960 and much has happened in the field since then. The Chant Report's emphasis on the so-called traditional values in education makes musty reading when compared with the recent study carried out in Ontario. On the question of discipline the Ontario report states flatly: "The application of punishment in the area of behavioral learning is no more defensible than its application in any other area of learning."

One of the Greater Victoria trustees who spoke in favor of retaining corporal punishment said allowances should be made for teachers who sometimes use the strap in exasperation on a balky student. "We have got to accept the fact that teachers are human," he said. It might be better to emphasize that our children are human too.

Commission on the Track

THE TRANSPORT COMMISSION made the right decision this week when it ordered the CPR not to discontinue the passenger service on the E and N line until a full study has been made. A number of protests have been made against the company's bid to drop the run on October 1 and now the affected individuals and communities will have a chance to air their views.

There are a number of aspects to the problem. The company maintains that the service has not been well patronized and it should not be made to continue at a loss. However it has been pointed out that the CPR was given a large land grant on the Island in return for guaranteeing provision of transportation. The value of timber on the E and N lands was estimated more than a decade ago to be $108 millions. One of the questions to be decided by the Commission is the extent of the company's legal obligation under the original agreement.

Some of the arguments for retention of the service are too far-fetched to be seriously considered by the Commission. The plea that some communities would be "isolated" if the Island Highway were blocked is not a convincing one in view of possible air and sea links.

Other suggestions deserve more serious consideration. It has been pointed out that the CPR made little effort to advertise the service and many people were hardly aware of its existence. Tourists especially might be encouraged to take the scenic ride.

The present Dayliner timetable has also been criticized. Residents of up-Island communities would prefer to have the run start from Courtenay in the mornings and return at night so that they could shop or do business during the day in Nanaimo or Victoria.

And as traffic becomes more congested on the Island Highway frazzled motorists could turn back to the railroad for a more relaxing way to travel. "Bring back the railway" could become a popular cry.

U.S. Candidates: Irrelevant or Confused

THE United States presidential election campaign now is two weeks old and the remaining seven weeks hold little promise of proving more elevated or enlightening than the first two. True, there has been one unprecedented incident of nobility to date: A candidate publicly retracted a charge he had made against another candidate. This man of rare gallantry was Governor Spiro Agnew of Maryland running for vice-president on Republican Richard Nixon's ticket. He said that Democratic presidential candidate Hubert Humphrey, of all people, had been "squishy soft on communism over the years."

Purser

Mr. Nixon, who slapped the Communist label around freely for his earliest political gains and had been paying for it ever since, passed the word down the line not to start this sort of thing up again. The Republican leaders of both Houses of Congress proclaimed that there was no evidence for the charge and so Mr. Agnew duly rose at a public meeting and apologized.

Five Somersaults

"If I'd known I'd be cast as the Joe McCarthy of 1968, I'd have turned five somersaults to avoid saying it," he said. Although the question of his judgment remains (Did the governor think his statement would invite comparison with St. Francis of Assisi? the Washington Post asked on Sunday), all candidates will presumably be treated henceforth as equally opposed to the evil men in the Kremlin.

Now that everyone is safely wrapped up in the flag again, the campaign can turn to the solid issues at stake. But if it continues true to form, the issues will be drowned in a sea of slogans.

Take Vietnam, the one major issue on which Mr. Nixon and Mr. Humphrey could, if they wished, stake out clear and opposing policies. Neither has done so. Mr. Nixon has recited a list of administration sins: frittering away its military power in piecemeal escalation, refusing to take the people into its confidence, failure to understand the political aspects of the war and delay in preparing the South Vienamese to take over their own defence.

In his acceptance speech to the Republican national convention in Miami Beach, Mr. Nixon stressed the latter point — "de-Americanization" of the war — as part of his future policy, but he has not returned to it except in reference to the failures of the past.

Which Direction?

He has said little of anything. Keeping up military pressure is the right policy for the moment, he said, as a way of giving the enemy an incentive to talk peace. But this was open to re-evaluation; he did not say in which direction. Re-evaluation of the U.S. response was also possible if prolonged fruitless talks in Paris began to threaten the U.S. military position.

This could be taken to mean he is thinking more along lines of further escalation rather than de-escalation, but it is impossible to tell. His excuse for playing cagey is a plausible one: Anything he says between now and his taking office next Jan. 20 could jeopardize the incumbent president's conduct of the war and negotiations, but his general silence does not help the public make its choice.

Mr. Humphrey has been less silent. He has, in fact, been as loquacious on Vietnam as he has on most other subjects. But far from stating a policy, he has been caught in a welter of statements, contradictions and cross-contradictions that has made his entire campaign look silly. The pro-Humphrey Washington Post noted that "if you are going to have a calamity, you should have it at the beginning of a campaign," which suggests how desperately the Humphrey camp is reaching out for consolation.

Too Many Reversals

Mr. Humphrey began by suggesting that there could be a withdrawal of some American troops from Vietman late this year, or early next. His remarks were variously taken to be an expression of hope, an expectation, or even a prediction based on his inside knowledge as vice-president.

It certainly wasn't the latter, as President Johnson made clear the next day in a public speech when he stated that "no man can predict" when such withdrawals could take place.

The incident showed what Mr. Humphrey is up against: He is under pressure to show himself to be his own man on Vietnam, but if he tries it Mr. Johnson will undercut him, party candidate or not. Mr. Johnson no longer has anything to lose and is concerned with nothing but proving to history that he was right on Vietnam.

Humphrey proceeded to dig further into the trap. He stepped off a plane at Houston, Texas, and noticed a story in the local paper about the withdrawal of a U.S. unit from Vietnam. He went to his evening speaking engagement and waved the paper in front of the cameras as mute evidence that he had been right all along.

It later developed that the troop move was purely rotational and the unit was being replaced. Mr. Humphrey had to issue a statement acknowledging this the next morning. (His original comment had been only an expression of hope, it was later explained.)

More or less simultaneously with all this Mr. Humphrey was busy getting himself into and (unsuccessfully) out of still another controversy over Vietnam. He remarked casually that he could have accepted the minority plank on Vietnam at the party's Chicago convention, had it been passed. But the principal struggle at the convention had been between the majority plank, pushed by the Johnson-Humphrey forces and calling for a halt to the bombing of North Vietnam only under the most stringent conditions, and the minority plank, pushed by the McCarthy forces and demanding an unconditional halt to the bombing.

Why All the Fuss?

If Mr. Humphrey could have accepted the minority plank, what had all the fuss at Chicago been about? Explaining to reporters aboard his plane later, he said he had not been aware, when he spoke, of the extent of the difference between the two planks. The reporters present say they will never forget their astonishment at this unbelievable declaration by Mr. Humphrey, who later said that his statement about the minority plank had represented no change in his previous position.

So Mr. Nixon stands withdrawn and irrelevant, Mr. Humphrey stands trapped and confused and no one is any wiser for the behavior of either of them.

Majority Rights

London Free Press

One thing student extremists are likely to learn if they haven't already. That is that the moderates in the student body, those who at all times seek the reasonable approach of dialogue to university problems, have their rights too. So does the body of students who are just there to learn, before they set out to change the world. Those groups are in the majority. They are beginning to let the extremists know this.

FROM CALGARY — By JAMES H. GRAY

The Prairies Move to Halt Pollution

WHILE the rest of the country was taking river pollution as a necessary evil, Metro Winnipeg went out a few years ago to solve the problem. It expanded its treatment plant, put in a new settling lagoon system and cracked down on industries dumping refuse into the rivers. Now 90 per cent of the area sewage goes into the treatment system instead of into Red and Assiniboine Rivers. Only a decade ago, 60 per cent of the sewage was being dumped into the rivers untreated. Outside the Metro area the streams are still being polluted, but even here progress is being made. A sugar factory that once did as much damage as a city of 600,000 has installed its own system and now does not use the river. Other large industries, notably the packing plants, have been brought under rigid control.

Gray

Elsewhere on the prairies, the struggle against water pollution is making slow headway. But in all provinces the pressure is on and it is getting stronger. Thus the City of Saskatoon is under orders to get on with the construction of a $6,000,000 treatment plant. Calgary has a new treatment plant under construction as a result of provincial government orders.

In what must be one of the first cases of its kind in the west, an oil company in Turner Valley, south of Calgary, was hauled into court and fined $1,000 for permitting seepage from its plant to contaminate the water of Sheep Creek, a favorite stream of the fly fishermen.

On the other hand, no action has been taken against two Calgary oil refineries which for years have been so polluting the Bow River that fish taken below their plants are inedible.

Saskatoon this year has a brand new pollution-created problem which is none of its own making. The flow of water through the city in the Saskatchewan River has slowed to a trickle as a result of the construction of the Gardiner dam 70 miles upstream.

The run-off from the mountains into the South Saskatchewan was below normal this year. Much of it never got past the dam. The odor from the almost stagnant river became so bad that public agitation forced the Government to flush out the river.

Convert the Flow

Flushing the river bed in early August did cut down the odor for a while, but it did nothing much to reduce the algae growing along the river banks. So now the city is trying a brand new idea on for size — fill in the broad banks of the stream and convert the slow flowing river into a fast flowing creek.

That is one problem all prairie cities have with their rivers — they flow too slowly. The Red river level at Winnipeg is maintained in the summer by a downstream dam. Without the dam, the Red river would resemble a mud flat in summer. With the dam the flow is reduced sharply in dry years. There were times, 30 years ago, when the Red river acted as a dam across the mouth of the Assiniboine and actually backed up the waters of the Assiniboine.

In Saskatoon a troublesome sandbar juts out into the stream and acts as an algae trap. If somebody can figure out how to get rid of that sandbar there's a medal waiting for him. Only the sandbar prevents the citizens from having a unique, water-level, picnic park. The agitation for such a park is a significant indication of the change taking place in the attitudes of prairie people toward the rivers and their aesthetic potentialities. The Winnipeg attitude is catching on.

Looking Back

From the Times, Sept. 18, 1908.

Within a short time extensive works are to be located at Sidney Island for the manufacture of brick and tile. Some years ago the island, which is a few miles off Sidney, was purchased by George Courtenay. Since then he had made use of it largely as a place of outing. Recently, however, he conceived the plan of turning it to commercial purposes. There exist on the island large deposits of clay suitable for brick manufacture.

Spread the Cost

Last Wednesday evening I attended a meeting at Cloverdale School to hear an explanation of the proposed sewer by-law which will be put before Saanich voters on September 28.

The proposition seems clear and straightforward: to put into one entity the areas which are presently served by sewers under a variety of plans and schemes, along with those areas for which sewers are intended in the near future. Nevertheless there were objections voiced by a few, evidently within the originally-sewered area, who seemed under the impression that by "going it alone" and leaving others to do likewise, they would somehow retain an advantage over the rest of the municipality. Can anyone really believe that a service which is continuously required can be supplied by a fixed payment over a fixed period of say 15 or 20 years and then be cost-free after that?

Surely the whole reason for living in communities, for organizing municipalities, is to spread the cost of works needed for the general good over the whole group of people affected and so lessen the burden on any one individual or group of individuals at any one time.

Let's get out and support this by-law on September 28, then "Saanich" can mean something else than "the land of the septic tank!" — H. J. Page, 4432 Narvaez Crescent.

Schools Overcrowded

I wonder what has been gained for education by the recent agitation on the subject of corporal punishment. Why should my child, for instance, be allowed to disrupt thirty or more other children who have to share the same classroom? Or, for that matter, why should their teacher be monopolized by a child who has not yet learnt the meaning of the word no?

Your second leader of September 4 seems to argue general permissiveness as the basis for building responsibility. One need not look farther than university-age level to see where this can lead. Your front page headline of September 6 asks, "What is wrong with our schools?" They are overcrowded, as everyone should know, which involves teacher and pupils alike in a system of mass production no matter what fancy teaching methods are promoted to obscure this basic reality.

Classroom teachers are doing a great job at coping with very adverse conditions and are not deserving of the imputations of armchair critics as contained in your weekend magazine of September 7.—G. Gardner, 7090 Brentwood Drive, Brentwood Bay, B.C.

Unsmiling

We were surprised when we read "Mona Lisa falls victim to bid for French glory" in the September 6 issue of the Victoria Times.

In the weekly edition of "Le Monde" July 25-31 we had previously read three articles dealing with the larger number of rooms recently allotted to the museum which required its reorganization. Jean Couvreur explains how the paintings have been regrouped according to their different schools. About the Italian school he writes that "la place d'honneur" has been reserved to Mona Lisa.

Besides it is hard to believe that President de Gaulle is directly responsible for these new arrangements as your newspaper seems to infer. Such an article may sound sensational but we are afraid it is neither fair nor accurate.—B. Steel, J. Bourgues, University of Victoria.

Womb Mystery Studied

By STUART AUERBACH

NEW YORK — How does a mother carry an unborn child for nine months without rejecting it the way the body rejects other foreign organisms?

The answer to that secret of nature may hold the key to increased success in organ transplants, medical scientists meeting here reported the other day.

The embryo in the mother's womb is truly a foreign organism. It contains cells from both the mother and the father. In experiments on mice, embryo cells were rejected when transplanted from the womb into another part of the mother's body.

How Do They Work?

Groups working around the country identified at the second international congress of the transplantation society the different mechanisms that keep a mother from rejecting her embryo child.

But they said they still do not know exactly how the mechanisms work and the relative importance of each one.

No single factor is responsible, said Edward J. Breyere, a genetic-immunologist working at American University and Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington. Rather, "the collective action of several protective mechanisms" keep the mother from rejecting the fetus, he said.

The mother carrying a child, said Dr. R. L. Simmons of the University of Minnesota, is "such a nice successful graft. If we could understand why this is successful, we might know how to do other transplants."

Natural Barrier

Drs. G. B. Avery and C. V. Hunt of George Washington University identified the natural barrier that separates the mother's cells from those of the embryo as the trophoblast. These are the giant-sized cells that are the major components of the placenta, which surrounds the unborn child in the mother's womb.

The trophoblast, Avery said in an interview, contains nuclear matter from both mother and child.

Simmons said the trophoblast cells are covered with a "sticky" mucus that prevents the cells of the mother and the child from mixing.

In addition, Breyere reported, the mother's body develops a "tolerance" to cells from the unborn child. Breyere, who conducted his research with Wolfgang W. Sprenger, said this tolerance increases in the mother with each succeeding pregnancy.

"This natural tolerance plays an active role in the fetus's survival in its hostile environment," said Breyere.

Create Tolerance

Simmons, at a press conference, suggested two ways that more information about the phenomenon of natural tolerance and the trophoblast could help in future organ transplants:

● Doctors could create a "tolerance" in the recipient's body before a transplant by giving him injections composed of cellular matter from the donor. This tolerance would be created the same way vaccines create a tolerance to diseases such as influenza or measles.

● Before the transplant, the organ to go into a recipient's body could be coated with the same mucus that allows the trophoblast to keep the mother's and the embryo's cells separate.

STORY-BOOK Isle of Man is in the midst of a diplomatic battle of strength with the United Kingdom. Manxmen generally are content to eke out a quiet living by fishing and a little farming but they have a number of grievances against the British. This pastoral scene is near the village of Cregneash.

Militant Manx Meet Britain at Summit

By DAVID PERMAN

LONDON — Nationalism does not wear a pretty face these days. It is with a scowl and a grim set of the jaw that gun-toting basques, Black Panthers, the Scottish National Party and the Free Wales Army go about their business of seeking their autonomy.

It's a far cry from the folksy charm of nationalism as we used to picture it—as in those Peter Ustinov films where non-violent, mini-republics outwit the Great Powers by the sole use of their peasant guile. But in one place at least Ustinovian nationalism lives on.

CHARLES KERRUISH
. . . House of Keys speaker

For the past few years, the Isle of Man (population 50,000) has been waging a non-violent war of independence against the United Kingdom (population 50 million). A year ago the Manxmen threatened to take their grievances to the United Nations.

★ ★ ★

Such head-on tactics have now been put aside and the Manxmen's ancient parliament, the Tynwald, is now concentrating on gaining its ends by a series of small constitutional advances.

This summer, the Isle of Man issued its first passports. On these documents the British coat of arms is replaced by the Manx emblem of three armor-plated legs together with the emblem Quocunque Jeceris Stabit ("Whichever way you throw it it stands up").

Then last week the Manx government ordered the Royal Navy to arrest two Scottish trawlers which were fishing in Manx territorial waters. An official of the Manx was taken to protect the local drift-net fishermen. "There is no question of nationalism with this one," he added.

But this was the first time that the Royal Navy had been called in to enforce a law promulgated in 1965, and the Scottish trawlermen have protested that they have always fished close in to the Isle of Man.

The likely explanation for enforcing a three-year-old law now is that this week the Manx government meets the British government in a crucial set of talks. These talks are concerned with the real issue between the town of Douglas and London—not the trappings of independence like passports, flags and fishing rights—and this concerns commercial radio.

★ ★ ★

Last year, the British government introduced legislation to ban the "pop pirates," which had been putting out a mixture of pop music and advertising from ships and disused wartime forts around the coasts of Britain. One of these pop pirates, however, was anchored in Manx territorial waters and when the Tynwald refused to endorse the law of Westminster, the British government used other means to get the pop pirate out of the water.

This was more than a blow to the Manxmen's self esteem, for their own pop pirate station had given the island's tourism a great deal of free advertising.

Radio Caroline North, as the pirate was called, could be heard over much of the British mainland, unlike the municipal Manx radio, also a commercial station, which is forbidden by London to install a transmitter capable of reaching the mainland.

In London the Manx delegation will again be asking the British postmaster-general to allow them to install a more powerful transmitter. They are unlikely to succeed. Apart from its ideological objections to commercial radio, the Labor government in London is aware that if it granted the Manx request it would be giving the British record companies a base from which they could operate over the whole of Britain.

The Manxmen will hardly take a refusal lying down. Like the aggrieved citizens of one of Ustinov's fantasy states, they will no doubt go back to another look at their ancient rights enshrined in the Tynwald, which they claim is an older parliament than Westminster itself.

★ ★ ★

The island is a curious mixture of modern business opportunism and antique customs. On the farmsteads around Snaefell, the local mountain, the crops are still rotated in a five-year schedule which British farming dispensed with long ago; the farm laborers renew their contracts at Holland-tide on Nov. 1; tailless hens, which together with the more famous tailless Manx cat are known as "rumpies," still brood over uneconomic batches of turkey eggs.

Yet down on the coast there are all the modern trappings of a tourist economy—the casino, the only legal one open to the general public in Britain, the hotels and the motorcycle races.

In the House of Keys, the elected part of the Tynwald, the local businessmen are well represented. There are now moves afoot to legalize betting shops in the island and to introduce duty-free drink and cigarettes, as incentives to bring the tourists and other visitors in. And yet there are only five elected members in the island's cabinet of 12.

It is, however, this combination of modern business sense and ancient custom that has given the Manxmen the strength to take on Great Britain. Their emblem is after all three legs, and whichever way you throw them they will stand up.

Swedish Youth Revolting Too

By ROLAND HUNTFORD

STOCKHOLM — Swedish students are heading for revolt this autumn. The particular cause of unrest is a reform which the Ministry of Education is preparing to impose on all universities.

The change will deprive Swedish undergraduates of their time-honored right to arrange their studies at will, and limit their choice to a certain number of officially-approved combinations of courses. This may not affect medical and engineering students, who have set curricula, but it is likely to disturb those in the arts and science faculties, who value their freedom to read more or less what subjects they like.

The idea behind the reform is to supply the Swedish labor market with exactly those products of higher education which it requires. Each new curriculum is intended to feed a corresponding profession. The arts faculties, for example, will be considered almost exclusively suppliers of teachers, and courses will be arranged in order to satisfy the specifications of the school system.

Must Specialize

In other words, students will be forced to specialize at the outset of their university careers, and there will be no room for the man who wants to take this or that subject because he likes it, and who is willing to let his future profession emerge with time after graduation.

All sections of student opinion have reacted against what they consider to be regimentation. Both conservative and ultraradical students have condemned the change, although for different reasons. The first dislike what they call State interference in academic freedom; the latter accuse big business and high finance of buying up the universities for their own nefarious ends.

But industrialists have strongly criticised the new scheme. Their main objections are that it is impossible to predict future professional requirements, and that restricted studies could easily produce misfits, as well as shortages and gluts in different occupations during the years to come.

Backed By Teachers

The students have been supported by their teachers in their attack on the proposed reform. "They are quite right in protesting" said Professor Gunnar Bjork, an internationally known surgeon, and by no means a Leftist. "They are fighting against the intrusion of bureaucracy. It is the greatest danger we have to face."

Staff and students at most Swedish universities have worked together on reasoned criticism of the new scheme, to be presented to the government in the hope of obtaining some modifications.

Students at Gothenburg were so incensed, that they simply said "No."

The most articulate criticism of the reform has come from sociology students, who say that the direction of studies will result in personality changes. Their view is confirmed by theoreticians of the Social Democratic government, which introduced the reform. The aim of education, according to the party ideologists, is to create the new men for the society of the future, a thoroughly Marxist point of view.

Too Many Students

But the authorities defend their actions by saying that the rocketing demands for higher education have necessitated drastic action. In the past four years the number of university students in Sweden has risen from 60,000 to over 100,000, and the only way to avoid overcrowded lecture rooms, runs the argument, is to distribute students evenly among the available courses.

As it is, the competition to enter certain closed faculties is now very intense. Admission to engineering, medicine and the political sciences depends on success in school-leaving examinations. Without first-class results, acceptance for these courses is out of the question.

Need High Ranking

In some faculties, new students must have come within the first half of national results to have a chance of entry. Only 900 of the 1,500 applicants could be accepted this term for an economics course at Uppsala University.

Several educationists have seriously advocated the compulsory direction of students into courses most useful "to society." A cabinet minister has suggested that if personal inclination is found to stand in the way, then allocation to courses ought to be decided by drawing lots. He was not joking.

Utilitarian Motives

It is not only in higher education that utilitarian motives predominate. The whole Swedish school system has been reformed in the same way as the universities to supply the labour market of the future. A system of "streaming" ensures that whatever subjects a pupil may choose, he will nevertheless end up in a slot recognized by the labor market, as conceived by the civil servants. Curricula are to be fluid, and as the demand for various trades and professions is seen to alter, so subjects will be changed to meet the new conditions.

It is against this ultra-functional view of education that the students are reacting. Some feel so strongly about it that they are talking of occupation of their campuses. Swedes are notoriously submissive to authority, but perhaps there is a point beyond which even they cannot be pushed.

Makeup Makes Man In Today's Politics

By MAXINE CHESHIRE

WASHINGTON — At 57, and with all he has to worry about, Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey could be expected to show more than a few grey hairs.

Yet his head continues to gleam with a dark youthful gloss that has begun to intrigue political reporters who have been following him on this campaign.

Finally one well-known male journalist got curious enough recently to put the question bluntly to an aide: Does the candidate dye his hair?

"Of course not," snapped the loyal Humphrey staffer.

But there were a few veteran members of the Capitol Hill press corps who seemed to remember when a younger Humphrey showed a distinguished silvering at the temples.

●

Sure enough, an examination of old HHH photographs shows some telltale sprinkles of grey that seem to have disappeared.

The vice-president's secret isn't known. But many distinguished politicians in Washington patronize a hair-coloring expert who is hidden away on Capitol Hill. He's not in the senate barber shop, where his ministrations would be too public and too conspicuous. He works in the massage room. His technique he keeps to himself.

"It is a top-secret formula I use," he boasts. "Whatever color a senator used to have I can match perfectly and no one will ever know .. not ever ... I blend it so perfectly sometimes their wives don't know."

He is just as secretive about his clientele as he is in indentifying the preparation with which he works his magic.

But one senator who doesn't mind showing his years claims any number of his colleagues go there. "You'd be surprised!" he chortles. "You'd be surprised!"

If it is any consolation to Humphrey supporters Republican Richard Nixon's barber is also not above suspicion.

●

Nixon, too, at 55, still seems to retain the same head of hair he displayed in the House of Representatives 20 years ago. Reporters who swear they have detected a difference in coloration from week to week haven't been able to prove it satifactorily with old photographs.

Both Humphrey and Nixon are very much aware that this is what one political reporter called a "cosemetic campaign". The two candidates and their running mates are on camera so often these days that they have both taken to wearing their television makeup much of the time.

●

Reporters accompanying them at first reasoned that the candidates were simply saving time between television taping sessions by staying in makeup as they moved around on a busy schedule of public appearances.

Recently, however, some observers in the news media have decided that both candidates may be easing into all-day makeup jobs.

Shhhh. Mumm's the Word at the PM's House

By GEORGE BAIN
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — The Prime Minister entertained some businessmen at dinner at 24 Sussex Drive the other night. The guest list was kept secret (a spokesman said) so as to avoid embarrassing those who may not be invited back to a second gathering that may be held, or who weren't invited at all.

I rang the bell and the host himself answered. He was wearing a domino.

●

"We'll all be wearing them," he said, sensing my question. "I hope you don't mind. But, I've invited you and I haven't invited, well, John Doe, of Beep-Beep Ltd. If word got back to him, he'd be hurt."

"It's all right with me," I said. "But isn't he going to know he wasn't invited? I mean, if he isn't here, won't he know it?"

"The thing," he said, "is that people don't mind not being invited to a party they don't know who has been invited to. It's only when they see a list and can say, 'How come he invited that bum when he didn't invite me?' that there's trouble."

"I wouldn't want John Doe saying that you'd invited a bum like me and not him," I said.

"Nothing personal," he said. "I've got a whole roomful of bums in there."

"Okay'," I said, "let's go in and meet them."

"First," he said, "would you mind raising your right hand and repeating after me . . .?"

"You're swearing me into the Cabinet?" I said.

"I'm swearing you into the living room," he said.

He rattled off the oath, "On my honor, I promise not to divulge the fact that I was at dinner here, nor the names of my fellow guests, if they should become known to me, or any information about the talk that took place."

"I do," I said

"You do," he said. "or, rather, you don't, on pain of being incarcerated in the cell we have set aside for Cabinet ministers who blab."

●

"I couldn't stand being locked up with a Cabinet minister," I said. "It would be degrading."

He led the way in. Indicating the masked guests, he said:

"You don't know everyone here, so I won't bother to introduce you; I want to keep it that way. What will you have to drink?"

"Should I name it," I said, "or would you prefer me to go behind the potted palm and pour my own?"

"You're trying to make something ridiculous of a serious matter," he said. "It's unbecoming."

He poured a thimbleful of whisky.

"It's small, I admit, but I don't want to loosen your tongue. Careless talk, you know," he said, meaningfully.

"You could serve champagne," I said ,"and then tell us, 'Mumm's the word.' "

Our host said he had given the servants the night off in case one of them should recognize a guest.

"The parlormaid is a holdover from the Diefenbaker regime," he said. "We haven't finished running her security check yet."

He produced several packages of wieners and some pointed sticks and we toasted the wieners over the fire. Afterwards there were marshmallows, which we also toasted, and cocoa made with hot water from the tap in the downstairs washroom.

We talked about wage and price restraints until, finally, one of the guest said, "I don't know what the rest of you think, but at Canada Packers . . ."

●

At that, our host sounded a blast on a small whistle and the room was filled with men identifiable by their short haircuts as RCMP agents

"He blew his cover" said our host, as the man was taken away, kicking and protesting.

As we left, he said, "I hope you won't mind if you're not invited back?"

"Hell, no," I said "This has been a fete worse than death."

Neon-Imbrex Offer

Neon Products of Canada Ltd. said today its formal offer to acquire all 888,750 common shares of Imbrex Ltd. has been extended to 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Neon president James A. Pattison of Vancouver said that as of Sunday, the original expiry date, Neon had acquired 89.1 per cent of the Imbrex shares.

The deal is conditional on acceptance of holders of at least 90 per cent of the Imbrex shares outstanding.

The offer calls for .46 of each Neon common share to be exchanged for each Imbrex share.

Dennison Mines Ltd.

The Japanese electric power industry said today it has signed a contract with Dennison Mines Ltd. of Toronto for joint development of uranium resources in Canada and the United States.

The contract calls for formation of a joint Japanese-Canadian firm if promising uranium ore deposits are discovered, a spokesman said.

Nine Japanese electric power firms and the Canadian firm are to explore uranium ore deposits in British Columbia and Colorado for the next six years.

They have a contract to sell 10,500 short tons of uranium ore in Japan.

Business Failures Dropped in 1967

TORONTO (CP) — The number of business failures decreased in 1967 compared to the previous year, but total liabilities increased, a Dun and Bradstreet of Canada Ltd. report shows.

The report listed 1,967 business failures in 1967, compared to 2,418 in 1966. Total liabilities of bankrupt companies were $215,000,000, compared to $174,000,000 the previous year.

The report indicates the substantial increase last year in liabilities was partly a result of an upsurge in bankruptcies of companies with debts of more than $1,000,000.

$250 for $100

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government guaranteed on Tuesday night to pay back investors $250 in 14 years for every $100 put into a new series of Canada Savings Bonds which will go on sale October 7.

The new savings bonds—which unlike regular bond issues for the financial market are always redeemable at full face value plus interest—will have an initial interest rate of 5¾ per cent a year, rising to 7 per cent.

A special compound interest feature of the savings bonds will pay investors 2½ times their purchase value if they defer cashing any interest coupons until the bonds mature Nov. 1, 1982.

The Centennial series of Canada Savings Bonds offered in the fall of 1966 contained the first double-your-money feature for investors who were willing to wait 13 years. That series established a record sale of $2,422 billion.

CASHED THEM IN

Last year's Canada Savings Bonds, with the same compound interest feature, did not sell quite so well, and holders last winter and spring cashed them in rapidly to reinvest the funds in other, better-paying securities.

The financial community expected the government would make an especially attractive offer this fall in order to sell another edition of the Canada Savings Bonds. The 2½-times return in 14 years was the result.

Gaglardi Says He's Investment Counsel to Industry

VANCOUVER (CP) —Former highways minister Phil Gaglardi said Tuesday he is acting as an adviser to people who want to invest in British Columbia.

He said in an interview that the areas in which he is advising include the pulp, lumber, mining and agricultural industries.

Asked if there are any specific developments he is working on, Mr. Gaglardi, now a minister without portfolio, replied: "Nothing I'd like to talk about."

"I'm giving advice and helping out individuals interested in investing in B.C.—the same as I always have."

"I'm still a minister of the Crown and I have a lot of contacts so I do whatever I can to help out people," he said.

Act Would Kill Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has informed Japan that President Johnson cannot veto legislation to restrict log exports to Japan for the next three years, as Japan asked.

The restrictions were added as an amendment to the $1.9 billion foreign aid authorization bill. A veto of the log restriction would thus kill the entire foreign authorization measure for the current year.

Diplomatic sources noted that Japan had sent two protests to the U.S., each urging Johnson not to sign the restrictions on log exports.

Tokyo reports said that if the Japanese appeal were ignored, the government of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato would have to study what retaliatory measures could be taken.

WHEAT BOYCOTT

Since Sen. Wayne Morse (D—Ore.) was the one who introduced the restriction on Japanese logs, sources indicated Japan may consider a boycott on Oregon wheat, a major export to Japan.

U.S. officials said the U.S. government has expressed hope that the two countries can avoid starting down the path of reciprocal trade retaliation.

Japanese diplomatic sources said it is preferable to have voluntary restrictions rather than mandatory restrictions regulating trade between the two countries.

Copper Smelter Prospect Glows

The provincial government's longstanding penny per pound subsidy offer for anyone establishing a copper smelter may soon have a taker.

Speculation concerning a B.C. copper smelter gained weight Tuesday with word from London, where Premier Bennett said he intends to talk to businessmen on possible British investment in a smelter, and development of other mineral resources.

A recent government mining reserve set aside a parcel of land in the Highland Valley where geologists estimate there may be as much as 1 billion tons of copper ore in the ground.

Mines Minister Frank Richter revealed the reserve was placed on 7,500 acres in the valley, about 20 miles southeast of Ashcroft, as a tailings pond dump for a triumvirate of big copper mining companies operating in the area.

The trio—Bethlehem Copper Corporation, Lornex Mining Ltd. and Valley Copper Mines Ltd.—have formed a partnership on establishing the joint tailings disposal which will have a pipeline supply of water brought to the 5,000-foot elevation pond.

Mr. Richter said the operation could handle up to 50,000 tons of tailings—mining waste—each day.

Although Mr. Richter would make no further comment, there is some speculation that the new development increases the likelihood that the Highland Valley will become the site of a copper smelter which the government has sought for many years.

Under the 1961 Copper Bounty Act, the province offers a subsidy of a penny per pound up to a maximum grant of $2.5 million spread over 10 years to any person or firm seeking help in establishing a smelter within the province to refine copper ore.

Bethlehem Copper is the only producer of the three firms so far, digging nearly 15,000 tons of raw ore daily from its claims.

But Lornex has authorized production feasibility testing on its estimated 330-million-ton ore body of copper and molybdenum and Valley Copper currently is carrying out proving tests on what has been reported as potentially the largest copper ore body so far discovered in B.C.

Pact Makes Some Cars Cheaper Here

OTTAWA (CP) — If you shop carefully, Trade Minister Pepin said in the Commons Tuesday, you can buy some makes of cars cheaper in Canada than the same models in the U.S.

"Where? Where?" shouted the opposition.

Pepin said in reply to David Lewis, NDP Parliamentary leader, the difference in Canadian and U.S. car prices under the auto agreement between the two countries has been reduced to about 3 per cent from 8 per cent.

PRICE INCREASE

Lewis said Chrysler of the U.S. has announced an increase in 1969 car prices and asked that Pepin tell the Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. firms not to increase Canadian prices.

Pepin said one purpose of the agreement was to narrow the price differences and this had been done to a great extent in the last three or four years. Some cars now were selling at the same prices in Canada and the U.S. and some Canadian cars were cheaper.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Planning Pays Off

Estate planning is not a tax avoidance device for the wealthy. It is a personal financial program which everyone can use to help them to deal with their own affairs.

A well-considered estate plan may quite properly minimize estate tax and succession duty, and it may also reduce, or postpone, current income taxes, but tax savings should never be the sole object.

The purpose of an estate plan should be to arrange a man's assets, liabilities, income, and expenses so that they produce the most effective benefit for himself and his family during his lifetime, and continuing benefit and protection for his heirs and dependents after his death.

There are many factors which must be considered in order to accomplish this general purpose, and the relative importance of these factors is different for each individual.

Ordinarily, a man wants to retain control of his financial affairs during his lifetime. This is quite normal but it does not necessarily follow that it is wise to hold everything in his own name and then, at death, thrust it all at once into the hands of his beneficiaries.

When people who have never learned how to deal with money are suddenly faced with a large amount they usually either hoard it or squander it. They rarely acquire sudden financial acumen. One way for a man to overcome this problem is to transfer, during his lifetime, some of the ownership and financial control into the hands of his beneficiaries who will eventually receive it.

Such transfers would probably also obtain the ancillary advantage of reducing estate tax and duty but if that were the primary object it would be simpler to merely leave the whole estate by will to a charity and, thus, escape substantially all death duties.

SIMPLICITY

Simplicity is an essential consideration for any estate plan. It must be put into effect by the individual concerned and if they cannot understand it the purpose is almost certain to fail.

Liquidity is too often the only matter for which the need is recognized. But, even though it may be recognized, it is usually grossly over-provided or under-provided. At death there must be sufficient realizable assets to meet current debts, taxes, probate fees, and still leave adequate funds, quickly available, to allow the dependents to continue their own lives.

Life insurance is one obvious answer to this need for liquidity but if the man owns the life insurance policy it would, to some extent, be included in the assets of the estate and incur more taxes regardless of the fact that the proceeds may be paid directly to his widow.

Township Princess Changes Personality; Granby Tenants Emerging as Landlords

Joseph MacSween of the Montreal bureau of The Canadian Press, in this article on grassroots Quebec, writes of a new, emerging face in urban-rural Shefford County.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

GRANBY, Que. (CP) — The priest glanced outside to where some youths ogled his snappy sports car.

"Maturity used to mean stability," he said. "Now it means capacity to adapt. Get ready for more change."

The young Roman Catholic clergyman's lively attitude seemed typical of Quebec today. A priestly Pierre Elliott Trudeau? He shouted with laughter.

"Education is the key to our situation," said another authority. "The school population is leaping. We haven't reached the crest."

"We're an American-type town," said Mayor Paul-O. Trepanier. "We live big. The farm people, too, with their TV. They look and see and think and want."

DEMAND FOR CHANGES

Demand for change is in the air in Granby, "princess of the Eastern Townships," and surrounding Shefford County where the new face of Quebec is emerging in urban-rural microcosm. As always, change brings spasms of pain.

Change embraces not only politics and economics but the rising and sometimes baffling expectations of youth in an age as chaotic here as elsewhere.

"We must help the young to respect the adults," said the priest, Rev. Andre Gaudreau, 31. "And we must give them some challenge for the future, particularly opportunity in the economic field."

To the visitor, Shefford is an altogether agreeable experience only half an hour by new super-highway from Montreal. The big-city bustle of Rue Principale, Granby's main street, is offset by broad boulevards, peaceful parks and splashing fountains.

GRANBY GROWS

Granby now counts 34,000 inhabitants—proprietors outnumbering tenants—and 81 "principal" industries, notably textiles but including many diversified plants, plus the biggest milk processor in Canada, a co-operative. More than 100 Shefford County farmers took in an average of $15,500 in income last year, although the general farm income was much lower.

The farms of Shefford, which has a population of 69,550—a little more than one per cent of Quebec's total—are spread around villages of lingering charm with such names as Bethany and Bonsecours, Canaan and Khartoum. Occasional roadside shrines impart serenity. In the distance, a farm girl in a sunsuit drives a modern tractor. Ayrshire and Holstein cattle drowse beside the orchards.

CITY SLOWS DOWN

It is hardly a depressed picture as the term is generally known. Yet Granby itself has lost steam in terms of employment and construction. It has attracted only one major industry since 1960.

Shefford was one of 14 Quebec constituencies voting Creditiste in the June 25 federal election, cutting into Prime Minister Trudeau's victory in his native province.

What are the causes of discontent? Quebec nationalism? Is the constitution to blame?

A reporter on week-long rounds heard little about nationalism or the constitution, and nothing of separatism. One long-time observer did point out that by now it goes without saying French-Canadians demand and expect equality.

Education lacks. Unemployment and production slowdowns. High taxes. Low wages. Need for new industries. Alleged stagnation at city hall. Protection against cut-price imports. Need for bigger farms and farm loans. Low produce prices. These were the topics underlined. Not sensational matters, but crucial locally—and in some cases nationally.

Conditions and attitudes vary from urban to rural sections, and this was reflected in the June vote. Granby and Waterloo—the second largest town—went Liberal but were overwhelmed by the rural Creditiste swing. The seat had been Liberal in the previous Parliament.

LANGUAGE CHANGES

In conversation, the citizens discuss their problems in the same workaday terms as their compatriots outside Quebec, except that they usually say their piece in French. More and more they say it in French because the population now is overwhelmingly French in this one-time English-language area.

French-Canadians with English names are common in the rolling hills of the Eastern Townships, settled by United Empire Loyalists and often described by such notable sons as Premier Daniel Johnson as a happy laboratory of racial relations.

Now the French-language majority in Shefford is placed as high as 96 per cent, though the English-speaking group is still powerful in industry.

EDUCATION TOP TOPIC

The topic of education leaps to the lips everywhere in discussion of the economic situation and political protest. A jolting analysis last year showed that—on 1961 census figures—between 60 and 70 per cent of Shefford's working population had seventh grade or less, fifth-grade maximum in the case of many farmers.

The massive report, entitled Operation Depart—roughly, Operation Takeoff—prepared by a committee under Roland Gagne, chief editor of the daily newspaper La Voix de l'Est, said Granby area could not attain its potentially brilliant future unless citizens achieved the scholastic and professional education needed for modern industry.

In line with its recommendations, nearly 2,000 adults took academic, retraining and technical courses last winter, representing about 10 per cent of the work force, and the number is expected to grow to 5,000 in two or three years. Regional high school enrolment has nearly doubled since 1963. School construction is booming.

Whatever the promise of the future, the report underlined the depressing fact that national revenue department statistics published last year ranked Granby 85th in average wage among 88 towns chosen for special study.

What is the detailed picture?

PRICE IS CRITICAL

Mr. Trepanier, the mayor who was also Progressive Conservative candidate in June, said a spot check of 919 workers—a "good cross-section"—showed 70 per cent with a net income of $80 weekly or less.

The average is low, a manufacturers' spokesman explained, because of the high proportion of Granby's industries operating in highly competitive fields. Price was to a critical degree the selling point by which such industry lives or dies in the market place, and this tended to hold down wages.

SOME QUIT LAND

On the rural scene, provincial agronomist J. M. A. St. Denis estimated net farm income at $3,000 to $3,500 annually in provincial Shefford County, which is somewhat smaller than the federal riding and has 1,720 farms. Some 225 farmers had quit the land since 1961.

Approximately 85 per cent of the farmers deal in milk in this section of Quebec's "bassin laitier" or milk basin. A few have more than 100 cows. Some 350 work full-time in towns, though living and doing some work on the land. Regarding mechanization, "if we take Ontario as 100 per cent, this area is about 85 per cent," said Mr. St. Denis.

The Co-operative Agricole de Granby spells big business in any language. As a matter of interest, it has a packing plant on the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan, or Formosa, ready to jump into business in mainland China if the chance ever offers.

Experts emphasized in interviews that further reduction of farms is inevitable here as elsewhere in Canada, and the surviving farmers will be those who can increase production—the specialists. The farmers needed greater credit facilities for mechanization and for "consolidation"—purchase of neighboring farms.

One long-time observer said matters such as these are exercising the minds of his fellow French-Canadians rather than the constitution. Separatist sentiment had never been strong here, and special status for Quebec was still a nebulous concept to many folk.

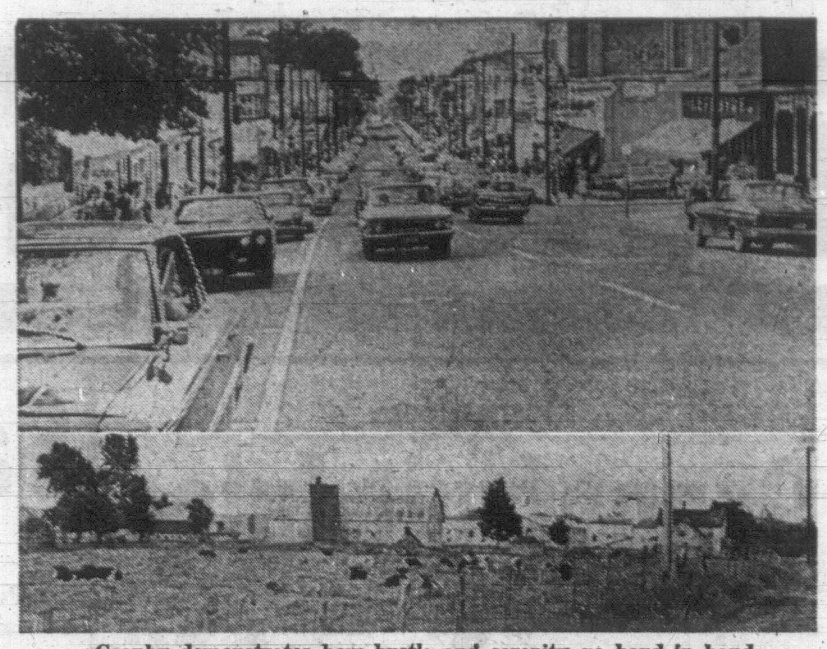
Mr. Trepanier, former president of the Quebec Progressive Conservative Association, is an ardent campaigner for a new constitution ensuring French-Canadian rights.

He said, however, he is not only convinced of the survival of Canada but feels it can become one of the six greatest industrial countries of the world by the end of the present century. While stating he will battle for his views within his own party, and that he differs flatly from Mr. Trudeau's hard-line policy, he declared:

"We must all work hard to make Canada come true."

An "outside" view was given by George Hughes, American textiles executive who has lived here 11 years:

"The French-Canadians don't want to opt out of anything. They want to get in. They don't want to carry the clubs. They want to play golf."



Granby demonstrates how bustle and serenity go hand in hand.

$12,000,000 Suit Filed On Kennedys

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — An associate of Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa filed a $12,000,000 suit in Federal Court Tuesday against the parents of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy, accusing them of conspiring through their sons to deprive him of his "honor, his health, his wealth and his mind."

Banjamin Dranow, former Minneapolis businesman who was sentenced to jail with Hoffa in 1964, filed the suit by mail from the U.S. Penitentiary at McNeil Island, Wash.

Dranow and Hoffa were sentenced to five years in prison for conspiracy to milk the Teamsters' pension fund of $25,000,000 through phony loan applications.

Kennedy was the U.S. attorney general at the time of the trial.

In his suit, Dranow contends that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy "directed their sons, their sons-in-law, their agents and their press agents, to set out a conspiracy" to deprive him of his "honor, his health, his wealth and his mind."

Still Rumbling The Chief Is 73

OTTAWA (CP) — A flashing-eyed John Diefenbaker celebrated his 73rd birthday today and had bad news for Liberals.

"I've been in Parliament only 28½ years," said the former Conservative prime minister in an interview. He put heavy stress on the "only."

"There may be snow on the roof but that doesn't mean that the fire in the furnace has gone out."

Mr. Diefenbaker added: "I'm enjoying myself immensely and I never felt better."

He started his birthday by taking his golden retriever Happy for a three-mile walk at 5:45 a.m.

His office desk overflowed with birthday cards and telegrams. Many friends dropped by to say "happy birthday."

"I can't believe I've had so much happiness in my life," he said.

"If I had it to do over again, I wouldn't change a thing."

Mr. Diefenbaker had some of his usual sharp comments to make about parliamentary life.

For one thing, he said, he is becoming more distressed about the reading of speeches in the Commons.

"I don't want to see Parliament reduced to an essay contest.

"There is no cross-fire any more. Parliament to live must have the clash of opinions, interruptions, embarrassment.

"There is nothing more degrading to Parliament than the reading of speeches.

"If things keep on as they are, we might as well adopt the U.S. Congressional system of simply tabling speeches."

The interview was interrupted momentarily when his secretary brought in some roses, a gift from the Commons protective staff. They had come from the garden of one of the staff.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Prime Minister Trudeau has silenced the cabinet.

"Why, a cabinet minister is mortified when he is asked a question," he said. "He has to get permission to answer it."

Incumbents Win Wash. Primaries

SEATTLE (AP) — The state's eight members of Congress won in Tuesday's primary election, but some feared nemesis in November.

The combined Republican vote in three congressional districts, coupled with the strong statewide slate the GOP will field, spelled trouble for Democratic reps. Lloyd Meeds, Thomas Foley and Floyd Hicks.

And while Sen. Warren Magnuson piled up a substantial margin over the Republican who will oppose him in the general election, the state's senior senator has not forgotten he won his fourth consecutive term in 1962 by only 45,000 votes. State Sen. Jack Metcalf won Tuesday's GOP nomination handily.

8,100 Signatures

VANCOUVER (CP) — A total of 8,100 signatures have been collected so far on a petition demanding stiffer penalties for drinking drivers. Robert Malkin says his Action for Responsible Driving Committee hopes to collect 20,000 signatures on two petitions — one for the federal government and the other for the provincial government.

Bennett Woos Business

LONDON (CP) — Premier Bennett entertained more than 100 guests at a London reception Tuesday and said he wants to "create goodwill and business" for his province here.

That also was his purpose during visits to The Netherlands, Austia, Spain and Portugal earlier in his current European tour, the premier said in an interview.

He made particular mention of efforts to drum up investment in British Columbia's forest and metal resources.

As part of attempts to promote sale of more British products in B.C., British officials and businessmen promised substantial participation in the International Trade Fair planned for Vancouver in 1971, said Bennett.

"The British government promised its full co-operation and British industries will have the largest exhibition at the fair," he added.

Since he came here from Portugal Monday, Bennett has met with George Thomson, Britiain's secretary for Commonwealth affairs; Lord Brown, minister of state at the board of trade, and Canada's high commissioner, Charles Ritchie.

The B.C. leader left Canada for Europe, Aug. 31, and returns home Sept. 19.

But before heading west again, he plans to have talks with businessmen here about possible British investment in a new copper smelter for B.C. as well as in development of other mineral resources in his province.

On the premier's schedule too are efforts to generate interest among additional British paper companies in development of British Columbia's pulp and paper industry, along the lines of current activities undertaken in the province by the London-based Reed Paper Group Ltd.

Among Bennett's Tuesday guests at B.C. House here was the Canadian-born publisher Lord Thompson of Fleet.

"He's a real empire man," said the premier about Thomson.

Dozens of other businessmen attended the reception, as did the provincial agent-general in London, Earle Westwood.

COVERAGE of the next Alberta provincial legislature by live radio and television will be sought by Opposition Leader Peter Lougheed. The Progressive Conservtive leader said the public should be aware of what is going on in the legislature.

Monetary Policy Change Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Chamber of Commerce urged the federal government Tuesday that Canada negotiate a higher level of monetary reserves.

In a brief to the finance and national revenue minister, the chamber's executive council said it "has been concerned for some time" with the restraints placed on the exercise of a flexible Canadian monetary policy.

It said these restraints result from adherence both to a fixed exchange rate and an upper limit on the level of monetary reserves fixed a number of years ago.

In recognition of the practical problems involved in a return to a floating exchange rate, the council recommended that agreement be sought with United States authorities to recognize a "level of reserves at an appropriately higher figure."

The growth of Canada's external trade in the last five years should be considered as well as the "precarious nature of international monetary stability."

The council headed by Chairman A. Olaf Wolff, called on the government to adopt a neutral monetary policy that would allow monetary resources to expand at roughly the same rate as the economy—that is, neither a restrictive nor a stimulative policy.

REVIEW SPENDING

It recommended a policy and a philosophy "strongly fostered by governments at all levels to review all present and projected expenditure proposals to ensure that government expenditures should be restrained."

The government was urged to turn over whenever possible to private enterprise, or at least to crown corporations, those functions of the government that would be "more efficiently operated as business entities."

Other recommendations urged:

—That the concept of the Canada Development Corp. be scrapped as it has not been proved that it will benefit the country.

—That a white paper rather than draft legislation be used to indicate the government's position on major tax changes and that closer co-operation asd liaison with other levels of government be actively sought.

—That while the government is committed to medical care, it does not have to push for complete integration until it can be effectively carried out and financed.

—That the government, with private enterprise through a well-planned program of public relations, educate the Canadian public to the dangers of inflation, the need for productivity growth and the damaging effects of immediate wage parity with the United States.

Crystal Ball Study Of B.C. Starts Soon

Crystal ball gazers, your province needs you.

The department of industrial development, trade and commerce today issued a clarion call for the help of all British Columbians in guessing the shape of the future.

It announced "economic outlook conferences" would be held in Vernon Oct. 23 and 24, Prince George Oct. 30 and 31, and Vancouver Jan. 8 and 9, open to all groups and individuals in the province without any registration fee.

The conferences will include introductory papers, floor discussion and panel discussion on "where do we go from here?" in agriculture, forestry, recreation and tourism, fishing, industrial development, external trade, manufacturing, merchandising and servicing.

"The purpose will not be to involve political or government policy but rather to look into the economic crystal ball with all groups participating," the announcement said.

"This is your opportunity to participate either as an individual or as a part of a representative group in developing focal points for greater economic and the resulting social development of this province as a part of a federal Canada and the world scene."

Anyone willing to lend his crystal ball for the effort should contact deputy industrial development minister Robert Renwick.

Primary Treatment Of Sewage 'Expected'

VANCOVER (CP) — British Columbia's health minister said Tuesday the province plans to establish air pollution standards and will expect sewage to receive at least primary treatment.

Ralph Loffmark told the Associated Health Boards of British Columbia that air pollution standards, now being studied, will be straightforward—"but if we see smoking flues we propose to move."

The association's annual meeting passed a resolution asking the province to provide low-interest loans or grants to municipalities required to build facilities for pollution control.

Mr. Loffmark said that while the B.C. government plans "substantial relief" to property owners faced with excessive taxes for pollution control, the federal government must give "credit at fair rates."

He said this is because Ottawa's halting of provincial plans to participate in the Bank of B.C. has prevented the province from being able to ensure lower interest rates.

The association's request was one of several resolutions passed by delegates.

STANDARDS SOUGHT

Among others were requests for the province to set water quality standards for fresh and marine waters and instigation by the province of research into sewage treatment methods.

Mr. Loffmark said the province is concerned about pollution conditions on the Lwer Fraser River, Burrard Inlet and the southern shores of Vancouver Island.

"We look for a level of sewage treatment no less effective than primary treatment," the minister said. Plants couldn't be built overnight but deadlines would be set and regulations enforced.

One delegate asked about financing. Mr. Loffmark said the taxpayer will pay in the end but the problem is to find the fairest way. The province would help where mill rates were excessive.

Defeated was a resolution urging legislation under which doctors, nurses or laboratory technicians could take blood for alcohol tests without fear of legal actin from test subjects.

Delegates said the matter involved civil rights and was out of the board's field.

FLUORIDATION BACKED

Among approved resolutions were requests that it be made unlawful to transport pesticides in trucks used to move feedstuffs and that the government support flouridation of water supplies.

Among other convention developments:

—Dr. F. J. Hype of the Vancouver health department said 26 per cent of Indianapolis children have no tooth decay while the Vancouver figure is only 6.6; the difference was that the water in Indianapolis is fluoridated.

—E. R. Moxey, an opponent of compulsory fluoridation, said medical opinion on the safety of fluoridation is divided and many doctors and dentists kept quiet on the matter for professional reasons.

—Ald. Jack Gilmore of suburban Coquitlam said the high cost of dental surgery is depriving school children of needed attention. Such treatment would solve speech problems for many children.

—Edith Angle of the Skeena Regional Health Board said there's a disgraceful shortage of medical health officers and other professional staff in northern B.C.

Air Pollution Curbs Stressed

By JIM HUME
Times Staff Writer

VANCOUVER—Air pollution controls in British Columbia should not be delayed until the present moderate hazard gets out of hand.

Dr. John H. Smith, director of the division of occupational health, told delegates attending the annual conference of the B.C. Associated Boards of Health Tuesday that while the situation in B.C was not too serious at present, it could only grow worse without tighter controls.

"A control program should not be delayed until the situation grows worse," Dr. Smith said. "When the intolerable stage is reached the process of bringing back a healthy environment is both expensive and prolonged."

Dr. Smith added that if it was too difficult at this stage to establish a positive control program, then at least a consulting agency should be established to provide the finest technical advice available to both industry and the communities in which industry creates a health hazard.

HIS OWN OPINIONS

Dr. Smith stressed that he was advancing his own opinions, and not necessarily the opinions of the department for which he works.

He suggested, however, that British Columbia could well follow the examples being set in neighboring Washington and in New South Wales.

In Washington the federal government provides a grant of three dollars for every dollar raised to combat air pollution by the various communities in the State. The state itself provides an additional 50 cents for every dollar raised.

"It works out to about seven cents per capita at the local level and provides hundreds of thousands of dollars for a community to combat the growing health hazard brought about by polluted air," Dr. Smith said.

INDUSTRY TAXED

In New South Wales the government has instituted legislation which forces industry tp pay a special licence fee ranging from $22.50 per year to $1,125 per year, depending on the size of the industrial plant involved.

"What we need in British Columbia is something similar to the Washington or New South Wales plan," Dr. Smith said. "Both are based on co-operation between the community and the industry and I think provide a much better solution than legislation which is based on punitive action rather than co-operation."

'Help Me Solve These Problems'

By STAFF REPORTER

VANCOUVER — Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Tuesday appealed to local health boards to help him solve two serious problems.

He told the B.C. Associated Board of Health annual convention that serious situations were being created by the lack of co-ordination between various agencies designed to help children from broken homes.

"One child may need help so far as special education goes, another needs assistance because the child suffers from a handicap," he said. "Some suffer from several needs. What I am trying to do is find a way of establishing some machinery which will eliminate the constant jogging from one agency to the next before answers can be found."

"You people can help considerably in establishing this machinery so that we can have one central clearing agency which, at the least, can provide all the information and asistance necesary."

HELP DEAF CHILD

The second call for assistance involved the handling of children born deaf or inflicted by deafness at an early age.

"The time has come to educate the public to the fact that a totally deaf child is as seriously, possibly more seriously, handicapped as a blind child.

"The imagination of the public is stirred by the blind child, but not by the deaf child. There is a tremendous need for us to help these childrn and I would urge you to throw whatever weight you can behind a campaign to acquaint the public of the plight.

Public Speaking Courses Planned

The Optimist Clubs of Victoria will sponsor a public speaking course for boys between the ages of 11 and 16.

Beginning in October, the classes will end in March with an oratorical competition.

Registration and first class will be held at Oaklands School, October 1st at 7:30 p.m.

Uvic Student Registration Rolls Along

An estimated 3,700 students have filed through the gymnasium on the University of Victoria campus, registration forms clutched tightly in hand, by late this afternoon.

By Friday afternoon, another 1,400 (by estimate) will have gone through the procedure of putting their signature to the university's rolls for the 1968-69 term.

The only exact daily registration figure to date is for the 1,233 third and fourth year students who went through on Monday.

The rest of the figures will come as the university's computer tallies up its daily intake of student cards.

1,800 FRESHMEN

By estimate, 1,800 freshmen will enrol, although application figures indicate a slightly higher number.

With luck, regiatrar Ronald Ferry and his staff will be able to move 1,300 students through the gym Thursday to complete freshman enrolment. Friday is devoted to the 200 graduate students expected.

The process of filling out course forms and registration slips has brought out a few grumblings from students a not uncommon occurrence for this week in September.

Some complaints have been made about course forms not being complete and about courses dropped from the offered list.

But the complaints don't appear to be serious. Not as serious as those at the University of Toronto which have several hundred students camping in tents on campus to emphasis the housing shortage there. Or the complaints that have students at Toronto's York University attempting to boycott registration to back demands for a greater share in university policy.

HOLDING STRATEGY

The Uvic students' council appears to be holding its strategy, waiting for the university's response to its briefs submitted during the summer.

Council president Frank Frketich said today his organization, for the present, is surveying its position and considering its demonds for a share in Uvic's government.

They are more concerned with Frosh Week, Sept. 23-28, the annual buffer between summer and the sudden start of classes next Monday.

Planned for the week are a series of band concerts at the Student Union Building during noon hours and dances at night.

The week will culminate in the annual log-saw Saturday, in which students cut up logs on the shore of Cadboro Bay, sell the wood and contribute their earnings to the United Appeal.

Friday night will be the Frosh dance and choosing of the Frosh Queen, selected for candidates picked by judges during the week.

Then studies begin in earnest.

MARIJUANA CROP RAZED

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Police discoverd eight to 10 acres of marijuana worth $1,000,000 growing in a corn field on a farm about 10 miles from Wilson Tuesday. Two men were arrested and the marijuana was burned.

School trustee Ted Wood, serving his second term on the Greater Victoria School Board, said Tuesday he will not seek re-election in December.

Mr. Wood joined the Public Utilities Commission last June. He has been appoined an inspector of motor vehicles and said he expects to be posted elsewhere soon.

MUNICIPALITIES FACE TOUGHER BARGAINING

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

VANCOUVER — British Columbia's 135 municipal governments were warned today to prepare for much tougher contract bargaining by their employees.

It was a double-barreled warning contained in the annual report to the 65th annual Union of B.C. Municipalities convention by the executive director, Theo Adams, and hammered home in a request for money to expand services, delivered by UBCM president Mayor Peter Wing of Kamloops.

NATION'S LARGEST

Mr. Adams reported that the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) is taking all steps possible to establish itself as the nation's largest union and is involved in a drive for more members, more locals and the expansion of present certificates.

"This activity has resulted inevitably in hard bargaining at the individual municipal level and we must expect this to continue during 1969," he said.

For the record, he said, 37 agreements were settled in 1968 by direct negotiation, 24 after a conciliation officer, 14 after conciliation boards, and one after a strike. Still unsettled at Aug. 31 were 16 agreements and one strike was in process. Another 10 were in negotiation and 39 contracts have more time to run.

Union apprehension over Bill 33, the Mediation Commision Act, aggravated conditions during bargaining, Mr. Adams said.

However, he said, the wise and prudent use of the act might well achieve a greater measure of labor-management peace than we have seen in recent years."

One important benefit could be that the whole atmosphere of collective bargaining between the two original parties must now be one of complete and genuine good faith, a condition which has not always existed, he said.

Mr. Adams reported two significant occurences in the municipal labor field during 1968.

One was in the Okanagan where, for the first time in Canada, CUPE and a group of municipalities are negotiating a single, area-wide agreement.

The dispute still continues, he said, largely over CUPE's demand for wage parity with Greater Vancouver, against the municipalities' insistence that their wage structures be tied to the pay scales of resident wage earners within their communities.

AREA-WIDE PACT

"Regardless of the dispute," Mr. Adams said, "it is evident that an area-wide agreement will be developed covering all Okanagan municipalities concerned, with local supplements to meet special requirements of individual municipalities."

"The outcome will most likely affect all other B.C. municipalities, and municipalities in other provinces as well," he said.

"Therefore the UBCM has fully supported this major effort with our staff facilities," he said.

The second occurrence was the B.C. Labor Relations Board's decision to extend certificates to include groups of municipal employees, notably unorganized office staffs, within the local union orbit, Mr. Adams reported.

A situation of particular concern, he said, occurred in Port Alberni where the LRB, on application by CUPE, extended the certification, which covered hourly paid outside workers, to include all office staff except those exempted by statute.

"This meant," he said, "that the office personnel had no opportunity to decide whether they wished to belong to the union, or to any union, but were in fact ruled into the bargaining unit without regard to their personal wishes."

APPEAL DENIED

In fact, the employees objected strenuously by presenting an appeal, which was denied by the board—as was a second appeal presented in person by the employees.

These employees now find themselves compulsorily included within the union, even though they are almost unanimously opposed to being union members," he said.

This decision by the board, Mr. Adams said, is causing concern to many industrial employers.

"While no one would wish to deny the employees the right to organize in a union of their choice," he said, "one sympathizes with those who have democratically decided they do not want to become organized, yet find themselves arbitrarily forced into a union, against their wishes, by a ruling of the LRB."

He advised municipalities where similar situations exist to "keep a close watch on the Port Alberni case as it develops."

'LIMITED-DIVIDEND' HOUSING

Neighbors Shun Them But Who Complains?

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Families on Borthwick Street earn about $6,000 and pay rents of $70 and $88 a month for their accommodation in 12-year-old row houses.

It would cost them twice as much to find comparable housing in the open market.

They are tenants of a "limited-dividend" project, where the owner may increase rents only with federal government approval. In return for obtaining a 4¼-per-cent, 50-year loan to build the development, he is committed to accept a profit limit of five per cent.

Transport Minister Hellyer and the six members of his national housing inquiry visited Borthwick Street Tuesday, and tramped through the residence of one contented, long-time tenant, Mrs. Teresa Delorme.

"Come on in," she exclaimed. "Two beds aren't made. It's washday you know. But you're sure welcome."

Limited-dividend housing is one provision of the National Housing Act little used nowadays by builders. The city of Ottawa has been more active in this field than others, and 500 limited-dividend units are currently under construction.

Applicants are accepted only if their incomes are less than $6,500 a year. Tenants must move out once their earnings pass $8,500 a year.

LEARN OF PROBLEMS

At several newer row-housing projects Tuesday afternoon the Hellyer group found more modern accommodation and bright exteriors, but they were met with word of serious social problems.

Spokesmen said tenants of public-housing projects are shunned by nearby homeowners and denied credit in stores as soon as they mention their street addresses.

Units squeezed together, eliminating privacy and sacrificing play areas for children, were common features of otherwise impressive construction.

Families in all the areas averaged three or four children.

The tour ended the second and final day of hearings in Ottawa. The inquiry takes to the road next week, visiting Quebec City Monday and Charlottetown Tuesday.

Mixing formal hearings with meet-the-people gatherings, the group travels in October to Toronto, Windsor, Sudbury, Montreal, Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon.

November stops include Yellowknife, Whitehorse, Victoria, Vancouver, Fredericton, Saint John, N.B., Campbellton, N.B., Edmonton, Calgary, Halifax and St. John's, Nfld.

U.S. Senate Stiffens Penalty on Firearms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate, with liberals joining conservatives, voted Tuesday to require imprisonment up to life for any person using a firearm in a violent crime, from presidential assassinaiton to theft.

The amendment, backed by a number of western senators, was approved by voice vote at the urging of Sens. Joseph Tydings (D-Md.) and Thomas Dodd (D-Conn.), both of whom are pressing for stricter gun control legislation in the face of considerable opposition.

The amendment would apply to any firearm, including starting guns for track meets as well as silencers, and to attempted or actual commission of a violent crime. The duration of imprisonment would be determined by the court.

On the second day of voting on amendments to the administration's gun control bill, Dodd lost an effort supported by Liberals to strengthen the measure's licensing provisions.

The Senate defeated, 45 to 42, a Dodd proposal to require a gun dealer to remain in business at least a year after he receives a federal licence. Dodd said this would move against travelling gun dealers and counter extremist groups which "urge members to become licensed dealers so they can get their hands on guns."

Before the Magistrate

Three young persons who obtained clothing through the use of another person's credit card faced charges Tuesday of false pretences and possession of fraudulently obtained property.

Earl Gass, John Robertson and Anne Stewart, whose address was given to the police as 3270 Douglas, were remanded to Sept. 24 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

Miss Stewart pleaded guilty to the false pretences charge. Court was told she represented herself at The Bay Monday as the owner of the card and charged clothes valued at $174.37, forging the name of the Vancouver woman owner. All of the clothing has been recovered, police said.

Gass and Robertson pleaded guilty to possession of fraudulently obtained property. Court was told each of the accused were found wearing articles of clothing obtained in the incident.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte said Robertson had two previous convictions for theft and Gass had previous convictions on lesser offences.

A juvenile, also charged in connection with the case, was to appear in family and children's court today.

Clifford McInnes, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to attempting to take $285, the property of Mrs. Lou Chan, 2109 Chambers Street.

He was remanded for pre-sentence report and sentence until Sept. 25.

Const. Tom Charbonneau, of city police, said the youth entered the house Monday to use the telephone and that shortly after Mrs. Chan heard the sound of her purse, which was in another room, opening.

The money, all in bills, was found under a couch where the accused had been sitting he said.

George Nickalichuk, 19, of CFB Esquimalt, was fined $375 after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving. Court was told he was observed by police driving in an erratic manner on Esquimalt Road Monday and gave a breathalyzer reading of .19.

Fined for careless driving were:

Bruce Gordon, 125 Clarence, driving in an erratic manner on Niagara Aug. 30, $35; Thomas Herbert, 88 Sims, hit pole on John Street Aug. 31, $35; Kenneth McPhie, of North Vancouver, hit pole on Blanshard July 19, $50; Douglas Powell, of Sidney, erratic driving on Douglas Street July 26, $35.

Rifles Blaze In Brooklyn; Youth Seized

NEW YORK (AP) — Police said a young college student armed with three rifles and a shotgun holed up in his family's Brooklyn apartment Tuesday and blazed away for 20 minutes, firing more than 100 shots at police.

No one was injured during the siege although police said one patrol car was a "mess" with bullet holes in it and that the rear window of another car was shot out.

Police said they seized Michael Rudyk, 22, a night student at the City College of New York, after he threw three rifles out the window and came downstairs carrying the shotgun.

Czech Crisis Pays Off For Canada, Australia

By COLIN McINTYRE

VIENNA (Reuters) — The Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia has come as a blessing in disguise for Western countries hungry for skilled manpower.

"For us it is an unprecedented opportunity to get the finest type of person in a huge variety of fields," an immigration official at the Canadian embassy here said.

Both Canada and Australia have mounted crash programs to deal with the flood of inquiries about emigration from highly-qualified Czechoslovak refugees. Most of them were out of the country when the crisis broke Aug. 20.

Among the passengers on the first special flight of Czechoslovak refugees to Canada which left here this week were nine doctors, two dentists, an architect, 15 engineers and two television set designers.

Also on board were Haba Bohumil, 53, internationally-known television cameraman, who had a major part in the audio-visual project of the highly successful Czechoslovak pavilion at Expo 67.

TRACK STAR LEAVES

An Australian chartered plane which left here last week had an equally impressive passenger list, including numerous engineers, an architect, several students and the Czechoslovak modern pentathlon champion.

The Canadian embassy estimated it received about 2,400 applications for immigration visas since the crisis broke, an average of 80 a day. The Australians gave about the same figure.

U.S. embassy officials said they have no special program yet to deal with the Czechoslovaks.

One official estimated that eventually the U.S. will have about 600 of the Czechoslovak refugees.

For the Canadians and Australians it has been virtually round-the-clock work to interview, arrange, advise and encourage.

Canadian immigration officials have come from The Hague, The Netherlands, Geneva and Cologne, West Germany.

Even the Canadian representative in Jamaica, holidaying in Europe at the time of the crisis, gave his services.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 18, 1968—PAGE 15

Arthur Mayse

If I remember correctly, we suspended operations a couple of weeks ago on an optimistic note.

"Fishes, have at you!" I plunked out on a typewriter that today responds awkwardly to fingers employed at other pursuits. One of these was changing lures in the hope of mending our fishing luck.

But I'm getting ahead of our vacation story, which began when we headed north with trailer in tow.

We put in at Bennett's Point, a campground set amid first-growth Douglas firs, with the prime coho grounds of Oyster Bay out front.

While we settled the trailer on its jacks, we planned what to do with our salmon. Some we'd take up to Willow Point for smoking. Others we'd have canned or frozen, and naturally, we would take down a few fresh-caught coho packed in ice as gifts for friends.

Then, our catch disposed of in advance, we strolled over to the camp office-tackle shop, where we made the acquaintance of Badour.

I can tell you of Badour only that his original is or was a dance mask of the Kwakiutl people. What we saw, brooding on a shelf, was Badour in miniature. Actually, he was one of a pair that differed only in minor detail. They were finely carved from cedar, and we coveted them on sight.

The Indian artist? Betty and Walter Crawford, who took Bennett's Point over from big Paul Neilson last spring, knew him only as "Dool." Occasionally he placed a few of his mask miniatures with them for sale.

British Columbians and Albertans who put in at the camp bought most of them. Americans, Betty Crawford told us, showed scant interest in the masks.

We bought Badour, both of him, for the sinfully-low price of $7.50, and gave him a place of honor on the shelf under the front window of our holiday home. Then we rigged up and went fishing.

Let me tell you right now that you are not going to be subjected to a saga of bending rods and squealing reels. We were there, ready and eager. But the fish of the northern run that we counted on hadn't showed up.

You name it, we tried it.

Tom Mac spoons, the old reliable. Coho plugs that had never failed us before. Also herring strip and herring minnows . . . flashtails and bucktails . . . Rex Field buzz-bombs, Crocodiles, and Deadly Dicks.

All these from a tackle-box so loaded that I have to brace myself before lifting it.

We trolled. We drift-mooched and motor-mooched. We cast till our arms were weary.

Meanwhile, word came through from Victoria that southern-run coho were actually leaping into boats and assaulting fishermen in Becher Bay.

★

Even with the froth blown off, that report didn't help matters. Then one evening, a prairie lady who had never taken salmon-rod in hand before boated a nice coho. Not us, though! We caught three dogfish.

I gave Badour a mean look when we came boat-numb and shivering in that night. He brooded back at me in duplicate from his shelf.

"Nonsense!" said Win, when I told her my suspicions. "What could those masks have to do with it?"

After that, we fished less strenuously. Then one morning, we finally took Walt Crawford's advice . . . filled our fuel tank and aimed the outboard rig for Shelter Point up the line.

There, close in to the kelp, a silvery six-pounder grabbed a green flashtail.

"Uh-huh!" I said, while the lone coho of our trip scurried and frolicked. "Badour slipped up this time!"

Back now, with a good though not over-fishy holiday behind us, we have transferred Badour in both his presences to a permanent home. I think he is the great protector of the salmon; but that's only my uninformed guess. Can anyone tell us more about him and the artist who carved him?

Road Change At Elk Lake Advocated

Widening Interferes With Park Plans

The Patricia Bay Highway should be relocated on the proposed freeway route rather than be widened to four lanes alongside Elk Lake.

This was the opinion expressed at the Capital Region Planning board at its meeting Tuesday.

The freeway route should be implemented by Elk Lake rather than widen the road beside the lake to four lanes," said Ald. Edward Lum of Saanich.

His municipality plans to turn all of the east side of the lake into a beach area, he said.

The area, part of the Elk-Beaver Lake regional park, had one of its busiest summers ever last year with 168,000 people crowding the beaches in a three-month period.

ALONG RIDGE

The freeway route, outlined in the massive transportation study of three years ago, would swing Pat Pay away from its present route at Haliburton Road opposite Beaver Lake and take it along the ridge to the east extending well past the northern end of Elk Lake.

The highways department announced last week that the existing highway route will be widened to four lanes. In most places it now is two lanes.

The Capital Region Planning Board, in its resolution, asked the highways department to take "a further look" at the Elk-Beaver Lake section to institute the freeway route from just north of Royal Oak.

The board also agreed:

- That the proposed widening, with the exception of the Quadra-Royal Oak Section, is an intermediate improvement and not the ultimate freeway facility;
- The improvement is welcomed but it is regretted that more of the final freeway plan cannot be constructed at this time;
- It is recommended that the highways department allow in current appropriations sufficient funds to buy the right of way for the ultimate freeway and its parallel access roads;
- Wherever possible an additional width of right of way be acquired to provide landscaping for parkway treatment to ensure for all time an attractive entrance to the capital;
- That the highways department, in both physical design and capital budgeting, allow for the extension of the peninsula freeway to its logical termination in the central city, although this termination was not spelled out.

A. The Queen only sends congratulatory messages on occasion of diamond (60th) wedding anniversaries. If congratulatory messages are desired for golden (50th) anniversaries, a letter should be sent to the Secretary, Government House. Messages might then be received from the Prime Minister, Lt. Governor, Premier, Mayor and MP for the constituency of the persons concerned.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps on antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Group to Publish Party Newspaper

By JOHN MIKA

The British Columbia Social Credit League plans to take steps in the next six weeks to cut Premier Bennett's apron strings and transform itself from a semi-religious "little people's movement" under his direct control into a full-fledged self-governing political party.

This became apparent today on the heels of two announcements in Vancouver by league president George Dreidigger.

He revealed that the league—which has never been allowed to select a leader itself—will move at its Nov. 1-2 convention to establish the machinery for picking the man who will succeed Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Dreidigger also said a four-times-yearly party newspaper will begin publication Oct. 15. Mr. Bennett has shown a long-standing coolness to the idea of a party-sponsored organ.

Mr. Dreidigger said three constituency associations have submitted convention resolutions asking for a study of constitutional changes needed to enable the league to choose its political leader. They want the report of the study put to the 1969 convention for a decision.

He said the resolutions came from Vancouver-Burrard, Surrey and Coquitlam associations but the executive would have put the same proposal before this year's convention anyway if no association had submitted a resolution.

Mr. Dreidigger said the move is necessary for "house-keeping" and did not indicate a lack of confidence in the 68-year-old premier who has led the party for 16 years.

"But the constitution is completely blank on this (leadership procedure)," he added.

Who Would Call Convention?

"If anything happens to the premier tomorrow, there is no procedure.

"We can't go on for ever without the machinery. With the premier reaching an age when some change . . . when the time came, who would call a convention?

"Who would say who could vote as delegates? Perhaps the board of directors but I don't think any member of the board of directors would want to have to make such a decision."

(Mr. Bennett has never called for such a move and, while it would provide a means of replacing him in the event of an emergency, it would also remove his present total freedom to pick his own successor if he wishes.)

Premier Bennett who is still in Europe was not available for comment but it is certain that all eyes will be on him at the convention when the question of studying means for providing an orderly succession comes up for debate and vote.

He has repeatedly met speculation he was planning to retire with a statement that he intends to remain in his post as long as his health and the voters permit.

Mr. Dreidigger also announced that the proposed party paper will be tenatively named The B.C. Examiner but the convention will be asked to give it a permanent name.

Dues To Support Publication

He said membership dues will have to be raised to support the publication which he said would cost less than $10,000 a year to produce. It will be sent free to all on the League's mailing list and will be sold to the public at 50 cents an issue through the headquarters office.

Perhaps significantly, Mr. Dreidigger said the paper was needed because the league has done "a poor job of selling" its policies and philosophy as a political party.

(The opposition NDP and Liberal parties, and even the Conservatives, have found it necessary to establish party news letters but Mr. Bennett, while opposing a party organ on the grounds his movement was not political, has tried to sell his administration's policies through massive free circulation of the government-printed quarterly B.C. Newsletter.)

Mr. Dreidigger said the party paper "will be quite controversial. We will take the liberty of criticizing not only others but ourselves as well.

'It is not going to be a back-slapping, self-congratulating type of newspaper," Mr. Dreidigger added. "We will have guest editorials from labor leaders, from business leaders, from all segments of society."

Moves Will Spur Discussion

Mr. Dreidigger's announcements were bound to start considerable discussion within and without the league as to their significance, particularly since Mr. Bennett's power over the organization has been waning since 1966.

His complete control of the organization sprang from the fact that the B.C. Social Credit League was a small and unnoticed group of monetary reform theorists in the political wilderness who only had presidents, not political leaders, during the pre-1952 years when it consistently failed to elect any of the few candidates it ran in provincial elections.

It went into the confused 1952 campaign, following the bitter break-up of the coalition government, without a party leader although there was a behind-the-scenes fight going on between B.C.-oriented Socreds and Alberta's Premier Manning who was trying to install a lieutenant as the B.C. league's head.

Mr. Bennett, who had dramatically bolted the Conservative Party and joined the unknown Socreds on the eve of the election, was a prominent campaigner along with Pentecostal minister Rev. P. A. Gaglardi during the provincial election.

When the Socreds squeaked into office by one seat after the proportional vote "long count," the leadership question became crucial and the Socred caucus of successful candidates picked Mr. Bennett at a closed-door meeting.

(The night Mr. Gaglardi resigned the highways portfolio last session, a reminiscing Premier Bennett told reporters the widely-held belief that he won the leadership by one vote over Mr. Gaglardi at that 1952 meeting was untrue. He said he was the unanimous choice of caucus.)

The league never held a leadership convention and its only role in the choice was a pro-forma approval of caucus' decision months after the event.

Bennett Blamed For 'Failure'

Since then, Mr. Bennett has dominated the party but his total grip over its affairs was significantly loosened in the 1966 convention where numerous league delegates privately and openly blamed Mr. Bennett and his hand-picked strategy advisers for the party's stunning failure to win an expected landslide in the last provincial election.

That convention bitterly criticized the campaign strategy and failure to consult the "grass roots" and established for the first time a committee of constituency presidents who were to have regular and direct meetings with the Socred MLAs instead of making all contacts through Mr. Bennett personally.

The same league committee was authorized to participate in the planning of party organization, platforms and election strategy — forcing Mr. Bennett to share this role for the first time.

Dr. Charles Ennals, at the time a league vice-president who led a committee which recommended the reforms, said the changes were intended to enable the league to develop into "a mature political party."

The small but visible erosion of his grip on the party continued at last year's convention where hostility was evident to his growing anti-Confederation, pro-United States image and his spurning of efforts to revive the national Socreds in favor of his personal appeal for election of a 22-man "ginger group" of B.C. MPs who would

2,050 to Knock on Doors

Trainipg sessions for team captains in the residential division of United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal began this morning.

At a meeting at the YMCA auditorium, 60 of the division's 100 team captains were shown slides and briefed on this year's residential campaign which begins Oct. 14.

Mrs. Bonner Aust, head of the residential division, said she is pleased by the number of people who have volunteered to canvass for the appeal.

"Some captains already have full teams of canvassers. At this point in our campaign it's most encouraging. But we can certainly use many more."

She estimates that 2,050 volunteer canvassers will be required to cover the residential districts this year.

Psychiatrist Disagrees On Marijuana

A Victoria psychiatrist said today he disagrees with an opinion of the B.C. Medical Association that the drug marijuana is harmless.

"This in contrary to my whole experience," said Dr. Douglas Alcorn, giving evidence in County Court. He said the BCMA made a statement to the effect that marijuana was harmless in a report issued last year.

"The belief that marijuana is harmless and non-addictive has been widely publicized, and there is a widespread belief by some psychiatrists that the laws of this country are unrealistic."

Dr. Alcorn gave evidence at the trial of David Arthur Sainsbury, a 19-year-old Victoria youth who pleaded guilty to trafficking in marijuana from the basement of a house at 821 Kings Road.

ALL TOOK DRUG

The house, which has since been pulled down, was occupied by Sainsbury and several others youths.

Sainsbury said they all took marijuana.

Dr. Alcorn said he examined Sainsbury on two occasions and found no evidence of mental disorder or abnormal behavior.

"He seemed to have absorbed the viewpoint that marijuana is harmless," Dr. Alcorn testified, "and that is an opinion with which I am not in agreement."

Sainsbury was called to the witness stand by his counsel, Norman Prelypchan of Victoria. He said he was born in Victoria and left school about three years ago.

"Why?" asked Mr. Prelypchan.

"I didn't like school and I wanted to get out and work," Sainsbury replied. When asked why he took marijuana, he said:

"We were experimenting."

"Did you hope to establish a happier pattern of life"

"Yes," Sainsbury replied.

Judge Montague Drake called for a pre-sentence report and remanded Sainsbury for sentence until Wednesday at 10 a.m.

RCMP Constable John G. O'Neil said he and another constable caught Sainsbury and other youths in the basement of the house on Kings Road and found they had concealed marijuana behind the door.

Overall Support Of 60 Per Cent Means Merger

An overall vote of 60 per cent in favor of forming a district municipality — not a 60 per cent vote in each of the separate unorganized districts — will be required for passage of the December incorporation referendum of Metchosin-Colwood-Langford.

A spokesman for the department of municipal affairs said today an amendment made to the Municipal Act last year, has made this possible.

"The total vote in the three areas will count," he said. "That is if Langford should vote against incorporation but the votes pooled in all three districts total 60 per cent, the area becomes a district municipality."

Date of the referendum has not yet been fixed, but it's expected to be held at the same time as the municipal and school board elections in December.

PUBLIC MEETINGS

Stan Hiscock, chairman of an incorporation committee, said the subject will be fully discussed at public meetings.

The first meeting will be on Oct. 1 with the local association of Women Electors. It will be held at the home of Mrs. T. C. Chambers, 3383 Aloha Avenue, starting at 10 a.m.

Mr. Hiscock said since last year a committee has been working hard on obtaining information on both the merits and disadvantages of becoming a district municipality.

"Since the per capita grants have been increased, incorporation is a more economical proposal," he said. "But the dollar isn't the real question in this issue."

He said the issue was whether residents wanted to control development.

PRESERVE AMENITIES

"How can we preserve the amenities of the area if we don't control our development?" he asked.

The provincial government presently controlled zoning, he pointed out.

Incorporation, however, is expected to meet with stiff opposition.

A effort was made three years ago to amalgamate the three districts into one municipality, but was abandoned because of the opposition of some local residents.

Andy Cottyn, former Langford and Colwood Chamber of Commerce president, said the same residents will oppose incorporation in December.

"Many of us have lived here for 20 years," he said. "We don't want a bunch of newcomers disturbing our way of life."

Ferry Mechanics Set Deadline

About 100 machinists and mechanics at the Deas dock terminal on the mainland have set a Sept. 30 deadline for some action on wage negotiations with the provincial government.

They handle refitting for the B.C. Ferries fleet and are the only group of ferry workers whose contract terms have not been settled following the strike last spring.

Negotiations have been underway for almost a year now, Norman Thornber, business agent for the unlicensed ferry workers, said today.

The men are fed up and if they don't get some answers by the end of the month have indicated they will take "appropriate action."

NOT EFFECT SERVICE

A wildcat strike would interfere with the tight refit schedule, he added.

"We are doing everything we can to prevent them taking independent action but the situation has been building up for so long. They want definite answers on all their problems and how they are going to be solved."

Tradesmen in the ferry division were promised parity in wages with outside industry and the same treatment given ship and shore-based crews, he said.

Mr. Thornber said negotiations generally with the highways department and government representatives had been most satisfactory with the exception of the Deas problems.

He added that he had received "indications" today that some of the problems might be cleared up by the end of the week but would not elaborate.

Second Line Schedules City Stops

The $20-million Princess Cruises Inc. ship Princess Italia will make day-long stops at Victoria on eight Inside Passage cruises between San Francisco and Alaska next summer, it was announced today.

Completed in Italy a year ago, the 12,000-ton ship has a capacity of 420 passengers in all-first-class accommodation.

Other stops on the 14-day cruises will be Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Ketchikan, Juneau and Skagway, Alaska.

The announcement said cruise fares would be about $495 a person.

The ship now is making West Coast cruises between Los Angeles and Acapulco, Mexico. It is expected to gross $7 million this year.

The company said the Italian-staffed ship will be the first to make regularly scheduled Inside Passage cruises from San Francisco since the gold rush of 1898 and the "largest luxury liner" ever to make the cruise.

OUTSTRIP EAST

Company president Stanley B. McDonald said the west coast will "equal and outstrip the east coast in cruise revenues, schedules and ships," probably within the next decade.

To take advantage of growing possiblities, the company has commissioned construction of the 20,500-ton, 754-passenger Princess Carla to replace the Princess Italia on the U.S.-Mexico trips.

Last month American President Lines announced Victoria will be port-of-call for two of the company's liners scheduled to begin making Pacific cruises in June.

Princess Italia has 213 first-class staterooms, each with private bath, air conditioning, closed-circuit television, telephone and muzak.

The 490-foot ship includes, on its eight decks, a night club, three dance floors, four cocktail lounges, a dining salon, gymnasium and health centre, reading room, movie theatre, card room, swimming pool and open air games areas.

Saanich Collects $6.8 Million In Due Taxes

Saanich has collected 94.78 per cent of its due taxes, it was announced today.

Of the $7,235,502 levy, ratepayers have paid $6,857,697.

The delinquent 5 per cent is being hit by penalties since the due date for taxes was Aug. 19.

Two per cent on the balance owing was added Aug. 20 and will be followed by 4 per cent Sept. 20, 7 per cent Oct. 21 and 10 per cent Nov. 20.

The percentages, said assistant comptroller-treasurer John Bericoff, are cumulative. This means that a person who delays paying taxes until past Nov. 20 will be hit by 23 per cent on the balance owing.

New Kind of Theology Training Planned

A new theological college, to be built on the campus of the University of British Columbia, will be discussed at a public meeting in the Quadra Bible Chapel, 1095 Tolmie, Thursday at 8 p.m.

To be known as Regent College, the new establishment is scheduled to open in the summer of 1970. But a preliminary summer school will be held in temporary premises on the campus in June and July of 1969.

Dr. J. M. Houston, dean of geography at Oxford University, England, has been invited to head Regent College and will be chief speaker at Thursday's meeting.

"Main objective of Regent College will be to train graduates in Christian thought and life," says Charles Ellington of Victoria, a member of the board of governors.

"It will provide an entirely new kind of theological training. We want to create an atmosphere where people from all walks of life can study the Christian faith and relate it to their own profession.

"There is far too much professionalism in our theology today. We want to train men and women so they can relate Christianity to their personal lives and communicate it to those around them."

Mr. Ellington says the new college will offer an intensive one-year course starting in June 1970. Funds will be raised to put up a college building on the campus.

"It will mean a lot of hard work and effort, but we believe there is a real need for such a college. Dr. Houston is an outstanding man of ideas. He will continue as dean of geography at Oxford University until Regent College opens."

Mr. Ellington said Regent College will be entirely independent of Union College, operated by the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Theological College, both on the UBC campus.

"It is not a breakaway from these older colleges," he said, "and it is not a fundamentalist Bible school, as some imagine.

"Its object will be to demonstrate on a secular campus the reality of God in human life and the authority of the Bible for the needs of today."

Kings Shift Weight

Wing Positions For Defencemen

By The Canadian Press

Coach Red Kelly places his forward-strengthening experiment on the line tonight when Los Angeles Kings open their National Hockey League exhibition schedule at Barrie, Ont., against Oakland Seals.

Dale Rolfe and Bob Wall, both regular defencemen last season with the Kings, have been moved up to left wing.

Kelly, who after one week has trimmed 14 men from his training-camp roster, has what is believed the heaviest forward line in the NHL.

Rolfe, six-foot-four and 205 pounds, is teamed with centre Ed Joyal, six feet and 180 pounds, and right winger Bill Flett, six-one and 195 pounds.

WALL AT CENTRE

Wall will play with centre Skip Krake and right wing Howie Hughes.

The Kings finished second in the NHL's Western Division last season.

Minnesota North Stars also open their exhibition schedule tonight at Haliburton, Ont., against their Memphis Central Professional League farm team.

North Stars made some roster changes Tuesday. Coach and general manager Wren Blair demoted six players, including two highly-regarded defencemen, to the B squad.

Larry Hillman and Duane Rupp, both drafted from Toronto Maple Leafs last June, were dropped from the main squad.

'PUNCH WAS RIGHT'

"They haven't shown too much in camp so far," Blair said. "All they are doing is making (coach) Punch Imlach look good for removing them from the protected list."

Others shipped to the Minnesota B squad were left winger Danny Grant, right winger Bill Goldsworthy, defenceman Bob Woytowich and goaltender Gary Bauman.

Three members from Canada's national team were among the five replacements. They are goaltender Ken Broderick and defenceman Marshal Johnston and Barry MacKenzie. Johnston played four games with Minnesota after returning from the Grenoble, France, Winter Olympics. Also brought up to the main group were right wing Jim Benzelock and Danny Seguin, a left winger who played last season with Kitchener of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

THREE INJURED

At St. Andrews, N.B., St. Louis Blues closed out their five-day training camp on a note of misfortune. Three members of last year's Stanley Cup finalists were injured in an intra-squad game.

Right winger Terry Gray hurt his shoulder when checked by Bob Plager, defenceman Fred Hucul twisted his back, and left winger Larry Keenan aggravated an injured achilles tendon.

Goaltenders were on the receiving end of shooting practice at the Toronto Maple Leafs camp in Peterborough, Ont., and Montreal Canadians' workouts at Verdun, Que.

BOWER SIDELINED

Toronto veteran Johnny Bower was knocked out of action for the second time. He was forced to leave a Tuesday morning practice when struck by a puck on his shoulder, the same spot hit last week.

At Verdun, goalie Gump Worsley was excused from Tuesday practice by freshman coach Claude Ruel. Worsley, last season's co-holder of the Vezina Trophy with Rogatien Vachon, was struck in the chest Monday on a hard shot by right winger Yvan Cournoyer.

The young brother of an established NHL star is playing well in the Montreal camp. Goaltender Tony Esposito, a brother of Boston Bruin centre Phil, has recorded two shutouts and allowed only three goals in four practice sessions.

Tiger Town Roars

By The Associated Press

The Motor City still was turning itself inside out with jubilation today after a one-step backward title march turned out to be a champagne waltz after all.

"I've waited a long time for this," said Al Kaline after Detroit secured its first American League pennant in 23 years Tuesday night.

And, that just about summed up the feelings of thousands of the Tigers' long-destitute rooters, who touched off a wild, madcap demonstration when Don Wert's two-out bases loaded single in the ninth inning delivered a 2-1 victory over New York.

Thousands of joyful spectators, who had been chanting "Bring on the Cards" from the middle innings on, swarmed onto the field and into the Tiger dugout. It took a regiment of policemen to protect the heroes from their exuberant admirers.

LONG, LONG WAIT

But you couldn't blame them for being a little excited. It's been a long wait.

The Second World War had just ended and many of the present Tigers were still in diapers—or hadn't been born yet—when Detroit last played host to a World Series.

Actually, the wild outburst of appreciation was a little late. In reality, the Tigers backed into the championship when Boston Red Sox thwarted second-place Baltimore Orioles' faint hopes 2-0 in a game that ended about 10 minutes before the Tiger-Yankee match.

But that score wasn't announced at Tiger Stadium, and most in the crowd of 46,512 were unaware Detroit had won the flag until Wert's game-winning blow.

In other AL games, Washington Senators tripped Cleveland Indians 4-2 and Chicago White Sox whipped Oakland Athletics 2-1 before losing the nightcap of a doubleheader 8-1. California's scheduled afternoon game at Minnesota was rained out.

GAME HAS TWISTS

It was a typical finish for the Tigers, who have made a habit of last-out victories this season, in a game marked with several dramatic twists.

Not only did Wert, who is having the worst season of his career, produce the winning run, but a last-minute substitute, Joe Sparma, was credited with the victory.

Sparma, 9-10, was called on to make his first appearance since Sept. 2. He scattered five hits and produced Detroit's first run with a single in the fifth that scored Bill Freehan.

The Yanks tied it in the ninth on Jake Gibbs' two-out single, but the Tigers loaded the bases with two out in the bottom of the inning on two walks and Freehan's single before Wert delivered against ace Yankee reliever Lindy McDaniel.

"I knew it was a hit right away," said Wert, on the losing end of a struggle for a .200 average. Don admitted he was worried that Manager Smith would lift him for a pinch hitter, and "I sorta hoped he wouldn't."

The Red Sox' Ray Culp, a National League castoff, checked Baltimore on five hits and struck out 12 in winning a duel with 20-game winner Dave McNally.

A two-run double by Frank Howard in the eighth inning broke a 2-2 tie and gave Washington its victory over Cleveland.

Detroit Clinches Pennant By Clipping Yankees 2-1

DETROIT (AP)—The Tigers brought the American League pennant to Detroit Tuesday night for the first time since 1945. Already assured of the pennant when Baltimore Orioles lost to Boston Red Sox, the Tigers made it official on their own Tuesday night by defeating New York Yankees 2-1.

The pennant-winning effort this year was a colossal production, directed by Mayo Smith, produced by Jim Campbell and starring Denny McLain and a supporting cast.

"We won an awful lot of games with guys like Jim Price, Dick Tracewski and Jon Warren," said Smith, who had a champion in his second year as manager.

Gates Brown, one of baseball's top pinch hitters this year, wrote the basic plot on the second day of the season when he socked a ninth-inning homer to beat the defending champion Red Sox 4-3.

The win over Boston was the start of a nine-game winning streak. The Tigers moved into first place May 10 and never looked back.

Campbell, the team's general manager, produced the nucleus of the championship club with players signed and developed by the Detroit organization. Of the 25 key players, 14 are sole products of the Detroit farm system and four others were picked up in the free-agent draft.

McLain Sadly Missed a Year Ago

McLain, whose brash personality and strong right arm won the hearts of Detroit fans after some fiery verbal exchanges, was drafted from Chicago White Sox in 1963.

But the cocky pitcher, who had won 30 games by the time Detroit clinched the title, had to rise above trade rumors and controversy.

Few Tigers fans will forget how he failed to win a game in the 1967 September stretch drive as Detroit lost the pennant by one game on the final day of the season.

McLain dislocated two toes in late August and was unable to pitch until the final day of the season. Controversy still surrounds the injury.

McLain insisted the injury occurred when he stood up and wrenched his foot, which had fallen asleep while he watched a late movie on television.

Trade rumors flourished all winter, the most persistent involving him in a trade with Baltimore.

In May, after winning his fifth game, McLain accused Tigers fans of being front runners, saying fan abuse was partly responsible for the team losing the pennant last year. Ten days later, he said someone had placed a smoke bomb, which failed to go off, under the hood of his family car.

Mayo's Move to Youth Paid Off

But the controversy came during a Detroit newspaper strike and soon vanished as McLain piled up victory after victory.

While Detroit's other starters, Mickey Lolich, Joe Sparma and Earl Wilson, faltered because of control problems or injuries, Smith's young bullpen picked up the slack with an incredible string of brilliant relief pitching.

Smith cleaned house of all pitchers but the four starters in spring training and decided to go with youngsters such as Warden, John Hiller, the Canadian from the Toronto suburb of Scarborough, Pat Dobson and Daryl Patterson.

Injury-Plagued Wilson the Stopper

Jim Northrup got hot in August with a string of hits. But the final challenge came from Baltimore. Detroit lost four straight games to New York Yankees in August and Baltimore closed to within four games.

But Earl Wilson, besieged by a series of injuries—he was hit four times by crippling line drives—snapped the losing streak by blanking the White Sox 3-0 Aug. 26.

The Orioles, trailing by six games, moved into Detroit for a crucial three-game series Aug. 30. Wilson pitched and won the opener 9-1, slamming a three-run homer and driving in four runs.

Baltimore's Dave McNally won the second game but McLain, turning a hot liner off the bat of Boog Powell into a triple play, took the deciding game for his 27th victory and the pennant race was just about over.

Olympic Highway Proposed

A highway linking Haney, in the Fraser Valley, and Whistler Mountain, 50 miles north of Vancouver, is being considered by the provincial government as part of Vancouver's 1976 Winter Olympic bid.

John Fraser, president of the Garibaldi Olympic Development Association, said in Vancouver Tuesday the provincial government had considered the highway for some time — apart from the Olympic bid.

"They are now considering putting it in — perhaps ahead of schedule — if their studies show that the other proposed access routes to the Olympic site will not carry 50,000 to 60,000 people a day," he said.

The other routes to the proposed Olympic site are the Squamish Highway and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

Evans has played only 20 times for Wolverhampton's first team, and only once this season. That was two weeks ago, and he had such a bad game that the crowd hooted and whistled every time he touched the ball.

Gaylord's Act Tough to Follow

By The Associated Press

After what Gaylord Perry did to Bob Gibson on Tuesday night, what can Denny McLain do for an encore?

St. Louis Cardinals, in their first game since clinching their second straight National League pennant, were supposed to be warming up for McLain and Detroit Tigers in the World Series opener.

Instead, Perry did some cooling off. The right-hander hurled the fourth no-hitter of the 1968 season—two in each league—stopping the Cards and shutout king Gibson 1-0 on Ron Hunt's first-inning homer.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Cincinnati Reds 7-5, New York Mets edged Chicago Cubs 3-2, Houston Astros tripped Atlanta Braves 5-1 and Pittsburgh Pirates downed Philadelphia Phillies 4-2.

Perry permitted only two baserunners and retired 18 batters in a row between walks to Mike Shannon in the second inning and Phil Gagliano in the eighth. He threw 101 pitches, getting 12 outs on grounders and striking out nine, including Curt Flood on a called third strike to end the game.

PERRY BORE DOWN

Perry said he bore down all the way, even though the Giants were eliminated from the pennant race Sunday.

"When you're record is 14-14 you go out to win," he said.

Second baseman Hunt, the second batter in the first inning, hit Gibson's third pitch of the game over the left field fence. It was only his second home run of the season.

Gibson now is 21-8.

Other no-hitters this season was pitched by Cincinnati's George Culver against Philadelphia, Baltimore's Tom Phoebus against Boston and Oakland's Jim Hunter against Minnesota. The last was a perfect game.

Bill Sudakis and Paul Popovich drove in two runs apiece and pitcher Claude Osteen delivered three key singles as the Dodgers won for the 11th time in 14 games.

Rookie Jim McAndrew pitched a two-hitter as the Mets edged Chicago on Ron Swoboda's steal of home in the fourth inning. Ed Charles hit a solo homer in the first for the Mets.

Gene Alley homered and doubled and scored twice to lead Pittsburgh past Philadelphia as the Pirates won their fourth straight game and moved to within a half-game of fifth-place Atlanta.

WOOED by Calgary Stampeders is Ron Vander Kelen (above), star quarterback for University of Wisconsin in 1963 Rose Bowl Game. Stamps' manager Rogers Lehew expects to meet with Vander Kelen before interlocking Canadian Football League game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats tonight.

SOCCER'S CHOICE

NEW YORK (AP)—Phil Woosnam, who piloted Atlanta to the Atlantic Division title in the North American Soccer League, has been named the circuit's "Coach-of-the-Year" for 1968.

Perry's Control Perfect

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If Detroit Tigers are seeking ways to better their chances of winning the world series, they might check San Francisco Giants' way of pitching to the National League pennant-winning St. Louis Cardinals.

Giants' right-hander Gaylord Perry limited the Cardinals to a pair of walks Tuesday night as he pitched the fourth no-hitter of 1968 and won 1-0 over the Cards' Bob Gibson.

Perry, 15-14, raised his record to 3-1 against the Cardinals.

The Giants' victory cinched a tie in the season series between the two clubs, giving San Francisco a 9-7 edge with games remaining today and Thursday.

CONTROL DID IT

"The most important thing was my control," said Perry after Ron Hunt's first-inning home run provided all the scoring in a pitching duel between two stingy hurlers.

"It's the biggest thrill of my life," confessed Perry, who hadn't pitched a no-hitter since his high school days in Williamston, N.C.

"I was hitting the spots, keeping the ball low and my slider was really working."

Perry had few anxious moments in the first no-hitter for the Giants since Juan Marichal blanked Houston 1-0 at Candlestick Park June 15, 1963.

It also represented the second no-hitter against the Cardinals in 40 years. Since 1919, the only no-hitter against St. Louis was pitched by the Chicago Cubs' Don Cardwell in 1960.

HAD A ONE-HITTER

Perry, 0-5 against the Cardinals in 1967, pitched a one-hitter against the Cubs at Candlestick Park, Aug. 26—holding Chicago hitless for 6 1-3 innings.

"I started thinking about the no-hitter from the fifth inning on," said Perry.

Speed Record For Thompson

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — Mickey Thompson, veteran race driver, ran a specially-modified 1969 Ford Mustang fastback to 144 American Class B records for speed and endurance Tuesday.

Thompson's fastest lap on the 10-mile course was 187.207 miles per hour.

Included in the record-shattering performance were new highs in the standing and flying starts for all distances between 25 kilometres and 500 miles.

The 144 marks set Tuesday brought to 219 the number of records Thompson has set since he began runs in the Mustangs last Friday.

The new marks, added to the 48 records set earlier this summer, gave Thompson and his Mustangs 267 U.S. and international speed and endurance records.

The records were held previously by Bunkie Blackburn in a 1967 Chevrolet Camaro and Craig Breedlove in a 1967 American Javelin last year.

CZECHS PASS UP . . . . . . WORLD TOURNEY

Invitation Withdrawn

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia has withdrawn its application to hold the World hockey championships in 1969, but will re-apply for the tournament in 1971, it was reported Tuesday.

The organization committee decided not to hold the championships because under present technical, economic and organizational circumstances it could not ensure adequate facilities."

In Winnipeg, Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said the Czech withdrawal "wasn't exactly unexpected considering the circumstances."

"I was sorry to learn of it because the Czech people have always extended a warm and hospitable welcome to Canadian teams."

Juckes expects the 1969 world championship would be switched to Sweden, named the alternate site when the tournament was awarded to Czechoslovakia.

Juckes said, however, he received a telegram Tuesday from Czech hockey officials confirming a six-game trip by the Czech national team to Canada late in December.

Juckes said the Czechs will take part in the third annual invitational world tournament in Winnipeg. The Czech tour is from Dec. 19 to Jan. 1 and, Juckes said, it means the Winnipeg tournament, which usually starts on New Year's Day, will probably have to be advanced.

The world champion Russian national team also has been invited to Winnipeg but have not notified the CAHA whether or not they will attend, he said.

Nino Belts Rival

TORONTO (CP) — Nino Benvenuti, world middleweight boxing champion, said "I fought a lousy fight" but the 12,000 fans in the stands didn't agree as they watched the Italian administer a 10-round boxing lesson to Art Hernandez, of Omaha, Neb.

It was strictly no contest as Benvenuti walked away with the unanimous decision in a fight that nearly didn't make the ring.

There wasn't a mark on the champion at the end of the non-title fight which came close to being stopped in the ninth round.

In the eighth round he powered Hernandez into the ropes, set him up with a fast left hand and cocked his devastating right, then shrugged and backed away. The crowd went wild at the gesture of sportsmanship.

WAVES OFF REFEREE

There were no knockdowns, but at one point in the ninth round Hernandez waved off referee Sammy Luftspring when it appeared the official planned to stop the fight.

The fight almost didn't come off.

At the weigh-in, eight hours before fight time, Bruno Amaduzzi, Benvenuti's manager, demanded a new contract. Four hours later, he got it.

The original pact called for $30,000 for the Italian fisherman and Amaduzzi said he was holding out for $40,000.

The fight, originally scheduled for July 5, had been postponed four times.

VERDICT BOOED

On the same card, Winnipeg's Al Sparks scored a unanimous decision over Rene Durelle of Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., in a 12-round bout for the Canadian light heavyweight title.

The champion had lost his title to Durelle in a disputed split decision earlier this summer in Chatham, N.B., and had proven the advantage of ring savvy in Tuesday's rematch.

Most spectators disagreed with the decision, however, and booed it for at least 10 minutes.

The fight was close. If there was any advantage it went to Sparks because Durelle threw his right hand on only a few occasions. One of his rights sent Sparks reeling across the ring and he stumbled to the canvas against the ropes in the 10th round. The referee ruled it a slip.

Vancouver's Eric Broom, coach for the Canadian men's field hockey squad, will be the chief speaker at a coaches' clinic sponsored by the Vancouver Island Ladies' Field Hockey Association Sunday at the University of Victoria.

Broom, a former English International player, was coach of Canada's team in the Pan-American Games at Winnipeg last year.

A program of practice and individual instruction will begin at 10 a.m. on the University field, followed by an exhibition game at 2 p.m. at the Lansdowne campus. A Vancouver Island representative side will play B.C.'s entry in the national tournament, in the exhibition game.

Activities then switch to strategy discussions until 7:30 p.m. in "P" Hut on the Uvic campus.

Beware Scorned Woman

UPPER MARLBORO, Md.—Kathy Kusner, the Olympic rider who wants to be the country's first woman jockey, laid the whip this week to the Maryland State Racing Commission, which has found her unfit to enter the starting gate.

Near the end of a hearing on Miss Kusner's appeal of the commission's decision, county circuit judge Ernest A. Loveless observed: "More and more I'm reminded that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

Miss Kusner, a pretty 27-year-old from Arlington, Va., was represented by Audrey Melbourne, who sought to show that the all-male racing commission's decision was the result of sex discrimination.

★ ★ ★

Miss Kusner has twice been denied a jockey's license from the Maryland Commission after stewards reported her riding not up to par for a professional jockey even though the 5-foot, 4-inch, 103-pound brunette is one of four (two men and two women) who won places on the U.S. equestrian team that will compete in the Olympics.

"Still, strength and age, that is what is against her. Not sex," maintained Jon F. Oster, the commission's lawyer.

★ ★ ★

Charging the commission with a "devious plan" and with committing a logical absurdity, Mrs. Melbourne declared, "We're not asking the court to substitute its judgment for the state racing commission's. The commission hasn't any judgment."

Miss Kusner holds the women's world jumping record of 7 feet, 3 inches and was the top female finisher in the 1964 Olympics jumping event.

But three stewards found fault with Miss Kusner's riding at a tryout earlier this year at Pimlico in Baltimore.

After watching her work out several times, they said she did not give "the impression of strength and authority," "rides high" and "bounced in the saddle."

★ ★ ★

Challenging the criticisms one-by-one, Mrs. Melbourne said, "he says, 'her stirrups are too long.' So what? He has already testified it made no difference." The commission maintains that because Miss Kusner is over 25, she's too old to be an apprentice jockey and lacks enough experience to be a journeyman. Mrs. Melbourne noted that male jockeys who were 27 have been licensed.

After "sex" had been repeatedly interjected by Mrs. Melbourne as the motivation behind the commission's denial, Judge Loveless suggested, "Maybe 'gender' would be a better word."

★ ★ ★

Miss Kusner, known as a shy woman of few words, was not in the courtroom.

Judge Loveless said he would review the evidence, including films of Miss Kusner riding in non-purse flat races, before ruling whether the commission's rejection of her application was more than ungentlemanly.

It was not known whether he would discuss the case with Mrs. Loveless.

South Africa Withdrawing Into Isolation

LONDON (CP)—South Africa has withdrawn further into isolation from international sport by barring an English cricket team because a colored — mixed race — player was belatedly chosen to play on it.

Eighty years of cricket matches between the two countries were sundered when Prime Minister Vorster said he would not permit the English team to tour South Africa this summer with Basil d'Oliveira as a member.

D'Oliveira is a South African-born batsman and bowler who came to Britain so he could play with white cricketers, forbidden under the apartheid—separation of the races—policy of South Africa. He now is a British citizen.

Vorster said at a political meeting in Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, that d'Oliveira is a "political cricket ball." He said the Marylebone Cricket Club, governing body of English cricket, had bowed to pressure from leftist groups opposing South Africa's racial laws.

"We are not prepared to receive a team thrust upon us by people whose interests are not the game but to gain certain political objectives which they do not even attempt to hide," he said.

The MCC immediately intimated that the England tour was off. Secretary Billy Griffith said: "We picked our best side, assuming this would be acceptable, and if it is not the tour would be off."

'Olympic Scandal' Fresh in Mind

It all amounted to a political collision that left South Africa more than ever alone in the world of sport.

Vorster recognized that fact by referring to what he called "the Olympic scandal"—the exclusion of South Africa from the Mexico City games.

D'Oliveira was picked for the South African tour after originally being omitted from the team—a decision that set off the greatest row in English cricket history.

The selectors at first insisted that d'Oliveira—"Dolly" to the fans—was left out purely for cricket reasons. Critics charged he was omitted for fear of causing offence to the South Africans.

After two weeks of unprecedented uproar in the sport of gentlemen, the selectors announced Monday night that d'Oliveira would be included in the team because another player, bowler Tom Cartwright, was injured.

Then came Vorster's refusal. Britain's minister of sport, Denis Howell, described Vorster's accusation as ludicrous.

The impasse threatened a complete end to the cricketing links that began when England sent a team to South Africa in 1888. Since then the two countries have played 102 test matches. England has won 46, South Africa 18 and the other 38 matches were drawn.

Haven't Learned Idea of Sports

At the centre of the storm, d'Oliveira said: "I know it has happened because of me and this makes it into a personal tragedy. I suppose I always knew that I might be forced into being the central figure of the whole miserable business."

Sports columnist Peter Wilson said in The Daily Mirror:

"Now one sees the nature of the beast . . . white South Africa, the repressive republic, will not accept the fact that a man with a different colored skin can be an equally good sportsman.

"Everyone from archers to yachtsmen must refuse to compete against the representatives of a country which has not yet learned the proper meaning of sport .. . and the full meaning of fair play."

In Cape Town d'Oliveira's parents were bitterly disappointed.

Editorial reaction from anti-government newspapers was condemnatory.

"In its first real test, Mr. Vorster's outward policy has fallen apart," said Johannesburg's Rand Daily Mail.

The Cape Times said "in effect Mr. Vorster's decision implies admission of the power of the anti-apartheid people."

Australian cricket authorities were shocked.

The former assistant manager of Australia's touring cricket team, J. A. Ledward, speaking as secretary of the Victorian Cricket Association, commented: "It is a tragedy when political issues are brought into sport. Apparently if South Africa carries on as it is doing an Australian aboriginal would be unacceptable in an Australian touring team. I'm sure this decision will have repercussions around the world."

Liske Returning To Stamp Lineup

HAMILTON (CP) — Peter Liske will start at quarterback and halfback Ted Woods will rejoin the backfield when Calgary Stampeders play Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League game here tonight.

Hampered by knee injuries, their loss has hurt Calgary's offensive output.

The Stamps have scored only 53 points in four games—26 in a game against British Columbia Lions with Jerry Keeling quarterbacking.

Woods had dressed for the last two games—after missing three—and even saw action at defensive half against Edmonton when Keeling was injured.

OFFENCE BOLSTERED

Keeling's injury brought Liske back into the last game and he tossed four interceptions, including one for the winning Edmonton touchdown.

Woods entered the game later, replacing Keeling at safety, but tonight he will be on offence with Bob Paremore the 14th import. Keeling will be back on defence.

In another move aimed at bolstering the offence, coach Jerry Williams has installed Mike Spitzer at left guard in place of Herb Schumm.

Spitzer is a six-foot, 250-pound lineman recently released by Detroit Lions of the National League. He was added to the roster when linebacker Jerry Campbell was released.

STANDING PAT

Ticat coach Joe Restic plans to use "pretty much the same lineup" he employed in Hamilton's last game, a 20-6 victory over Toronto Argonauts.

"This Calgary club has been most troublesome for Hamilton over the years", said Restic, referring to Calgary's 5-2 edge in seven previous interlocking games.

"One thing I'm happy about is that Lovell Coleman isn't in their lineup. He used to kill us nearly every year.

"I recall one year I came down out of the spotters' booth when we were leading with about 30 seconds to go when they tossed a little screen out to Coleman and he went all the way down the sidelines for a score." Coleman now is with Ottawa.

HOWARD GERWING
. . . expanding program

Rugger's Command Revamped

Howard Gerwing, veteran coach of the Vikings, has been named general manager of the rapidly-expanding University of Victoria Rugby Club, the athletic department announced today.

Appointed to the position of head coach was former Australian international star Dr. Alan Morton.

Gerwing took over as coach of the university's senior varsity XV in 1964, and was instrumental in entering the Vikings into the North West Pacific Inter-Collegiate Rugby Conference.

Vikings finished well up in the league standings last season, and with a holdover nucleus of more than 10 players will provide Morton with excellent material this time around.

SHOWED WELL

Under Gerwing, both junior and senior squads won Victoria championships and were runners-up in the provincial title clashes last spring.

Gerwing's duties as general manager will include organizing the rugby club's proposed international tour next season.

Morton, an assistant professor in the faculty of education, is a veteran of the international rugby wars with Australia's famous Wallabies.

DOCHERTY NAMED

Assisting Morton in coaching will be another new addition to the university staff. Dave Docherty, a graduate of college rugby with St. Luke's in England, will take over as coach of the Norsemen, and also will coach Viking forwards.

Supporting Morton and Docherty will be Victoria's Ray Calton. Considered one of the finest backs to perform in the Victoria Union, Calton saw international action against Australia with the B.C. representative side.

As coach of the Saxon (frosh) team, his job will be to supply talent to the varsity ranks.

Montreal Signs Draft Choices

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League expansion program have signed a pitcher and an infielder picked up in last June's college draft.

Jim Fanning, Expos' general manager, said 17-year-old Richard Turner, a right-handed pitcher from Eau Gallie, Fla., and infielder Rick Summers, 22, of Rockdale, Tex., had signed minor league contracts with the Montreal club.

Salmonbellies Waited Before Spoiling Spell

By The Canadian Press

New Westminster Salmonbellies, foiled for 50 minutes by the brilliant netminding of goalie Don Hamilton, scored seven goals in the last seven minutes Tuesday night to defeat Vancouver 12-10 in a National Lacrosse Association playoff game.

New Westminster now leads the best-of-seven Western Division semi-final series 3-1. The fifth game will be in Vancouver Thursday night.

In the Eastern Division semi-final, John Davis scored just after the one-minute mark of a sudden-death overtime period to give Peterborough Lakers a 13-12 victory over Montreal Canadiens.

Peterborough leads the best-of-seven series 3-2. The next game will be played in Montreal tonight.

COUNT TWICE

At New Westminster, Wayne Shuttleworth and Paul Parnell each scored two goals for the Salmonbellies. Larry Henry, Dave Tory, Ken Winzoski, Wayne Goss, Ron Flaten, Steve d'Easum, Ian Bull and Cliff Sepka scored one each.

Sid Warick led Vancouver with three goals and Bob Salt scored two. Bill Rawson, Bill Barbour, Peter Black, Bob Babcock and Gord Frederickson added the others.

Bob Sicinski scored three goals for Peterborough and Jim Guerin, Joe Todd and Davis had two each. Jim Gooley, Greg Marchan, Doug Armour and Larry Ferguson scored one each.

A RUDE AWAKENING FOR STICK SALESMAN

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Bill Surette of Boston, a hockey stick company representative, awoke after a half-hour's snooze on his Montreal to London flight Monday and expected he'd soon be watching the afternoon workout of the National Hockey League Bruins.

Inquiring how much longer the flight would take he was told "a few hours yet, sir."

Rather strange, Bill thought to himself. Previous flights had taken about one hour.

"We are going to London, Ontario, are we not?" he asked.

"Oh, no, sir," replied the stewardess. "This one goes to London, England."

Bill arrived here 30 hours and almost 7,000 miles later than he anticipated.

Prairie Ovals Blamed For Crippling Horses

CALGARY (CP) — Prairie horse owners and trainers have been given authority by their association to take "any steps necessary" if Calgary and Edmonton exhibition boards do not meet demands for improving track surfaces.

Members of the prairie division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association have described the two track surfaces as "intolerable" and blamed them for crippling hundreds of thoroughbreds.

Ken Amthor of Calgary, HPBA national president, said a meeting in Edmonton of owners, trainers and veterinarians was informed that 50 horses had suffered broken bones in their feet at the track alone.

"The value of these horses amounted to more than $100,000," Amthor said, "and we included only horses with broken bones, usually navicular (hoof) bones. This doesn't include the hundreds of horses which have broken down with other leg ailments."

Amthor said complaints about the Edmonton track "apply equally in Calgary. The surface here is completely intolerable. Horses are going lame every day."

In Edmonton, Walter Sprague, chairman of the Exhibition Association's racing committee, said the half-mile oval at Northlands Park is a "good track."

"We have done everything to make it a good track. We consider any constructive criticism.

"Some of these tyro horsemen make ridiculous complaints."

High-Priced Hurt

NEW YORK (AP)—Lee White, New York's $100,000 No. 1 draft choice, has undergone knee surgery and the fullback will be sidelined for the remainder of the American Football League season, the Jets announced.

Cornering Antique Market Brings Fun and Profits

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The attics of England are fast losing their dusty treasure troves as more and more Britons climb aboard the headlong antiques boom.

The discovery that old furniture, paintings and silver can be more profitable than the stock market—and a lot less risky—has been building up for some years as Britain staggered through one financial crisis after another, but devaluation of the pound last November put a rocket-blast behind it.

Britons scrambled to turn banknotes into tangible assets which no treasury chief could touch.

Now there's hardly a country house in the land that hasn't been raked over to see if Aunt Agatha's Victorian landscapes can be made to yield a dividend, or if there's a first edition of Alice in Wonderland lurking at the back of the bookcase.

When the mass-circulation Sunday newspaper The People invited its readers recently to send in particulars of paintings they would like valued Sotheby's, the Bond Street dealers, the paper expected some 3,000 replies. It got 35,000, and is still trying to sort them out.

Such is the demand from the new breed of art investor that there seems a real danger of the supply of genuine antiques—articles made before 1830—running low.

U.S. AIDS CRAZE

As a result, the artefacts of the day before yesterday are gathering value, especially since the United States customs ruled they could be shipped in duty-free.

Victoriana now can command high prices, but even the discards of the 1920s and 1930s find a ready market in the "camp" junk shops of Chelsea and Fulham. Meanwhile, in the real antique business, vast sums of money are changing hands across the Atlantic and the Channel.

"All the best things I've sold recently have gone abroad," one dealer told another in the Edwardian Pullman car that serves as coffee bar in Kensington's Antique Hypermarket—one of many multiple-stall marts springing up in central London at the rate of two a month.

His friend gloomily agreed the "good stuff" was flowing out of the country in such quantities that he was finding it difficult to replenish his stocks—a view that is contested by big-name dealers like Sotheby's and Christies, both of which racked up record seasons in 1968.

Peter Wilson, chairman of Sotheby's, says Britain still has a far greater wealth of works of art in private hands than any other country, which accounts for the high volume of sales—£28 at Sotheby's in 1967.

TWO-WAY TRAFFIC

Such experts say the export of antiques is a two-way traffic, explaining that while £28,000,000 worth left Britain last year, £21,000,000 came back. British dealers scour the world to recoup valuable pieces: a set of Chippendale chairs or Georgian silver might cross and recross the Atlantic several times in a generation, each time increasing in value.

Devaluation is a magnet to foreign buyers and has cemented London's position as centre of the world's fine art market. One group of West German businessmen organizes weekend trips to British salesrooms.

Sotheby's, which this year opened offices in Toronto, Paris, Melbourne, Florence, Beirut and a second in New York, was the centre for dealings by some 70 countries in its 1968 season. The firm has multiplied its turnover 500 per cent in 10 years to this season's record £20,592,764.

A good place to study the boom in full stampede was this year's Antique Dealers' Fair, showcase for the cream of the world's antiques. The 14-day show opened in a Mayfair hotel with some £9,000,000 worth of exhibits, including a £37,500 set of diamond and emerald jewelry made for an 18th century empress of Russia. By the end of the third day, most choice pieces had been snapped up and dealers were frantically trying to fill the gaps—"a problem that had them crying all the way to the bank," said the fair's press officer.

"Some dealers can set themselves up for a year on the business they do here," he added. Naturally there is a long waiting list for the privilege of exhibiting wares, all of which have to undergo rigorous authentication tests.

OUTDOES STOCKS

The antiques frenzy has had some fascinating side effects. A prosperous London investment broker now finds it more profitable to advise clients on the purchase of works of art than on stocks and bonds.

Thieves are studying glossy publications like The Connoisseur and Country Life and using such finesse in their raids that they will take the Queen Anne coffee pot and leave the Victorian spoons. Stolen antiques, particularly silver, nearly all find their way abroad.

Meanwhile, what chance has the modest collector amid this aura of high finance? Experts say silver is still the best bet. Prices bounded this year as a result of the gold crisis in March, and are still rising.

In the field of paintings, Victorian minor artists are appreciating fast, but Sotheby's experts say there isn't much available under £40 (about $105). The best investment around the £10 mark, they say, would be prints and drawings from the 18th and 19th centuries.

But there is always tempting possibility of emulating the young Cheshire woman who brought a painting into Christies that her father had picked up in a country junkshop for 10 shillings some years before. It turned out to be an oil sketch for one of Rubens' most important works, and sold for 24,000 guineas. (The guinea, quoted in "snob" transactions in Britain, is worth 21 shillings, compared with the everyday pound's 20.)

PUBLIC MEETINGS CALLED

Saanich council has arranged two public meetings next week to explain the Sept. 28 sewerage consolidation referendum.

First meeting will be held Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 8 p.m. in Glanford elementary school, 4140 Glanford. Second is at 8 p.m. in Gordon Head elementary school, 1671 Kenmore, on Thursday Sept. 26.

"I recommend this for every school"

Teacher John Killough knows what it means to learn to read 3 times faster

So many teachers who take the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course say the same thing — they wish all their students could learn to read 3 times faster. "It inspires confidence. Makes you more relaxed because you quickly master your text books," says Mr. Killough, who actually increased his reading from 244 words a minute to over 2,600 words a minute by the course. "Best of all, there was no loss of comprehension," he says. "As a matter of fact I retain much more of what I read, thanks to Reading Dynamics."

WHO HAS TAKEN THIS COURSE?

Over 400,000 throughout North America . . . over 250 in the Greater Victoria area alone. This is the course President Kennedy asked his Joint Chiefs of Staff to take . . . the same course taken by over 10 Canadian Members of Parliament, and by thousands of students, workers, businessmen and housewives from coast to coast.

READ WHAT THESE LOCAL GRADUATES SAY!

Marlene Patterson—Teacher "Excellent instruction, I read much faster with more concentration and better comprehension."

Roy Hennessy, CKLG "Boss Jock": "It enables me to increase my reading efficiency from less than 350 words per minute to over 2,000 words a minute, with increased comprehension.

Len Goodman — Teacher, "I read much faster with good comprehension."

W. G. Gerry—Municipal Engineer, "Good course—faster reading both for pleasure and business."

Blake Ferris—Instructor, U of Vic., "Extremely good course. I am reading seven times faster with greater comprehension and retention. Great for study reading."

Derek Hydelay — Teacher, "I recommend this course highly. I tackle my reading with more enjoyment and confidence and my recall ability is much greater."

Paul Kjekstad — Student, "I read 3 to 10 times faster with greater comprehension. All students should take this course."

Barbara MacLaren — Student, "Excellent course, has increased my speed greatly and with better understanding."

Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute guarantees to refund the entire tuition to any student who does not at least triple his reading efficiency.

Volunteer Staff For Ship Museum During Winter

Volunteer attendants will keep the maritime museum open between Oct. 1 and April 30.

Museum director Col. J. W. D. Symons said today it is the museum's duty to stay open the year round rather than cater only to the tourist business.

"If we operated during the summer months only, we'd end up being just another tourist trap. We owe it to Victoria's citizens to keep the museum open in the winter as well."

During the tourist season the museum takes in enough money to hire full-time attendants. But winter attendance drops so sharply that the museum would operate in the red if it remained open with a paid staff.

This problem will be solved by 40 volunteer attendants, each working a half-day every second week.

Beginning Oct. 1 the museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Priests Lose Bid for Mediation

By WILLIAM R. MACKAYE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The hopes of 44 Washington-area Roman Catholic priests that their dispute with Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle over birth control could be resolved by the mediation agency of the American heirarchy dissolved Tuesday.

Meantime, Cardinal O'Boyle announced that 11 priests had withdrawn from their support of the original "statement of conscience" issued in August by the dissenters. He hinted that this weekend, after a final round of individual conferences with them, he will begin relieving those priests who persist in dissent of part or all of their pastoral duties.

Officials of the association of Washington priests, the unofficial body through which the dissenters have pressed their case, had hoped the dispute could be brought before the church's national mediation committee which is headed by Lawrence Cardinal Shehan of Baltimore.

Cardinal Shehan was seen by many of them as a potentially sympathetic judge because, they say, he has made no effort to force a change in position among 72 priests in his diocese who signed a statement of protest similar to the one issued by dissenters here.

However, Cardinal O'Boyle said he and Cardinal Shehan had agreed that the Washington dispute could not properly be brought to mediation because it involved a doctrinal disagreement.

Cardinal Shehan subsequently confirmed the Washington prelate's interpretation. He also noted that mediation was possible only when both parties to a dispute agreed to engage in it.

The implication of this second point, although the Baltimore Archbishop did not specifically say so, is that Cardinal O'Boyle was unwilling to seek a mediated resolution. By forwarding an appeal to the national conference of Catholic bishops, the priests' association tacitly agreed to mediation.

Canadian Ten-Year Camera Saga Subject of New York Exhibition

By DAVID PIKE

NEW YORK (CP) — Ten years of Roloff Beny's life went on public display here.

Ten years of roaming through Europe and Asia—scrambling over ruins in Greece and India, studying the moods, the "architecture of faces" of the famous and the anonymous. Through Canada, Honduras, Afghanistan . . .

Ten years of artistic observation and revelation through the viewfinder of a camera.

A 10-year retrospective exhibition of the celebrated Canadian photographer's work opened for two months at the Gallery of Modern Art under the patronage of Governor-General Roland Michener.

Coincidentally, it is the 10th major photographic exhibition of the Medicine Hat, Alta., native, now a Rome resident, who also has had 25 one-man exhibitions of his paintings.

The retrospective, titled A Visual Odyssey, shows some 250 black-and-white photographs in 10 thematic arrangements.

HONORED BY BOOK FAIR

Its opening follows by several weeks the selection of Beny's Japan in Color as "the world's finest book" by the International Book Fair at Leipzig, East Germany.

"It's an international recognition which is very gratifying, especially when you're in the middle of fighting with one's publisher at the moment of having a new book the way I want it," the 43-year-old Beny commented in an interview while working on the show at the gallery.

Beny's renown as a photographer can be illustrated by the reaction a few days ago of Jacob Malik, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, who requested a private preview of the retrospective.

At the end of three hours of looking but not saying much, Malik asked Beny whether he would consider showing the entire exhibition in Moscow next year.

BEING CANADIAN HELPS

"Of course," observed Malik, "there is a problem of you being an American."

"Well," replied Beny in his soft voice, "as a matter of fact I didn't know that was a problem, but I'm not an American, I'm a Canadian."

"Ah well! that's no problem at all," responded Malik, whom Beny says already has sent off his suggestion to the U.S.S.R. culture ministry.

As well, Beny says Malik also wants him to photograph ruined palaces and other archeological sites—rarely viewed by anyone—in the Soviet republic of Georgia.

"Perhaps I'm the keenest ruin follower," says Beny. "I find myself much more at home in the past than here at the present."

But he hopes the retrospective "does for once deny that rather tiresome observation that I don't photograph people."

SHUNS VIETNAM

Beny, who has photographed children in many countries, won't go to Vietnam because "I couldn't bear the thought that those young people are jeopardized and have only a destroyed nation to look forward to."

"It's really a subject I'm very distressed about; I'm certainly not alone on that score."

The Canadian high commission in New Delhi would like to have Beny's retrospective shown there a year from now when India celebrates the centennial of the birth of independence leader Mohandas Gandhi.

Beny currently is completing another photographic book, titled India, to be published next year. The Indian government has chosen it as the official Gandhi centennial book. Last year, Beny's To Everything There Is a Season was chosen by the Canadian government to be given to heads of state visiting Canada during the country's centennial.

India is the sixth book for which Beny has provided the over-all concept and the photographs.

CEYLON NEXT STOP

From here, Beny is off to Ceylon to do a book for the Ceylonese government. Then he's scheduled to do one for Iran, celebrating the 2,500th anniversary of the founding of Persia. Then it's on to Turkey to photograph more ruins.

For the following five years of his life, Beny will concentrate mostly in Asia on a book to be titled In the Footsteps of the Buddha.

Extensive Training In New Drama Course

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Acting ability and academic background will both be needed by students enrolling at the University of Windsor's new department of drama.

The course, leading to the degree of bachelor of fine arts in dramatic art, is the only one east of Saskatchewan designed to give extensive acting training. The drama department also has a three-year BA program with drama as a major subject.

But the new course is not exclusively for budding Sarah Bernhardts. Prof. Dan Kelly, head of the drama department, emphasizes that while students will be trained in acting they will not necessarily be trained only for acting careers. Graduates may also find niches in advertising, radio, television and teaching.

To qualify a student must have a good-enough academic background for the usual university admission standards. Then he must audition before two or three faculty members.

For the audition the student is given two contrasting characters to study, then asked to deliver a speech from each role. Auditioning also includes a sight reading and possibly a mime.

Of 78 persons who applied for the course so far, only 20 had been accepted just before classes opened.

ATTITUDES CHANGED

Prof. Kelly says parents no longer regard the stage as morally dangerous, but tend to ask: "How are you going to earn a living?"

It's a legitimate question. In Canada, even at the best of times, Prof. Kelly says, only about 15 per cent of available actors are working full-time. And these "lucky" ones earn an average annual salary of about $4,000.

"The students have to recognize this," says Prof. Kelly. "We have a talk with each student before he is admitted."

The advantage of a university course in acting is that actors will no longer have to forgo an education for practical training. At the University of Windsor prospective actors will not only get stage training but also an education they can put to use if they decide not to go into theatre.

Mixed Reaction Greets Uniform Car Insurance

TORONTO (CP) — A new standardized automobile insurance policy designed to reduce paperwork and lower premiums paid by Canadian motorists met mixed reactions Tuesday from a group of Canadian insurance men.

The new certificate of insurance, to be issued to motorists on their first policy renewal in 1969, does not spell out terms of coverage. These are to be distributed to the policy holder in pamphlet form, the annual conference of the provincial superintendents of insurance was told.

F. A. Swain, Manitoba insurance superintendent, said he had reservations about the new system since policyholders might find it more difficult to determine the extent of their coverage.

However, Donald Stewart of the Toronto Insurance Buyers' Association, said he had never known of a policyholder who had read his automobile insurance policy, and it is therefore unnecessary to issue more than the certificate of insurance.

Another insurance agent said the system would permit insurance companies to reduce their paperwork and to pass on savings to the insured.

The most significant innovation in the new standard policy is the provision of benefits for various disabilities, including loss of limbs, whether or not the policyholder was at fault in an accident where there were injuries.

Delegates were told this was the first step in Canada toward elimination of the concept of liability or blame in determining compensation for injuries or damage arising out of car accidents.

All provinces except British Columbia and Quebec have agreed to introduce a uniform automobile insurance policy Jan. 1, 1969. Delegates were told Quebec is to take steps before then to maintain uniform coverage in that province.

Counterfeit $10 Bills Found In City Area

City police have announced there are a number of counterfeit $10 bills in circulation and all spotted so far have the serial number T4716499.

One such bill was passed at a Brentwood Bay service station and deposited at a local bank who spotted it as counterfeit.

A warning circular sent to banks has the following description of the bills.

"All the bills have the same serial number and are printed on faceplate 17 and backplate 66. The plate numbers are tiny and located on the left near the border trim on each side.

"The planchettes, the small green dots, seem to fade if the bill is held towards a strong light.

"Pictorially, the Queen's picture seems darker, especially around the hair, and the mountain peak on the back has a black area on the left."

VETERAN POLITICIAN

Myrna Loy Plans HHH Campaigning

MYRNA LOY
. . . licks wounds

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Myrna Loy looks with faint amusement at the feverish political activities by film figures in this year's United States presidential election campaign. She can remember when the practice was not so popular.

The New York-based star has been here for her 103rd movie, April Fools, with Jack Lemmon, Catherine Deneuve and Charles Boyer. Her only regret over the assignment was that it kept her from attending the Democratic national convention, where she had hoped to work for her candidate, Senator Eugene J. McCarthy. "I'm still nursing my wounds over his loss," she said.

But she suspects that she will be campaigning for Democratic nominee Hubert H. Humphrey, "because I'm so concerned with the attack by Nixon and the Republicans on the judiciary."

Unlike some performers who have recently discovered political consciences, campaigning has long been a way of life for Miss Loy.

SUPPORTED CAMPAIGNS

Her father was a Republican, her mother a Democrat; the maternal influence prevailed. When Myrna was a reigning star at MGM in the 1930s, she lent her name to the campaigns of Franklin D. Roosevelt. This did not help her relations with the studio boss, Louis B. Mayer, whose personal hero was Herbert Hoover. She and Mayer had repeated battles.

During that period in Hollywood history, studio heads discouraged political activity by their stars, arguing that it would alienate a large portion of the movie audience. Miss Loy felt the company pressure in one notable instance.

One day in 1938, she and husband Arthur Hornblow were entertaining at their Malibu home. While the guests were frolicking on the beach, Myrna was listening to a radio speech from London by the Czech leader Jan Masaryk, who sadly reported the sell-out of his country at Munich. She was so moved that she dispatched a cable of sympathy to Masaryk.

"After the broadcast, he walked back to his apartment with Ed Murrow and the first message he received was mine," she said. "He sent me a cable of thanks, and he told the press of my message.

"The news got back to Germany, and my pictures were banned."

She received a sharp reprimand from the New York sales department of MGM. But it didn't change her attitude toward political activity.

Her public duties became intensified after her departure from MGM. In 1950, State Secretary Dean Acheson appointed her member-at-large on the U.S. commission of UNESCO, and she served for 3½ years. She campaigned with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt for Adlai Stevenson in 1956.

BURIED ALIVE; RETURNS ALIVE

SKEGNESS, England (Reuters) — Former nun Emma Smith returned from the grave Tuesday—claiming a world record for being buried alive. The 38 year-old mother of three children was lifted to the surface from her grave after spending 101 days entombed in her coffin. The previous record for being buried alive, of 61 days, was claimed by Irishman Mike Meaney.

Toronto Film Given Unique NY Reception

NEW YORK (CP) — The New York Times says Warrendale, the movie produced by Canadian Allan King, is so unusual it defies any attempt at conventional criticism.

The movie is an "extraordinary example of the kind of documentary movie that can now be made with equipment so portable and so unobtrusive that it apparently becomes an accepted fact in the lives of the people being observed," writes critic Vincent Canby.

Warrendale, which shared the 1967 International Critics Prize with Blow-Up at the Cannes Film Festival, opened a commercial engagement in New York Monday.

The documentary was produced in 1966 at a Toronto treatment centre for emotionally disturbed children. It was produced for the CBC, which later rejected it as too strong for home consumption.

Church Moderator To Be Honored Here

Dr. Robert Baird McClure, first lay moderator of the United Church of Canada, will be honored at a lunch meeting given by the Victoria presbytery in the Red Lion Inn Monday at 12:30 p.m.

Rev. Robert Morris, chairman of the presbytery, will preside. Dr. McClure, a missionary doctor in India for many years, will address a public rally in Metropolitan United Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

Pot-Pouri of Memories Enrich Maritime Visit

By ELIZABETH FORBES

OTTAWA, Ont. — Now my eyes are turned towards home!

Indeed, if all has gone according to schedule when you read this column I will be back in Victoria.

Forbes

Looking back over the past four months, I've had a wonderful journey from sea to sea. Experiences have been many and varied. The people I've met have been friendly and helpful.

These are things one does not soon forget.

I've tried, through these columns, to tell you something of the fun and the excitement as well as the interesting facts I have discovered about various parts of Canada.

It has been impossible however (because of space limitations) to tell you the whole story.

So it is that as I type this column in an hotel room in Ottawa, I turn back to the past, especially these last weeks, and think of so many interesting things I have seen or heard in the Maritimes and that I have had neither time nor space to pass on to you.

For instance:

The fact — that the spiral staircase which rises through two storeys in the old county courthouse in Saint John, New Brunswick, is unsupported except for its interlocking stones. Each of the 49 steps is fashioned from a solid block of stone cut and fitted in such a way that no central pillar is needed.

★ ★ ★

The fact that the Reversing Falls in the same New Brunswick city is really a reversing tide. Not a falls at all. "Somehow it was named falls away back in the early days and we're stuck with it," a man who lives there told us.

The fact that in Fredericton, capital city of New Brunswick, stands the first cathedral built in the Anglican communion since the Reformation. Indeed, it is said it is the first cathedral founded since the Norman Conquest.

Explanation is that many English cathedrals, as they now stand, have been erected since that great event on the site of earlier Christian edifices.

The fact that in the New Brunswick legislature Mr. Speaker doesn't wear the gown and tricorn. He is at his sartorial best in pin-stripe trousers, morning coat and top hat.

The fact that the press gallery in the New Brunswick Legislative Assembly is not suspended "between earth and heaven" as is traditional with the "fourth estate." Actually it is a press box and it sits right on the floor against the back wall of the Legislative Chamber.

The fact that Cape Breton Island has a museum to the memory of a giant Angus Macaskill who was nearly eight feet tall and weighed 425 pounds.

★ ★ ★

The fact that at one time the whole area of Prince Edward Island belonged to perhaps 50 or 60 land owners. Amongst them was David Stewart of Perthshire, Scotland, who received grants totalling over 70,000 acres.

He visited the property in 1831 and 15 years later his son Robert Bruce Stewart settled there as landlord at Strathgartney.

He imported many shrubs and trees, planting an arboretum and a garden cut out of the woods.

Here he lived as landlord of his large holdings until 1875 when the Land Purchase Act was passed and all landlords, absentee and resident, were required to sell their lands to either their tenants or the provincial government, with the exception of 500 acres.

Robert Bruce Stewart kept the 500 acres which is today Strathgartney Homestead, one of the most beautiful estates in Prince Edward Island.

The Stewart family continued to live there until 1955, when the last of the male line, Hon. W. F. Allen Stewart, member of the P.E.I. Legislative Assembly, died.

Today, the homestead has been restored by a holding company to the 1846 period and it is open in summer to visitors.

The fact that lobster taken fresh from the cold waters of the Atlantic Ocean, cooked and placed on a platter in front of you with picks, forks and a small tool for cracking joints and shells, is so different from lobster we get out west, it's impossible to find words to describe the taste thrill.

The fact that the Maritimes — and especially Prince Edward Island—have highways and secondary roads to equal anything in British Columbia.

The fact that while every province in Canada is interesting and exciting in their own particular way and that in the over-all picture they make up (with the two territories) a country of which we can all be extremely proud, British Columbia will always be my province—and Victoria my home!

BEWARE of the lions! That's just what tamer John Carr, 28, of Hugo, Okla., was doing, but the lion got out of control and mauled him at a performance of the Carson & Barnes circus in Port Morgan, Colo., Tuesday. Carr, who had been performing in the act for the past two years, suffered a fractured neck and face and back lacerations before being rescued. (AP Wirephoto.)

U.S. Educators' Trek To Canada Mounting

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

OTTAWA — American college and high school teachers flocking to take similar positions in Canada have reversed the former outflow to the United States, according to Canadian immigration officials.

Some 857 university professors and high school principals emigrated to Canada from the U.S. in 1967, a 400 per cent increase from the 208 in 1963. Figures for other teachers coming from the U.S. show a comparable increase, from 199 five years ago to 965 last year.

Near-parity in pay, with particular advantages for high school teachers, are usually listed by newcomers as reasons for moving, along with a slower pace of life in Canada and the opportunity for adventure.

Americans have congregated expecially in the Calgary and Edmonton areas of Alberta, where an oil boom and cattle ranching seem to exert "an attraction for Americans from the western U.S. Canada's new frontier in the north also appeals to some.

University teachers sometimes cite the more congenial community life in Canadian educational institutions, which are generally much smaller than their U.S. counterparts.

A few teachers also contend that there is greater academic freedom in Canada, although this is not regarded as necessarily a valid generalization.

Rain Ends Sasquatch Expedition

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sasquatch hunting has not lost its appeal for Rene Dahinden of Vancouver despite his failure to sight one of the legendary creatures during a soggy, 38-day hunt.

Dahinden and his two companions, Peter Murie, also of Vancouver, and Dennis Primmet of Victoria, returned Monday from their search north of Garibaldi Mountain with a report that incessant rain "made life too miserable to continue."

However, the hunt for the Sasquatch, the west coast's answer to the abominable snowman of the Himalayas, will resume when weather conditions improve.

"The more I'm out there the more convinced I am the Sasquatch exists," he said.

He said the three left their equipment in the bush and he will continue the search when he returns for the gear.

Space Rescue Studied For U.S. Astronauts

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —To save astronauts from a disabled spaceship, the United States has decided that for the foreseeable future a ground-based rescue rocket is too slow and too costly. Instead, it is studying bailout escape devices which spacemen can ride to earth.

Also under consideration are several suggestions for retrieving spacemen stranded on the moon, including a small flying machine that they could launch to a rendezvous with a spaceship in lunar orbit.

No matter what approaches are taken, an operational system won't be available for several years. Dr. George E. Mueller, associate administrator for manned space flight, said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will not be ready to recommend final design of a rescue or escape system until mid-1969.

Until something is perfected, the space agency will concentrate on making spaceships as safe as possible, including considerable duplication of critical systems.

THREE VICTIMS

A tragedy and near-tragedy focused attention on the problem. The Gemini 8 pilots had a close brush with death when their spacecraft spun out of control in 1966. Skilful flying saved them. The Apollo 1 three-man crew was unable to escape when its spacecraft burst into flames on a Cape Kennedy launch pad last year.

The fire resulted in a complete overhaul of the Apollo vehicle, now scheduled for its first manned flight in October.

After Gemini 8's tumbling trip, NASA contracted with several industrial firms to explore all aspects of space rescue and escape.

Three potential emergencies were described: equipment failure, human error, and collision with a meteor or other orbiting craft. Fire, explosion and loss of pressure were listed as the main dangers.

Study of large Air Force and NASA rockets showed that as many as six days might be required to effect a launch and rescue from the ground. Under best conditions, the time would be several hours.

SLAVERY ABOLISHED

New York state abolished slavery within its borders July 4, 1827.

Fortas Moves A Step Closer To Chief Post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The controversial nomination of Abe Fortas to be chief justice has been approved 10 to 6, by the Senate judiciary committee and sent to the floor. But its fate is uncertain because of a threatened filibuster.

After neary three months of wrangling, the committee cleared the nomination of Fortas, now an associate justice of the Supreme Court and the first Jew ever proposed for the nation's top judicial post.

Transplants Leaving Experimental Stage

By BURL OSBORNE

NEW YORK (AP)—Transplanting human organs is not a perfected art, but it appears to have become an accepted clinical treatment—not an experimental long shot—when vital organs fail.

And because doctors around the world are becoming less reluctant to try transplantation, the future for victims of irreversible heart, liver, kidney and lung disease appears brighter. They have a chance to live where none existed before.

Dr. Denton A. Cooley, who heads the heart transplant team at Houston, Tex., has said organ transplant is "no longer an experimental procedure."

"For the patient with end-stage heart disease, it has become an effective therapeutic measure to prolong and improve his life."

Similar Views

At the University of Colorado Medical Centre in Denver, where kidney transplants are done almost every week and two dozen liver transplants have been performed, Drs. Thomas E. Starzl and Lawrence Brettschneider took much the same view.

After noting efforts in liver, lung, pancreas and heart transplants, they wrote: "The possibility has never seemed brighter of treating patients who are dying from isolated failure of these organs, because the advances made with the simpler problem of renal (kidney) transplantation can probably be generally applied."

In California, a medical professor who last spring opposed heart transplants now says their success has convinced him he was wrong.

Dr. Elliot Corday now says: "The transplantation is here."

Corday, who teaches at the University of California, Los Angeles, is a former president of the American College of Cardiology.

Urged Moratorium

Debating with Dr. Christiaan Barnard last spring in Cape Town, South Africa, Corday urged a moratorium on heart transplants. Barnard performed the world's first heart transplant.

Corday said his original objection was based on the lack of a drug or other method for preventing rejection of the transplanted organ. He now says this was being solved with introduction of antilymphocyte globulin—ALG—which cuts down the rejection tendency.

About 1,200 kidney transplants have been performed since the first known attempt in June, 1950. How many of these patients still live is not known, but survival of more than 12 years has been reported.

At the University of Colorado, 214 kidney transplants have been performed since 1962, with 137 survivors.

Perhaps more significant is a survival rate of about 95 per cent among kidney patients who have had transplants at Denver since mid-1966, when improved tchniques of suppressing rejection were employed.

Technique Broadens

The lessons learned in kidney transplants provided the foundation for later attempts at transplanting the heart, liver, lungs, pancreas, spleen and thymus.

Statistics on survival are incomplete, but what is known gives rise to optimism. Among heart transplant patients, the longest survival has been nine months by Dr. Philip Blaiberg, a Cape Town dentist. His operation was performed by Barnard, who had done the first transplant at Cape Town a few days earlier.

By contrast, it took years before kidney transplants reached the level where doctors could offer a 50-per-cent chance of survival.

About 30 liver transplants are known to have been performed, all except a half-dozen in Denver. Perhaps half of these were done before improved methods of organ storage and immunosuppression were developed.

Of the latter group, there are a half-dozen survivors, including five in Denver. One patient lived 13 months before cancer—which destroyed her own liver—spread elsewhere and took her life. The new liver was functioning well at the time.

Problem Persists

The Denver team has performed two spleen transplants. In the most recent case, the new spleen was transplanted into a hemophiliac. Doctors reported it was alleviating the "bleeder" condition by producing an otherwise missing blood clotting factor until it ruptured and had to be removed.

Three of 10 lung transplant patients survive, and a patient who had a thymus transplant in 1966 still lives.

Pancreas transplants aimed at controlling diabetes; have been performed on a half-dozen patients and four survive.

Basic Problems

Despite the progress and the optimistic outlook, the basic problems, though eased, remain unsolved. These include overcoming the body's natural tendency to reject the new organ, finding ways to store a donor organ until it can be implanted, finding the donor organs to meet the supply of potential recipients, and matching tissue so that the chance of rejection is minimized.

The development of ALG has been the most significant recent advance in immunosuppression. Obtained from horses injected with human lymph nodes, spleen and thymus, ALG not only helps dampen the rejection tendency but allows smaller doses of the immunosuppressive drugs azathioprine—Imuran—and prednisone.

More Surviving

After the serum was developed and put into clinical use at the University of Colorado, the survival rate for kidney transplants after one year rose from 70 per cent to better than 90 per cent.

The problem of providing donor organs is complex, with problems ranging from supply and demand to ethical considerations.

It appears that supply, if there were no legal or moral obstacles standing between the potential donor organ and the surgery, would not be an unsurmountable difficulty.

The most likely donors would be victims of auto accidents, murders, suicides and the like.

But often by the time doctors manage the complex task of obtaining family and legal approval to remove an organ, it has been damaged beyond usefulness.

Doctors must decide when the donor patient actually is dead. Moving too quickly could result in suits or perhaps criminal charges.

The Council for International Organizations of Medical Sciences, meeting in Geneva in June, drew up guidelines for performing heart transplants that included criteria for determining death.

S. Africa to Set Transplant Rules

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters — South African heart transplant patients and their doctors in future will be guarded by the South African Medical Council from sensational publicity, Health Minister Carel de Wet said Monday.

He gave no details.

De Wet also said that because of sensationalism, the government has considered legislation on transplants for some time. He did not say if such legislation could be expected. Nor did he give any indication of the form it might take.

In a statement broadcast by the South African Broadcasting Corp., de Wet said he regrets that newspapers attempted to make what he described as sensational reports of operations performed in Cape Town and tried to show Dr. Christiaan Barnard and his team in a bad light.

Barnard's latest transplant operation, in which a 52-year-old white man was given the heart of a Negro woman, was criticized in some newspapers after it was disclosed that it was performed without the consent of the donor's family.

The family's consent was not sought because the woman could not be identified, it was claimed.

Regardless of the size or kind of tree, all height growth is due to cell division which takes place in the tip of a tree in a zone no larger than a raindrop, while diameter growth results from division of cells in a pencil-thick sheath immediately under the bark.

AWARDING of $25,000 award of merit to Dr. Bruce Chown, Winnipeg, professor of pediatrics and director of blood clinic at the University of Manitoba, has been announced by the Gairdner Foundation. Dr. Chown's award recognizes his contribution to the knowledge of human blood groups and his work in diagnosis, treatment and prevention of blood-cell disease of the newborn. (CP Wirephoto.)

Ottawa Seeks Rent Control Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — City council Tuesday voted 10 to 6 in favor of seeking legislation authorizing the city to impose rent controls.

Only 16 of council's 27 members were on hand when the vote was taken. Most of those who had left the council chambers had spoken against such controls during earlier debate.

Special legislation must be passed by the Ontario legislature before rent controls could be introduced.

City controller Ken Fogarty, appearing before Transport Minister Hellyer's housing inquiry Monday, said he had proof of landlords raising rents in one step to $140 a month from $85, and to $240 from $140.

Deadlock on Eve Of Vote in Japan

By SELIG HARRISON
The Washington Post

TOKYO — A deadlock between warring left and right wing factions has paralysed Japan's leading opposition party on the eve of a key election campaign in U.S.-controlled Okinawa.

The Socialist Party executive committee decided Monday that a cooling-off period of "at least" three weeks would be necessary before resumption of the party's stalemated national convention. Delegates returned to their constituencies Sunday after the conclave lapsed into confusion and bitter recriminations resulting from an impasse over the choice of new leaders.

Informed observers regarded the convention fiasco as a psychological damper on Socialist hopes in the Nov. 10 contest for chief executive of Okinawa. A Socialist teachers' union leader has been widely favored over an Okinawan official backed by Prime Minister Sato's ruling Liberal Democratic Party. Now Sato aides are mapping intensive electioneering by National Liberal Democratic leaders beginning in early October.

American military authorities have been anxiously eyeing the approach of the campaign, fearful that election of the Socialist candidate would lead to greatly intensified pressures on the island for its return to Japan and for the ultimate ouster of U.S. bases.

TALENT NIGHT PLANNED AT McPHERSON

A talent night will be held at McPherson Playhouse, Oct. 24, under sponsorship of the Children's International Summer Villages.

Performers picked for Oct. 24 will be judged by a panel and cash prizes will be awarded. Deadline for entry is Oct. 5.

A similar talent night held last fall drew many entries and a capacity audience.

Regulations and Land Tax Increases Stifling Growth of Badly-Needed Nursery Schools

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

While educators continue to emphasize the importance of pre-primary instruction, many privately operated nursery schools are finding themselves in financial difficulties.

In Victoria, the public school system provides part-time kindergarten classes for approximately 1,800 five-year-olds. But parents of at least another 600 five-year-olds, and all the younger children, must seek places for them in private nursery schools if the children are to have any pre-primary training.

These private nursery schools do not come under the jurisdiction of the department of education.

WELFARE INSTITUTIONS

Instead, the department of social welfare is responsible for licensing and inspecting the schools, along with other "welfare institutions," which must conform to a set of regulations designed to protect the children.

Unfortunately, as mentioned in a previous article, some of these regulations make it almost impossible for the small neighborhood nursery school to operate efficiently and profitably.

Now, larger schools, too, are finding it necessary to raise fees or close down.

The owners of one of the newest and largest nursery schools in Western Canada have recently spent more than $100,000 to provide a well-designed building attempting to conform to all the specifications of the Welfare Institutions Licensing Act.

But they have had to raise fees this year to cover expenses.

The regulations state, for example, that "individual cots which can be stacked, folded or otherwise stored" must be provided for naps. In other words it is no longer legal to let the children rest on clean mats on the floor.

EXPENSIVE NAPS

"These cots cost $12 each, and we need a minimum of 60. I wonder if the department of education provides them for the public school kindergartens?" one of the school's owners asked.

Another expense, almost prohibitive for the small school, is provision of "one toilet and wash basin of appropriate size for every eight to 10 children." Also required are "individual cubbies or lockers with hooks for coats and hats and space for rubbers," indicating that one cloakroom will not pass inspection.

No one questions the need for carefully inspected buildings and qualified supervision for pre-school children.

But most teachers believe there is need for review of some of the regulations which appear unnecessary.

COT BEFORE CHILD

"They're putting the cart before the horse," one teacher said. "Children are more important than cots, and a lot of the regulations are irrelevant." Other teachers felt that inspectors used to checking nursing homes and other welfare institutions failed to understand the needs of nursery schools.

The owners of the large new school, which also provides day-care facilities, admit they are in business, and are not a charitable institution.

"We feel that the only way to provide first-class nursery school facilities is through volume—and higher fees. It just doesn't work, trying to take a few neighborhood children and charging them $15 a month.

"Yes, we made money last winter, but we lost money this summer. We kept the school open as a day-care centre, but even with special classes in remedial reading, we hadn't enough pupils to cover expenses.

RAISE PAYS TAXES

"We've raised our fees to $27.50 a month for half days, and to $55 a month for all day care. (Some Vancouver schools are having trouble even though they're charging $65.)

"But the sad thing is that 40 per cent of this increase goes to pay land taxes."

This "welfare institution" fails to qualify for even partial exemption, since although it is "incorporated as an institute of learning" regularly giving to children "instruction accepted as equivalent to that given in the public schools," it is not "wholly in use for the purpose of furnishing such instruction."

The operative word is "wholly."

Because they provide much needed day-care, the owners are penalized to the extent of more than $3,000 in taxes. At ministerial level, they have been told the situation is under review, but no information is available as to what possible changes may be introduced at the next session.

It is ironic that provision of day-care centres heads the list of suggestions in submissions to the Royal Commission on the Status of Women. Government subsidies have been urged, but so far in this case the government takes rather than gives.

Fee raises also help increase teachers' salaries.

The school keeps a pupil teacher ratio of 15 to one, in spite of claims that fewer pupils per teacher would be more satisfactory. Providing a ratio of one teacher to every five pupils would, at a conservative estimate, shove fees up another $5 to $7.50 a month, even to pay a minimum wage to assistants.

FLOATING TEACHER

"We don't think the children would benefit that much. They like to work independently, and, frankly, we don't think they need that much more supervision.

"Of course we have a floating teacher to help wherever needed and there are always other adults on the premises in case of emergencies.

"There again, the small private school has the added expense of paying an assistant no matter how small the enrollment, for the regulations say 'there is need for two adults with each group at all times, indoors and outdoors, one of whom must be especially trained for work with pre-schoolers'."

Customs officers are adding their bit to the minor irritations of the nursery school operator. A teacher went to collect a parcel of pictures designed to be used with a work book. He was charged duty.

"If they'd been religious pictures they would have come into the country duty-free. Oh well."

Another teacher paid more duty than the pictures originally cost.

HALIFAX, TOO

While the Status of Women Commission travels around collecting numerous demands for more nursery schools and day-care centres, more schools are closing.

One in Halifax, a large school about to expand, was confronted with so many hampering regulations they couldn't meet, they simply closed the school. The Nova Scotia government had, for one thing, reserved the right to set fees.

Locally, one municipality is trying to find out how serious the situation is.

Alderman Edith Gunning presented a motion to Saanich council asking for a review of nursery schools. The motion was referred to the health and social services committee and a report is being prepared.

Then, as Alderman Gunning points out, "if we find there is real hardship, we should press for a relaxation of some of the rules for all private nursery schools in the municipality."

'The Pill' for Her Teen-Age Daughter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 16-year-old daughter is intelligent, pretty, and has a beautiful figure. This combination has the boys in her set spinning like tops.

So far we have had no reason to worry about her conduct, but there are thousands of parents who "thought" their daughters could be trusted, only to learn that all it takes is the "right" boy, the right time and the right place, and anything can happen.

For my own peace of mind, I want my daughter to start taking the pill. But when she asks "What for?" what should I say?

Our daughter has high morals and is thoroughly informed about the facts of life, but my husband fears that if she has the security of the pill she might be tempted to relax her morals when the "right" boy comes along.

I am speaking from experience, which is probably why I worry so much. In my case I was lucky. I didn't get pregnant. I did marry the boy, and I'm happy.

What should I do? Hope our daughter is lucky, too? Or should I insist on 100 per cent protection? My sister-in-law who has two teen-aged daughters says, "Wait until you think she really needs them, then insist." But I'm afraid by that time it might be too late. Forgive me for not signing my name.

MODERN MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: Yours is a good question, and one which I have been asked often. For a mother to give a 16-year-old daughter the pill for her own (the mother's) "peace of mind," implies first, lack of confidence in her daughter's dependability and moral judgment, and second, a surrender of her own control as a parent. It's unfair to the girl, for in effect you are saying, "I hope I can trust you, but just in case I can't, you may as well be safe." This type of temptation is very difficult for a normal 16-year-old to resist.

DEAR ABBY: I recently invited a life-long friend and her husband to a dinner party. I knew her little four-year-old grandson was staying with her while his parents were vacationing, but I purposely did not mention the child.

Then she told me that she was bringing her grandson! Now, Abby, this woman is a millionairess, and she could afford to hire a dozen baby-sitters.

I said it was going to be an "adult" party, and I emphasized "adult" so she would get the hint, but she ignored it. Well, she brought the boy, which didn't help my dinner party any. In fact, it ruined it. I don't dislike children, Abby. I have grandchildren of my own, but I don't allow them to attend my dinner parties.

What would you have done in a case like this?

FURIOUS WITH HER.

DEAR FURIOUS: I probably would have done just as you did—once. But not twice. You are really "furious" with yourself because you lacked the courage to ask your life-long friend to please leave her grandson at home.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Teacher Assigns Totem Pole Topic

By PENNY SAVER

I take the ancient adage about the prophet to mean that people know least about what is closest to them. This was certainly proven by one school teacher the other day. She decided to give each of her pupils a research assignment. One boy on my street was told to prepare a paper on the art of the British Columbia Indians. He knew nothing about the subject and didn't have the slightest idea where to start. He came to me for help because I was the only person he knew who owned any "Indian art," this being an Eskimo soapstone carving. He was surprised when I pointed out that the totem poles were examples of art and suggested that he try the new museum and the library. That either of these places should be concerned with "art" amazed him.

True, it was the child's first research project, and he could only learn by asking, but his questions pointed out to me how little I knew about the topic myself. I have lived right next door to the art of the British Columbia Indians for years, yet I don't even know the names of a dozen tribes! I decided to begin my own research project and bought the first of three books by S. W. A. Gunn. This book is called "Totem Poles of British Columbia—Stanley Park." I decided to buy the book, which costs 95 cents, because I am hoping that if it lies around the house long enough the other members of my family will casually pick it up and learn about totems too. As I said this is the first of three books and from the titles I would assume more books will follow. The second book, also 95 cents, is on "Kwakiutl House and Totem Poles." The third deals with "Haida Totems in Wood and Argillite." These books give the historical background of the totems and how to read the poles.

Book Offers Information Bargain

It occurred to me that since so little is known, even by British Columbia residents, about the native culture that books on the subject would make interesting gifts for my studious nephews and nieces in other parts of the world. Government agencies often put out books on this subject at quite a reasonable price. For instance, I saw one book for 50 cents called "Introduction to Our Native Peoples." This was "series one, volume one," so I assume there are other books out or following. This book included maps and illustrations. It deals with the customs, religious beliefs, dwellings, ceremonies and areas of influence of the different local Indian tribes. Such a wealth of interesting information at such a low price is a bargain indeed.

Gladys' twins are almost indistinguishable and their new teacher has had a terrible time telling them apart. Finally their mother decided to lend a helping hand by buying each girl a durable name-tag. The 49-cent name-tags come in different bright colors with the name printed in either gold or white. There were many names to choose from and almost every nickname as well, so Gladys had no trouble finding the two she needed. A catch-pin holds the tag on at the back. Fortunately the two tags are different colors so teacher just has to look at the color to see which twin she is addressing. The other children of the class became jealous of the name pins and bought pins of their names as well. It was then that we learned these tags can be ordered if a special name not ordinarily available is wanted.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where to shop for these items.

Typical of the trend to mate male and female couture is this duo, which features a Persian lamb coat with fitch frosting and belt (at left) and a cape with military flavor, made of Persian lamb and edged in dark lamb. A New You

by Emily Wilkens

In the New You Mail Bag:

Dear Emily Wilkens:

BATTLE THAT BULGE

On the outside area between my hips and the sides of my thighs, I have a bulge which sinks in. This look is very unsightly in straight skirts or pants. Can you give me a 900-calorie diet and an exercise which will help slim down this area?—W.H.

Diet and exercise can effectively work hand-in-hand to eliminate your special difficulty, W.H.

Personally, I don't believe counting calories is the soundest way to diet. Whereas, 900 calories of candy, for example, will lead to malnutrition, 900 of steak will provide body-building protein. Many people enjoy good results with a high-protein, moderate-carbohydrate, limited-fat diet which helps to slim and firms up the body as well.

Here is a simple, sound diet to follow for a week or two—as with any diet program, check with your doctor before beginning.

Breakfast: Eggs boiled, poached or scrambled in a teaspoon of unsaturated oil; one piece of protein toast; and ½ cup of skim milk, tea or coffee.

Lunch: Salmon, tuna or sardine salad with lettuce and tomato and lemon-oil-vinegar dressing.

Dinner: One-half pound portion of meat, fish or poultry plus a small salad and one cooked vegetable.

During the day, you should have ½ grapefruit, one orange or ½ cantaloupe, as well as 1½ cups of skim milk.

With this diet you'll not only look better but you'll feel better, too.

To smooth out your problem hips, lie down with arms out and palms up, bend knees over the chest and roll from side to side on that area at least 100 times a day.

STOP THOSE SPOTS

My problem is freckles, especially on my face. How can I prevent them? And what kind of makeup can I use to cover them up but still keep a natural look? — K.B.

An ounce of prevention is the best rule where freckles are concerned. The only way to prevent them is by keeping out of the burning rays of the sun (between noon and 3 p.m.). Freckles can blossom on an unprotected face even on a hazy or windy day. Keep your face covered with a sunblock type of base. It's safest to use a non-allergenic, non-creamy one. Inquire about these special products available at your pharmacy or department store cosmetics counter and you should be able to select the right one for you from the many possibilities on the market.

PROCESS PRACTICE

I'm planning to put straightener on my hair and then color it. Should I wait a few days between these processes?—J.B.

Definitely! Don't just wait a few days but give yourself a few weeks between straightening and coloring. Straightening is very hard on all types of hair so be sure to treat yourself to a few conditioning and-or hot oil treatments before subjecting it to the extra chemical process of adding color.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Many External Factors Affect Your Self-Control

Let us suppose that you are in a relatively swanky restaurant. As you study the menu, a waiter comes by and introduces the International Relish Tray which he wheels in front of him. Upon inquiry, you find that for one dollar you may have a sampling of any or all of the 30 relishes swinging invitingly before you in their silver dishes.

Lowman

These include plump white asparagus, crab meat, clams, caviar, assorted cheeses, and even a tray of little rum cakes (before dinner?). What do you select? Do you choose three or four of your favorite appetizers, or do you find the whole assortment irresistible and crowd as much onto your plate as possible?

The results of recent research conducted by Dr. Stanley Schachter, a psychologist, and other scientists at Columbia University, permits us to predict that the obese person would probably be unable to make a controlled selection of relishes, because he would be confronted by such an attractive visual display in a convivial setting at dinner time.

The appetites of most people of normal weight appear to be primarily regulated by internal factors. That is, they eat when they are hungry and then eat only as much as they need. Dr. Schachter's research also indicates that the obese person's appetite appears to be stimulated by a complex of external factors such as the sight, smell or taste of food, the time of day and the setting.

For instance, the obese person is likely to eat much more food if he or she thinks it is 6:30 p.m. and dinnertime than if he thinks it is 5:30 p.m. and before dinnertime. When removed from everyday life to a bland diet or a relatively dull setting, such as is present in a hospital, the obese person seems to lose some of his passion for food and may begin to lose weight. These same studies indicate, however, that such people are apt to regain weight as soon as they return to a normal way of life.

The exercise of self-control always seems to be an elusive and unattainable goal for these folks. They might be more successful dieters if they made an effort to control the external factors. If you recognize the characteristics of the obese person in yourself or a member of your family, watch for tomorrow's column which will help you manage your life so as to avoid some of the temptations.

Counting calories is a vital part of most diets. If you would like Josephine Lowman's free leaflet, "Calorie Chart," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

COOKING CAN BE FUN

Recipe for Peach Turnovers Puts Anyone in the Big Time

Mrs. Chalecki is Laura's mother. Laura is secretary to my sister Doris. Laura's mother made Blueberry Turnovers and sent some to Laura's family and she gave some to Doris. I was invited to my sister's home for dinner and ate two. Right then I knew I had to have that recipe. Mrs. Chalecki described the process to Doris for me. I had ripe peaches that needed to be used so I substituted them for blueberries.

Moore

The peach turnovers were grabbed by my guests for they came from the oven as the guests came through the door. You must make them. They rival French croissants in deliciousness.

POLISH PEACH TURNOVERS
(about 42)

Dough: One package granular yeast, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ cup lukewarm water, 1 cup scalded milk, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup shortening, 5½ cups sifted all-purpose flour (divided—see below), 2 eggs.

Filling: three cups sliced peaches (packed), ¾ cup sugar. 3 tablespoons minute tapioca.

In large mixing bowl soak yeast with sugar and water 10 minutes. To scalded milk add sugar, salt and shortening and cool to lukewarm. Add to risen yeast liquid along with 4½ cups of flour. Add eggs and beat at least five minutes. Scrape down sides of bowl, cover and let rise until more than doubled.

Now make Filling by combining prepared peaches, tapioca and sugar and cook stirring until boiling and one minute longer. Cool.

When dough has risen sprinkle kneading board with remaining one cup flour and knead most of it into the dough for about 2 or 3 minutes. Roll dough out very thinly to 20" x 30" sheet. Cut out with 4" round cutter. (I used the coffee canister lid dipped in flour.)

Near one side place the 1 tablespoon (no more) cooled peach filling. Moisten edge and fold over other side to make a turnover and carefully seal edge with heavy fingertip pressure. Transfer with lifter to buttered baking sheets at least 2½" apart.

Brush tops with 1 egg beaten with 1 tablespoon water. (You will see that this fussy handwork is the reason for the high cost of fancy rolls and buns at bakeries.)

Let rise until puffy and light 1 to 1½ hours.

Bake two pans at a time at 425 Deg. Fahr. about 12 minutes, switching pans or shelves at halftime.

After making these you will realize you are in the Big Time Baking League.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We regret that it is impossible to personally thank each of our kind friends who sent us beautiful cards and messages of sympathy and consolation, in the death of our beloved son. A burden shared is made lighter, and your kindness has comforted us, and will be long remembered.—Harold and Dorothy Brooks.

9 IN MEMORIAM

MITCHELL, Robert—Passed away Sept. 18, 1967.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Margaret and family.

SMITH — In loving memory of a wonderful dad and mother — Ira Francis, who passed away Sept. 18, 1967, and Dorothy Millicent, who passed away Mar. 7, 1967.
—Sadly missed by their sons and daughters, Gordon, Ronald, Dorothy, Beverly, Diana and their families.

Unsurpassed in quality and planning to give the utmost comfort and convenience in this modern, yet traditional Spanish home of 2,400 sq.ft. A personification of prestige results by natural waterfalls on property of 100x170, plus overlooking miles of the blue Pacific, enhances the architectural beauty of the sparkling exterior design, while the equally attractive interior provides an unusual functionality.
A renowned Toronto firm of interior decorators has given a unique ensemble of walls, light fixtures, plus luxurious carpeting, has kept this Spanish welcome, yet modern in every way. Main floor consists of an impressive foyer entrance, with closet for wraps, mammoth entertaining room of 14x23, with red brick, floor to ceiling fireplace with raised hearth. fight his administration's battles in Ottawa.

The Socred caucus also has been rebellious for the past two sessions with an unprecedented number of government backbenchers making speeches against cabinet and even the premier's own position — notably a concerted attack on government liquor policies which took place while Mr. Bennett was absent from the Legislature.

Backbenchers also revealed that the caucus' first-ever successful rebellion against Mr. Bennett forced the resignation of highways minister Gaglardi last session.

Some party members expect Mr. Bennett's star to continue declining with increasing momentum at the coming convention because of the still-simmering aftermath of the Gaglardi episode, cutbacks in school construction, the departure of Robert Bonner from the cabinet and the drop in popular vote as well as the loss of a seat in this year's four byelections.

Bus Run Changes Hands; May Hike Service

Sooke Stages Ltd. has taken over the Happy Valley and Langford bus runs.

Roy Montgomery, president of Sooke Stages said today he hopes to improve service on these runs, formerly operated by Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

"It will take a few days before our drivers are really familiar with the new routes, and I hope the passengers will bear with us until we're all straightened around. But I'm sure we'll improve the service before long."

The bus schedule will remain unchanged with seven daily trips to Langford (except Friday when there are eight), and five daily runs to Happy Valley.

Highway Washed Out

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Heavy rain Tuesday washed out four stretches of the Trans-Canada Highway near this centre 250 miles northeast of Vancouver. However, traffic was back to normal later at the sites, seven, eight, 10 and 12 miles west of here.

HOME GARDEN

Many Uses for Hedges

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hedges serve many more purpose than to form protection at the boundaries of a gardener's property.

Hilda

There are the intersting small hedges, short in stature and short in length which act as dividers or accent pieces within the garden.

It's fascinating to think that these hedgelets, if we may coin a word, may be of practically any texture and color which we may desire.

We use room dividers in large rooms in order to create cozy corners for furniture grouping, at the same time having the advantage of air spaciousness that goes with the greater overall dimension.

Outdoors a similar use can be made of hedgelets to break up a flat plot of ground on which the gardener visualizes a garden unique to his own personality.

An elbow-high hedge six feet in length at right angles to a house or garage wall would indicate the commencement of a sitting out area, or it might form a little wind screen for a special shrub or a grouping of winter blooming bulbs.

A terrace on a high point of the home property needs a boundary to give those using it a sense of security. It should be waist high at the edge, or lower if the view is seen most often from a sitting position.

Steps on high ground often require a small hedge each side for the same reason. The narrower the steps, the greater the need for re-assurance of safety.

Variety in texture and color can be achieved by selection of plant material to suit the purpose and location. Shrubs with foliage remaining in good condition over winter, and amenable to perhaps a couple of trimmings each year seem to me most desirable.

When only a half dozen or so plants are involved, the initial expense and the upkeep in work is not great.

YOUR HEALTH

Rh-Negative Mothers Can Be Helped

By Dr. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

For a number of years, it has been known some people show a special reaction to the blood of a Rhesus monkey, and so they are called Rh-positive. If they don't react, they are Rh-negative. If a woman who is Rh-negative has an Rh-positive husband, and she gives birth to an Rh-positive child, and some of his blood has gotten into her body during the pregnancy, it can produce in her an ability to destroy Rh-positive blood cells in an infant. Because this change in the woman comes very late in the first pregnancy, the first child is not likely to be injured, but the second and perhaps all later children born to the woman are likely to suffer from a very severe anemia just after they are born.

Alvares

Now, a so-called fraction II gamma globulin has been produced—a part of the blood which has much to do with the processes of the immunity of our bodies to attacking agencies. When it is injected in the Rh-negative mother just after her first child is born, it keeps her from developing in her blood the antibodies which can destroy the blood of her next child. Already this treatment has reduced the danger to Rh-negative wives of Rh-positive husbands from 7 per cent to less than 0.1 per cent. It is almost certain now with this treatment of the mothers, the terrible anemias of the second and third children, immediately after birth, will be a thing of the past.

Drs. V. J. Freda, J. G. Gorman and Wm. Pollock of New York City told a while ago of trying this treatment on 180 women and getting uniformly good results. As yet, the doctors do not know whether the globulin will protect the third or fourth child.

Recently, Dr. Nylene E. Eckles, a woman physician, wrote of the several modern types of very powerful machines that produce X-rays with immensely greater energy than what used to come out of the old machines of 40 years ago. When I was just out of college, an X-ray machine gave out only a few thousand volts; later, the largest machines produced rays with a power of 200,000 volts.

Now there are machines that can produce perhaps 20,000,000 volts.

The X-rays produced by these machines not only have great ability to kill cancer cells, but less tendency to injure the normal cells, and particularly the cells in the skin. As a result, many of the people who, when years ago they had a cancer, could only be helped a little, can now have their lives greatly prolonged; and many can be cured.

★ ★ ★

Also, as most people know, the lives of thousands of women whose cancer of the breasts or wombs can be only partially removed, can now be lengthened with powerful X-rays. For a while, many physicians gave male hormones, but of late some have stopped giving them because of unpleasant "side-effects." Also, for a while many men operated and removed the adrenal glands above the kidneys, or the pituitary gland at the base of the brain. Today, some experts are not so enthusiastic about this. They say the removal can make life more bearable for the woman, but it cannot be expected to give her a much longer life.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Doctors Played Part In Role of Pioneers

By BOB BOWMAN

Some of Canada's greatest pioneers have been medical doctors who walked on snowshoes or paddled canoes to see their patients. Louis Hebert who went to Quebec with Champlain is said to have been Canada's first farmer because he grew vegetables and fed many poor people.

The first farmer on the Pacific Coast may have been John McKay, a medical doctor with the James Strange expedition to Vancouver Island in 1786. He was left there to spend a year with the Indians, and grew vegetables to try to improve their healthy. The inventor of kerosene was Abraham Gesner, a Nova Scotian doctor, who took a great interest in exploring and surveying. He made the most thorough geological surveys of the Maritime provinces between 1838 and 1848, and learned how to make kerosene from soft coal.

It was a medical doctor who was one of the men responsible for the building of the Hudson Bay Railway. Dr. Robert Bell of Winnipeg was convinced that if Canada did not act quickly to acquire the west from the Hudson's Bay Company the United States would do so. Furthermore, he was convinced that the most economical route between the west and Europe was by Hudson Bay. Even before the CPR was built, he surveyed the northern shore of Lake Winnipeg, the Nelson and Hayes rivers, and part of the coast of James Bay to try to find a suitable route for a railway. In 1880 he surveyed the Churchill River, and sailed from Fort Churchill to England in the fall of that year.

Of course the men who advocated the building of the Hudson Bay Railway were labelled as "crackpots." It was not until the election of 1908 that Sir Wilfred Laurier announced that a railway would be built. Delayed by the First World War, it was not opened until March, 1929, and the first shipment of wheat from Churchill to Britain was on Sept. 18, 1931.

Other events on Sept. 18:

1608 — Pontgrave sailed for France leaving Champlain with 28 men to hold Quebec.

1663 — A sovereign council was formed to govern Canada.

1679 — La Salle's ship Griffon left Lake Michigan for Niagara with a cargo of furs and was never seen again.

1710 — Expedition sailed from Boston to capture Nova Scotia.

1759 — Quebec capitulated to British after death of Wolfe and Montcalm.

1762 — St. John's, Newfoundland, was retaken by British.

1867 — Federal and Nova Scotian elections were held on same day.

1875 — Supreme Court of Canada was organized.

1885 — Compulsory vaccination caused riots in Montreal.

1961 — Electronic survey was completed outlining legal limits of Canada.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Mike Cordova, age 9, of Santa Rosa, California, for his question,

How do they make vinegar?

This job takes us down, down to the world of tiny-tiny things that are too small for our eyes to see. Some are teeming atoms and molecules. Some are midget living things called molds and yeasts and bacteria. We put the right ingredients together and just let these tiny things change them into tangy tasting vinegar.

Making vinegar is a chemical process somewhat like the cooking process that changes tacky dough into spongy, sliceable bread. The process is fermentation and we say that word as if it were spelled "fur-men-tay-shun." This fascinating fermentation is happening all around us and the wonderful world of growing things could not get along without it. It happens when certain busy chemicals get together and change each other into chemicals that are quite different. We can see, smell and taste the results of fermentations. But because chemicals are made of atoms and molecules, we cannot actually see these tiny workers perform their magic changes.

Some fermentations are caused by chemicals called enzymes. There are enzymes in your stomach to change your food so that its nourishing chemicals can be dissolved and carried around by your blood stream. Some fermentations are triggered by yeasts, molds and bacteria. To see these living midgets we must enlarge them under a microscope. We need yeasts to ferment tacky dough into digestible bread. We need bacteria to change milk into cheese and buttermilk. We need other bacteria to make vinegars from apples or grapes, melons or molasses, berries or cereal grains.

The homesteading pioneers made their vinegar and their soap right out in the back yard. To make vinegar, they started with a big oak barrel of fruit, grain or molasses and water. Then they let the natural process of fermentation take its time. The vinegar was ready in one or two years. The pioneers did not know that the fermentation was triggered by tiny bacteria. Or that the ingredients in the barrel always teem with assorted bacteria—and some were the right ones to make vinegar. If they had known these things, they could have helped the bacteria to ferment faster. Our clever chemists have shown us how to change a tank of ingredients into vinegar in a couple of days.

Vinegar Boiled

A modern factory has whirling electric generators that can turn out 1,000 or 2,000 gallons of vinegar in a few days. The busy bacteria need warmth and lots of moist air. So the warmed liquid ingredients are whirled through corncobs, cindery coke or other spongy materials that are riddled with pockets of air. The busy bacteria ferment fast, changing sugary chemicals into alcohol and bubbles of carbon dioxide gas. Then the mixture is sprayed out in drops. The gassy bubbles go off and mix with the air. And the air changes the alcohol into a chemical called acetic acid. Plain white vinegar is just plain acetic acid. Apples in the mixture add the fruity flavor to cider vinegar, grapes give us sour wine vinegar and cereals add the dark color and rich flavor to malt vinegar.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Patti Rose, age 13, of Garden Grove, California, for her question:

What is the tomato worm?

It is natural for us to have our likes and dislikes but sometimes old Andy has to remind himself that all nature's children have a right to live on the earth. It is easy to like plants and animals that happen to be useful or friendly to us. But a few of them seem to be nothing but pests, like the tomato worm. Andy detested this greedy fellow in every way—until he remembered that nature has made most of her children beautiful, or at least interesting. The mother of the greedy tomato worm happens to be a big, velvety-winged beauty called a sphinx moth. Her slender, furry grey wings spread almost four inches wide. She wears a white belt and a double row of yellow buttons down her tail section.

The handsome mother lays her eggs on or near a tomato vine. When they hatch, the greedy grubs are near a plentiful supply of their favorite food. The wretched caterpillars are bright green to match the leaves, stems and young fruit on the tomato vine. You may not notice one until he has gorged himself fat and almost two inches long. When challenged, he rears up and the hooked spur on his tail looks far from peaceful. At last he drops to the ground and changes into a neatly folded crysalis of shiny purple. But during his wormy caterpillar days he may have destroyed a tomato plant.

LADY ROSE STEAMS DOWN ALBERNI CANAL

This Rugged Little 'Lady' Steams a Mean Route

By TERRENCE RITCHIE

PORT ALBERNI — A Pacific swell crashed against the little ship's bow, splashing through the porthole where Mrs. John Muntrufet had been reading.

"The sou'easters seem to be early this year," she said. "It could be a bad winter."

"But she'll still be going out like she always has. She's a pretty rugged little ship."

Mrs. Muntrufet rose from her seat in the below-decks lunchroom of the MV Lady Rose to close the porthole as another sea surged by.

Lady Rose had passed from the lee of some offshore islands and was plowing across Loudoun Channel north of the Alberni Canal with only the open Pacific to starboard.

Usually the ship takes a more protected run. But today there were two groups of American tourists on islands in the mouth of Barkley Sound to be picked up, so for 45 minutes the little coaster found herself in churning waters.

With Mrs. Muntrufet's husband, Capt. John, and co-owner Capt. Richard McMinn in command, it is still a smooth trip.

Mrs. Muntrufet turned from her view of the Pacific under a broodingly-overcast sky to serve coffee to one of the 20 passengers along for the ride from Port Alberni to Ucluelet. On alternate days Lady Rose also calls in at Bamfield —the return run takes from 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

'She's never missed one day in eight years," said the captain's wife.

★ ★ ★

Most of the passengers today are tourists wanting to spend a couple of hours in the fishing village of Ucluelet and see Long Beach without testing their car's worth on the logging road they would otherwise have to take.

An hour and a quarter out of Ucluelet, the 100-foot mail boat noses up the Imperial Eagle Channel.

You stand on deck, a bit entranced by your first passage, short as it is, across open ocean. Now and then the Glasgow-built bow sends up a spray that drenches you.

Despite a testy sky that unleashes periodic showers, you stay on deck with most of the other passengers to watch the vessel's progrss through the spatter of islands.

Small boats and Indian canoes put out to meet Lady Rose. They have passengers to pick up or put aboard, equipment to sent to Port Alberni for repairs, supplies and mail to collect.

★ ★ ★

Her services are important not only to summer people on the islands and to tourists, but to scores of loggers and fishermen along the route.

Despite this, there is a "through - the - looking-glass" feeling as Lady Rose steams into the inlet that looks like a great cup with lips of cloud curled over its mountain-rim.

Alberni Inlet, much like a fjord, is a natural salt-water canal slicing 30 miles into the Island. Hills along the shore continue their plunge out of the sky and to much as 900 feet below its still surface.

Smoke and finally the monstrous belching stacks of Port Alberni's mills signal the end of the 70-mile trip and Capt. Muntrufet eases his 30-year-old ship into her berth beside huge freighters loading plywood.

Immediate Work Ignored by Report

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank Ney Tuesday expressed disappointment that the Rawson and Wiles report on future development of the city offers no solution to immediate problems.

He said, "The ideas in the report will certainly stimulate thinking in our city but I'd rather see more of what we can do now, not 30 or 50 years in the future."

Mayor Ney criticized the planners' proposal for a bridge across Millstream.

He said, "It would cost the city about $1,000,000 and where would we get that kind of money?"

He said, the suggested closure of Commercial Street to vehicular traffic could not come about until there is more downtown parking.

Mayor Ney stressed he was speaking personally but he had hoped for more practical emphasis on present problems.

He defended city council's program of cosmetic effects such as red cement sidewalks and said, "It goes a long way to beautifying the city."

The report criticized what it termed "red cement, tub flower pots and walkways to nowhere."

The report also came in for criticism Tuesday from members of the Nanaimo Advisory Planning Commission.

Commissioner Geoff Matthews said, "What does this give us for $5,500 apart from a basic outline and some points that the average citizen already knows.

"I feel we got nothing for our money."

However Gino Sedola said, "Either you don't pay the $5,500 and stagnate or you accept the report as the essential first step and use it as a key to progress."

Frank Hodgson said, "The intent was not to endorse the plan but to get a report into circulation, especially to city council, to stimulate planning."

Options Too Costly, Board Told

NANAIMO — A supermarket company has withdrawn from plans to build a new store at Terminal Avenue and Princess Royal.

Realtor Bob Fawdry explained to Nanaimo advisory planning commission Tuesday land options increased too much in cost for Malkins Ltd. to continue their interest in the proposed development.

The project was to include a service station and the supermarket.

Members of the commission said collapse of the deal has produced exactly the situation the city wanted to avoid — another service station built on its own.

Fritz Schulze said it had always been agreed the store could only locate at the site if the oil company first bought the property and then made additional plots available.

He said Malkins did not want to pay the increased amounts being asked for the lots after the options had run out.

cations to the commission should be handled more quickly.

Mr. Fawdry said future appli-

Commissioner Frank Hodgson said later in the meeting: "Why is such a large, competent and wealthy group as the real estate board so disinterested?

"I have never heard of any efort by the board which would lead to the upgrading of the city."

Tofino Gets Larger Library

TOFINO — The Vancouver Island Regional Library has recently taken over the operation of the Tofino library.

The Library Board announced this change would make any of the 180,000 volumes in the regional library system available to Tofino residents.

Mrs. Ruth White has been appointed librarian.

Duncan Girl To Take Riding Course

DUNCAN — Susan Jaggers, 20, left today for a year's stay in England where she will be enrolled as a working pupil at a riding centre.

When she completes the course, Susan will qualify as an assistant riding instructor under the rules and requirements of the British Horse Society.

Susan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jaggers, Cowichan Lake Road, and has been an active member of Cowichan pony and riding clubs for several years.

She will attend the Yorkshire Riding Centre at Markington near Harrogate.

Susan was organist at St. Mary's Church, Somenos, and conductor of the new junior choir there.

An all-round athlete, Susan was vice-captain of the Cowichan Grass Hockey team last season and is a holder of the Royal Life Saving Society's bronze medallion.

Game Club Formed

TOFINO — The newly formed Long Beach Fish and Game Club elected officers at their first meeting last week.

Jimmy Bradshaw was elected president; Norman Winters, vice-president, and John Bruce, secretary-treasurer.

Jack Toovey, Ken Gibson, Michael White and Hank Doerksen are on the executive.

Paper Mill Experts To Discuss Problems

CROFTON — Sixty-five paper mill superintendents and assistants from 35 mills in western Canada and the United States were to gather at Crofton Pulp and Paper Ltd. today to visit the newsprint operation.

After touring the operation they were to convene at the Commercial Hotel, Duncan, for a day and a-half of discussion and exchange of information on papermaking tecniques and problems.

These semi-annual meetings are hosted by a different mill each time.

The advanced registration of 65 people for the Crofton visit was the highest on record.

Most northerly representation was from Prince George and most Southerly from Antioch, California.

Assistant manager Bill Reynolds was to officially welcome the delegates and Howard Graham, paper mill superintendent, was to moderate the discussion session.

Fertilizer Drop Starts

Fertilizer dropped from the sky will fall on Duncan area forest this week as part of a MacMillan Bloedel trial to improve crop yield.

Crop-dusting Stearman aircraft — vintage biplanes operated by Skyway Air Services—, completed fertilizer drops at MB's Northwest Bay and Kelsey Bay logging divisions at the weekend.

Thty were to cover the Copper Canyon division to complete the program this week.

Trials have been done from time to time on MB lands since 1954, to determine the extra volume of wood growth which can be stimulated by fertilizer. The amount used varies between 100 and 300 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

Response to this year's trial will be measured in 1973, 1978 and 1983, the federal forestry department co-operating.

Forty tons of fertilizer for about 175 acres of forest were to be dropped in loads of 1,300 pounds per plane per trip.

Aircraft fly at little more than tree-top height, spreading fertilizer over a 70-foot swath, leaving control strips between fertilized trees.

Results will show whether large-scale use of fertilizer is justified.

Ferry Resumes Hourly Service

VESUVIUS BAY — After many complaints about bad service the ferry authority has reinstated the Crofton-Vesuvius ferry to its former one-an-hour service.

Service was cut in the spring to eight sailings a day. There will continue to be a one hour-layoff at noon so ferrymen can have lunch, and one late sailing on Friday.

The schedule of the Sechelt Queen, sailing between Long Harbor and Tsawwassen, is also changed to off-season service of twice daily service instead of three trips daily.

•

Parks, But No Facilities

GANGES — "Unless we get some sort of government assistance for the construction of a public toilet we'll have to build one ourselves," president Gavin Reynolds told the Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce this week.

"Surely we're entitled to some government financial support." he said. "We've got four large parks, all donated, and not costing the government a penny in upkeep."

A provincial campsite in Ganges was also donated but is maintained by the Provincial Parks branch.

"We have a serious problem here," he said, "with tourism increasing every year, and there is not one public toilet, aside from outside privies, in the provincial campsite."

Mr. Reynolds said in response to a chamber request the department of transport had issued a permit and plans for the construction of a public toilet to service the Ganges boat basin and Centennial Park.

However, DOT did not offer any money for its construction he said.

A luncheon meeting was planned to discuss the problem with MLA John Tisdalle and the minister of the department of travel industry, W. K. Kiernan.

'CP Faces Real Fight'

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank Ney said communities at the upper end of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo railway are ready to battle CPR to keep the passenger service in operation.

"We're going to make a real fight for this," he said Tuesday.

Mayor Ney said he was so "delighted" at the Canadian Transport Commission order that the service be maintained until a public hearing could be held, "I am sending off a complimentary letter of appreciation."

"There seems to be more and more evidence that there is a very strong body of public opinion in opposition" to the CPR application to discontinue the dayliner run which makes return trips between Victoria and Courtenay six days a week.

"I think we have to make up our mind to make a stand on this," he said.

CPR applied to the federal commission to discontinue the service Oct. 12. The railway said operating costs are higher than revenue.

Mayor Ney said the run is a necessary alternative to highway routes as the Island's population and tourist industry continue to grow.

"Mind you, we're all to blame," for the CPR move, he said. "We've let it go too long."

"It's just like a tooth—you don't start to worry about it until it starts to ache."

Planning May Merge With Regional Board

The Capital Region Planning Board moved Tuesday towards a merger with the multi-purpose regional district board.

Under the proposal, which has to be approved by the seven municipal councils in the area, regional planning would become one of the functions of the regional board, chiefly responsible at present for the trunk lines and outfalls in the new sewer program.

Board directors agreed to table the draft letters patent to achieve this end, refer them to each municipal council for consideration and opinion and deal with the matter at the next CRPB meeting Oct. 22.

Board chairman, Mayor Gordon Lee of Central Saanich, said the draft letters patent are quite satisfactory and suggested the board approve them as a first step towards implementation.

But other board directors agreed that local councils should consider it first, present their views and then the board deal with the matter.

Mr. Lee emphasized that each council must approve the measure before it can go ahead and any council can opt out for its municipality.

One director, Victoria Ald. Ian Stewart, said he is concerned with protection of local autonomy in planning but the draft "does away with practically all my fears."

The draft proposal would:

● Enlarge the area encompassed by the Capital Region Planning Board to include all the electoral area of Sooke plus the Gulf Islands;

● Allow the board to continue its contract service for member municipalities and require that all expenses involved be borne by the municipality receiving this service;

● Make it clear that an officially-adopted regional plan could not designate land for sub-uses.

This means, explained board executive director Tony Roberts, that a plan may show general areas for residential development but could not show areas for apartments.

It was not expected that an officially-adopted regional plan would control such sub-uses as neighborhood shopping areas or community buildings.

"It deals with over-all concepts and not detailed municipal planning," he said.

Company Surprised By Move

GOLD RIVER (CP) — Members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada Tuesday decided to remain off the job at the Tahsis Co. Ltd. pulp mill here.

Union officials could not be reached for immediate comment but a company statement expressed surprise at the move.

The company said it had obtained assurance from the union and its president Orville Braaten "that all issues were resolved and that they would recommend the resumption of work to the membership."

The dispute arose a week ago over the company's right to schedule weekend maintenance work. The company said this is provided for in its contract with the union.

The remaining issue is a union claim for wages lost during the work stoppage, said the company, which has offered to put the matter to binding arbitration.

Bitter Accusations Deepen Impasse at Peace Talks

U.S. SENATE REJECTS GUN-LICENSING BID

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States Senate rejected today an amendment to the firearms control bill to require the registration of all firearms and the licensing of their owners.

Senator Joseph D. Tydings (Dem., Md.), calling the proposal an anti-crime and not an anti-gun measure, offered it as an amendment to a bill barring interstate mail order sales of rifles and shotguns.

Jail Head Residence Dynamited

MONTREAL (CP) — A bomb blast early today ripped the back porch off the home of Albert Tanguay, governor of Montreal's Bordeaux jail.

The explosion shattered several windows in the house, opposite the jail in north-end Montreal, and in neighboring houses.

Police said the bomb was made of two sticks of dynamite and was shoved under the porch. It exploded about 3 a.m.

Governor Tanguay said he believed "terrorists" set the bomb. He heard two cars pulling out of his driveway shortly before the blast.

Prisoners in the jail have been involved in a hunger strike for the last two weeks. There were reports that two accused terrorists, being held for trial, started the hunger strike by more than 350 prisoners.

Governor Tanguay has denied that a hunger strike had swept through the jail, but he told reporters:

"No matter what its status, the prisoners ate their supper last night."

Police found a typed note at the front entrance of the governor's house on Gouin Boulevard.

Written in French, it said:

"We heartily support Gagnon and Vallieres in the valiant fight they are waging by their hunger strike."

It complimented the "hundreds" of other prisoners who had joined the strike and ended with: "Vive la revolution. Vive le Quebec libre."

Charles Gagnon is currently on trial on a charge of conspiracy to commit an armed robbery of a north-end theatre in August, 1966. Pierre Vallieres was convicted of manslaughter in the death of a woman in a time-bomb explosion at a strike-bound shoe factory in June, 1966.

In the Gagnon trial the Crown has alleged that the attempted theatre robbery was to raise funds for the terrorist Front de Liberation Quebecois.

BLAMES FLQ

Governor Tanguay said he believed "the FLQ is to blame" for the bombing of his porch, which was shattered into a pile of broken wood and glass.

A police spokesman said: "It may be connected with a hunger strike by the inmates, although this seems a rather drastic step for them to take."

The hunger strike story reached the courts Tuesday when a man fainted in Sessions Court because he said he was weak from a lack of food at Bordeaux jail.

Edouard Lefebvre, 29, was appearing on a charge of car theft.

He told Judge Marcel Gaboury he and several other Bordeaux prisoners had been on a hunger strike since last week "because the food they serve us is plainly inedible . . . unfit for human consumption."

Lefebvre was convicted of the charge and is to be sentenced Oct. 10.

SENATE PLANS POVERTY PROBE

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A poverty study may be undertaken by the Senate.

A broad study of all aspects of poverty in Canada was recommended last week by the Economic Council of Canada in its fifth annual report. It claimed that nearly 5,000,000 Canadians are poverty stricken.

Sen. David Croll, Toronto, an active and influential Liberal member of the upper house, gave notice today in the Senate of his intention to move to set up a special committee. It would be empowered to investigate and report on all aspects of poverty.

The terms of reference he proposed are contained in his motion: "To define and elucidate the problem of poverty in Canada and to recommend appropriate action to ensure the establishment of a more effective structure of remedial measures."

The committee would be asked to report on all aspects of poverty, urban, rural, regional or otherwise.

It could engage the services of such counsel staff and technical advisers as necessary. It would have power to send for persons, papers and records and to examine witnesses and report from time to time. Mr. Croll suggested 17 senators be named to make up the committee.

The Senate has in the past been asked by governments to carry out in-depth studies of the type normally entrusted to royal commissions. It was such a Senate inquiry in 1961 that cleared the way for introduction of the ARDA project.

Terrorism Try Claimed by U.S.

PARIS (AP) — American and North Vietnamese envoys traded bitter accusations about each other's war aims today, deepening the deadlock already snarling the peace talks.

United States Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance charged Hanoi is trying "to terrorize and coerce" the South Vietnamese into accepting communism. Those attempts are futile and will fail, he said, because of the resistance of "the vast majority of South Vietnamese."

Ambassador Xuan Thuy countered with the claim that American protestations of peace are aimed only at masking an escalation of the war. He asserted also the U.S. is out "to perpetuate the partition of Vietnam."

Not a shred of visible progress marked the 2½-hour session although both sides arranged to meet again next week.

Vance said at the 22nd session of the Paris peace talks that both the Viet Cong and its National Liberation Front were created and are controlled by the Hanoi government.

"Neither the regime in Hanoi nor its agents in South Vietnam can achieve their political goals through the use of force," Vance said.

Vance urged Xuan Thuy, chief North Vietnamese delegate, to accept Washington's invitation to join in a program to "reduce the level of violence" in Vietnam as the start of a process of withdrawing all troops from the South—"yours as well as ours."

Earlier Vance brushed aside a public call by United Nations Secretary-General U Thant for a halt of the bombing of North Vietnam.

Before entering the session, Vance told reporters: "Mr. U Thant knows our position very well. Our position is that we are prepared to stop the bombing when we have reason to believe that the North Vietnamese seriously intend to move with us to de-escalate the fighting and to move toward peace."

Nigeria Steps Up Big Push

LAGOS (Reuters) — Federal Nigerian troops are pushing toward Umuahia, breakaway Biafra's last major town, and the city may fall in seven to 10 days, informed sources said today.

The push follows the capture of Owerri two days after an eight-hour assault with heavy armor and infantry led by Col. Benjamin (Black Scorpion) Adekunle, commander of the 3rd Marine Commando Division.

Federal reports here said the Biafrans fought tenaciously for Owerri. Federal troops holding Aba, captured 12 days ago, were moved in to help hold Owerri.

No federal troops were killed or wounded, the reports said, adding that civilians who had fled into the bush are already returning to their homes.

Radio Biafra said today Russian-built Ilyushin bombers of the federal air force made raids on Umuahia, killing five persons and destroying several homes.

Radio Biafra also said the Ilyushins bombed a village in Owerri province in what it called "the most dastardly raid of the civil war." A rocket attack on the local market place killed 510 persons and wounded twice as many, some seriously, it said.

The name of the village could not be heard because of partial federal jamming of the broadcast.

Grits Lashed, Win Test Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition pummelled the Trudeau government verbally all day Tuesday but lost the match as the government easily won its first confidence vote of the new Parliament.

The test came in the first roll-call vote of the session on a New Democratic non-confidence motion.

The score: Liberals 145; opposition 101.

A united opposition supported the NDP motion criticizing the government for not responding to Canada's social problems, "including housing, urban development, unemployment and poverty."

The motion was made as an amendment to a Conservative motion which will come to a vote Thursday night.

MEET TODAY

Creditiste MPs were to meet today to decide whether they will introduce their own motion, which also would be voted on Thursday night.

In Tuesday night's vote 67 Conservatives, 20 New Democrats joined in opposing the government.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons is: Liberals 155, Conservatives 72, NDP 21, Creditistes 14, Independent 1, Vacant 1.

On Tuesday's second day of the eight-day throne speech debate the government took the most consistent pasting on its agricultural policies, particularly those concerning western wheat.

LIBERALS BACK PM

The few Liberal speakers in Tuesday's debate kept their speeches short and non-controversial. They expressed their confidence in the leadership of Pierre Elliott Trudeau and their gratitude to their constituents for sending them here.

In his maiden speech Ray Perrault, former British Columbia Liberal leader who defeated NDP leader T. C. Douglas in the federal riding of Burnaby-Seymour, laid down a challenge Tuesday to the views of the Bennett government on confederation and the constitution.

PERRAULT
. . . bilingual speech

In sharp contrast with the position of the provincial government, stated repeatedly at federal-provincial conferences, that B.C. takes a "pork chop" approach to confederation, Mr. Perrault said people of B.C. are as concerned about national unity as we are about economic growth.

Mr. Perrault, who spoke in French as well as English, charged that "some of those who claim that they are speaking for our province seem to think that there is an impassible stone wall between British Columbia and the remainder of Canada."

He said most of the people of the province "are ready to strengthen the ties of confederation and make all necessary adjustments which could be required in the process."

Some people were afraid of being forced to speak English or obliged to speak French, Mr. Perrault said in French. But he said the Canadian of tomorrow "should know English, French and as many other languages as he can assimilate."

Czechs Show Daring, Open West Frontiers

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

PRAGUE — The durable Czechoslovak Communist regime waxed ever more confident Tuesday in its rear guard action against the Kremlin super-power on its soil.

In a remarkable display of bravado, the government approved the opening of the blocked western frontiers as well as complete normalization of tourism with western Europe, an inflow which has been cut to a trickle at Soviet behest since the Aug. 21 invasion.

Meanwhile, the Czech leaders have demanded that the Soviet military authorities order a halt to a series of incidents in which journalists have been intimidated in violation of the Kremlin's promise of safety for progressives and intellectuals.

The protest against the incidents was made at a secret meeting with the Soviet high command in Prague, called at the request of Premier Oldrich Cernik. Among those representing the Czech position was deputy premier Frantisek Hamouz, who is respected by Moscow and who has been taking an ever-larger role in matters concerning the press since the invasion.

According to reliable informants, the Czech complaint dealt with the 24-hour seizure over the weekend of the progressive chief editor of the Ostrava Pape, Nova Svoboda, and with repeated firm "invitations" to the editor of the Prague daily Malda Fronta, to visit the Soviet military command this week.

The Malda Fronta editor, Miroslva Jelinek, was telephoned Monday and Tuesday by the Soviets and on both occasions refused the invitation after conferring with Czech government officials.

Amnesty Granted In Liberal Move

By HANS BENEDICT

BUCHAREST (AP) — Romania's Supreme Court announced today the rehabilitation of four former Communist party leaders and a group of prominent non-Communist victims of Stalinist trials in an apparent move toward some liberalization with distinct anti-Soviet overtones.

The party leaders, who served as central committee secretaries before their purge in 1954 on charges of economic sabotage and political deviation, include Vasile Luca, a Moscow-trained trade union chief condemned to death and later pardoned. He died in prison in 1960.

The second group, mostly engineers and administrators, received death sentences or long prison terms in the infamous Danube Canal trial of 1952, reported to have been staged on orders from the Kremlin following failure of a Soviet-sponsored Danube Canal project on the Black Sea coast.

The Supreme Court ruling published in the Communist party newspaper Cinteia said the charges and verdicts against both groups were "illegal and without justification" and the "innocence of these sentences was clearly established." It was not known how many of them are still alive.

Trustee Blasts Aldermen On One-Sided Probe

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

VANCOUVER — The usually-placid prelude to the annual convention of municipal governments was shattered this morning by an incisively-critical school trustee.

J. M. Campbell, Saturna Island, vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association was the man who foresook friendly greetings to attack the Union of B.C. Municipalities' pet project.

Delegates already had in their hands a comprehensive report describing a now-in-progress study of municipal and provincial financing being paid for by the UBCM and the provincial government. The study has been described as a "massive and exciting undertaking."

Mr. Campbell, the fifth speaker of the morning invited to extend greetings, chose the opportunity to tell the 1200 delegates that the terms of reference for their study could only be regarded with grave suspicion by school trustees throughout the province.

"I know that there are times when school trustees fail to realize that their expenditures affect and sometimes curtail other municipal projects" Mr. Campbell said.

"But it must also be stated that it is not always understood by municipal councils that their expenditures can often be the straw that breaks the taxpayer's resolve to support education."

Mr. Campbell stated that any study of municipal financing which excluded representatives of school boards could only lead to controversy.

"This study has been termed the third round of a fight to get a better understanding of municipal financing. It will not be the last round unless school trustees become involved. Controversy is bound to follow a study as one-sided as this one where the options are being used unilaterally. Whatever decisions you arrive at they will be suspect."

Mr. Campbell said he is not complaining about the conflict between school trustees and municipal governments but that he hoped that conflict would not develop into a quarrel.

"I would be less than honest if I did not tell you that we regard the concept of your finance study as entirely inappropriate and we hope that before it is too late you will come to realize that school trustees and municipal governments actually form one level of government.

"Our functions are the same.

WIRE BRIEFS

Kamloops Man Killed

BOSTON BAR (CP) — A Kamloops man was killed and a woman injured in a car-truck crash on the Trans-Canada Highway 14 miles south of this Fraser Canyon community Tuesday night. Police said the car slammed head-on into a semi-trailer truck. Names of the victims were withheld.

Remains in Coma

LISBON (AP)—Premier Antonio de Olivera Salazar rallied slightly during the night, though still in a coma.

Hit-Run Raids Stir Israeli-Arab Strife

AMMAN (AP) — Jordan said today that it drove off an Israeli hit-and-run sabotage team that tried to cross the Jordan River Tuesday night.

A Jordanian army spokesman said the Israelis tried to cross near the Sheikh Hussein Bridge in the north Jordan Valley, but were driven back by machine-gun fire. The spokesman said the raiders were thought to have suffered casualties.

Israeli and Jordanian troops continued their almost nightly artillery duels across the river, and the United Nations Security Council neared approval of a resolution calling once more on Israel and her Arab foes to observe a ceasefire.

MEDICAL SERVICE PLANS DENTAL CARE COVERAGE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Medical Services Association said Tuesday its extended health plan which covers prescription drugs will be enlarged to include some dental care.

The prepaid medical plan said the dental care will be available October 1 to groups of 10 or more which are covered by the extended health plan.

The extra cost would range from $1.40 a month for single persons to $4.20 a month for families.

Benefits would cover two yearly oral examinations, some X-rays, cleaning and scaling twice a year and fluoride painting once a year. There would be no limit on extractions but fillings would not be covered.

Russia Pressures W. Germany

By LARS-ERIK NELSON

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union is ready to take effective steps to suppress neo-Nazism and militarism in West Germany should the need arise, the Communist party newspaper Pravda says.

The Pravda statement, written by commentator Vladlen Kuznetsov, comes a day after the U.S. warned the Soviet Union Tuesday that Communist military action against West Germany would bring an immediate response from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The newspaper clearly indicates that it considers the legal basis for such steps in the Potsdam agreements with the United States, Britain and France, rather than in the United Nations Charter provisions on former enemy states.

Kuznetsov makes only passing references to Articles 107 and 53 of the United Nations Charter, which West Germany feels the Soviet Union might interpret as justifying an armed attack.

He writes:

"The Soviet Union assumes that the powers of the anti-Hitler coalition, in accordance with their commitments under the Potsdam and other international agreements, continue to bear responsibility for the prevention of a rebirth of German militarism and Nazism.

"As a participant in the Potsdam agreement, the Soviet Union will continue to be ready to take, in case of need, the necessary steps together with other peace-loving states to suppress the dangerous activity of neo-Nazism and militarism."

The Soviet commentator indicates his surprise at a report that the U.S. regards as invalid provisions of the United Nations Charter which empower signatories to act against former enemy states without Security Council approval. But he does not take issue with the statement.

Today's commentary was the first reference in the Soviet press to the two controversial UN articles since the middle of July. Then the government newspaper Izvestia published the text of the memorandum to Bonn which said they fully apply to West Germany "in the case of renewed aggression."

This passage in the memorandum caused fears Bonn after the occupation of Czechoslovakia by the Soviet Union and four Warsaw pact allies.

Kuznetsov describes these fears as "hysterical" and implies that Bonn is using them to drag its NATO partners into "a risky revanchist game" whose goal is to avoid fulfilment of the obligations imposed on post-war Germany by the Potsdam agreements.

Bonn, he says, is also trying to cast doubt on the obligations and rights of the Big Four wartime Allies, "which bear responsibility for the prevention of the rebirth of German militarism."

Neon-Imbrex Offer

Neon Products of Canada Ltd. said today its formal offer to acquire all 888,750 common shares of Imbrex Ltd. has been extended to 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Neon president James A. Pattison of Vancouver said that as of Sunday, the original expiry date, Neon had acquired 89.1 per cent of the Imbrex shares.

The deal is conditional on acceptance of holders of at least 90 per cent of the Imbrex shares outstanding.

The offer calls for .46 of each Neon common share to be exchanged for each Imbrex share.

Dennison Mines Ltd.

The Japanese electric power industry said today it has signed a contract with Dennison Mines Ltd. of Toronto for joint development of uranium resources in Canada and the United States.

The contract calls for formation of a joint Japanese-Canadian firm if promising uranium ore deposits are discovered, a spokesman said.

Nine Japanese electric power firms and the Canadian firm are to explore uranium ore deposits in British Columbia and Colorado for the next six years.

They have a contract to sell 10,500 short tons of uranium ore in Japan.

Business Failures Dropped in 1967

TORONTO (CP) — The number of business failures decreased in 1967 compared to the previous year, but total liabilities increased, a Dun and Bradstreet of Canada Ltd. report shows.

The report listed 1,967 business failures in 1967, compared to 2,418 in 1966. Total liabilities of bankrupt companies were $215,000,000, compared to $174,000,000 the previous year.

The report indicates the substantial increase last year in liabilities was partly a result of an upsurge in bankruptcies of companies with debts of more than $1,000,000.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government guaranteed on Tuesday night to pay back investors $250 in 14 years for every $100 put into a new series of Canada Savings Bonds which will go on sale October 7.

The new savings bonds—which unlike regular bond issues for the financial market are always redeemable at full face value plus interest—will have an initial interest rate of 5¾ per cent a year, rising to 7 per cent.

A special compound interest feature of the savings bonds will pay investors 2½ times their purchase value if they defer cashing any interest coupons until the bonds mature Nov. 1, 1982.

The Centennial series of Canada Savings Bonds offered in the fall of 1966 contained the first double-your-money feature for investors who were willing to wait 13 years. That series established a record sale of $2,422 billion.

CASHED THEM IN

Last year's Canada Savings Bonds, with the same compound interest feature, did not sell quite so well, and holders last winter and spring cashed them in rapidly to reinvest the funds in other, better-paying securities.

The financial community expected the government would make an especially attractive offer this fall in order to sell another edition of the Canada Savings Bonds. The 2½-times return in 14 years was the result.

Gaglardi Says He's Investment Counsel to Industry

VANCOUVER (CP) —Former highways minister Phil Gaglardi said Tuesday he is acting as an adviser to people who want to invest in British Columbia.

He said in an interview that the areas in which he is advising include the pulp, lumber, mining and agricultural industries.

Asked if there are any specific developments he is working on, Mr. Gaglardi, now a minister without portfolio, replied: "Nothing I'd like to talk about."

"I'm giving advice and helping out individuals interested in investing in B.C.—the same as I always have."

"I'm still a minister of the Crown and I have a lot of contacts so I do whatever I can to help out people," he said.

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was unchanged at $1.07 5/16. Pound sterling was up ¼ at $2.56 7/16.

Act Would Kill Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has informed Japan that President Johnson cannot veto legislation to restrict log exports to Japan for the next three years, as Japan asked.

The restrictions were added as an amendment to the $1.9 billion foreign aid authorization bill. A veto of the log restriction would thus kill the entire foreign authorization measure for the current year.

Diplomatic sources noted that Japan had sent two protests to the U.S., each urging Johnson not to sign the restrictions on log exports.

Tokyo reports said that if the Japanese appeal were ignored, the government of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato would have to study what retaliatory measures could be taken.

WHEAT BOYCOTT

Since Sen. Wayne Morse (D—Ore.) was the one who introduced the restriction on Japanese logs, sources indicated Japan may consider a boycott on Oregon wheat, a major export to Japan.

U.S. officials said the U.S. government has expressed hope that the two countries can avoid starting down the path of reciprocal trade retaliation.

Japanese diplomatic sources said it is preferable to have voluntary restrictions rather than mandatory restrictions regulating trade between the two countries.

Copper Smelter Prospect Glows

The provincial government's longstanding penny per pound subsidy offer for anyone establishing a copper smelter may soon have a taker.

Speculation concerning a B.C. copper smelter gained weight Tuesday with word from London, where Premier Bennett said he intends to talk to businessmen on possible British investment in a smelter, and development of other mineral resources.

A recent government mining reserve set aside a parcel of land in the Highland Valley where geologists estimate there may be as much as 1 billion tons of copper ore in the ground.

Mines Minister Frank Richter revealed the reserve was placed on 7,500 acres in the valley, about 20 miles southeast of Ashcroft, as a tailings pond dump for a triumvirate of big copper mining companies operating in the area.

The trio—Bethlehem Copper Corporation, Lornex Mining Ltd. and Valley Copper Mines Ltd.—have formed a partnership on establishing the joint tailings disposal which will have a pipeline supply of water brought to the 5,000-foot elevation pond.

Mr. Richter said the operation could handle up to 50,000 tons of tailings—mining waste—each day.

Although Mr. Richter would make no further comment, there is some speculation that the new development increases the likelihood that the Highland Valley will become the site of a copper smelter which the government has sought for many years.

Under the 1961 Copper Bounty Act, the province offers a subsidy of a penny per pound up to a maximum grant of $2.5 million spread over 10 years to any person or firm seeking help in establishing a smelter within the province to refine copper ore.

Bethlehem Copper is the only producer of the three firms so far, digging nearly 15,000 tons of raw ore daily from its claims.

But Lornex has authorized production feasibility testing on its estimated 330-million-ton ore body of copper and molybdenum and Valley Copper currently is carrying out proving tests on what has been reported as potentially the largest copper ore body so far discovered in B.C.

Pact Makes Some Cars Cheaper Here

OTTAWA (CP) — If you shop carefully, Trade Minister Pepin said in the Commons Tuesday, you can buy some makes of cars cheaper in Canada than the same models in the U.S.

"Where? Where?" shouted the opposition.

Pepin said in reply to David Lewis, NDP Parliamentary leader, the difference in Canadian and U.S. car prices under the auto agreement between the two countries has been reduced to about 3 per cent from 8 per cent.

PRICE INCREASE

Lewis said Chrysler of the U.S. has announced an increase in 1969 car prices and asked that Pepin tell the Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. firms not to increase Canadian prices.

Pepin said one purpose of the agreement was to narrow the price differences and this had been done to a great extent in the last three or four years. Some cars now were selling at the same prices in Canada and the U.S. and some Canadian cars were cheaper.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Planning Pays Off

Estate planning is not a tax avoidance device for the wealthy. It is a personal financial program which everyone can use to help them to deal with their own affairs.

A well-considered estate plan may quite properly minimize estate tax and succession duty, and it may also reduce, or postpone, current income taxes, but tax savings should never be the sole object.

The purpose of an estate plan should be to arrange a man's assets, liabilities, income, and expenses so that they produce the most effective benefit for himself and his family during his lifetime, and continuing benefit and protection for his heirs and dependents after his death.

There are many factors which must be considered in order to accomplish this general purpose, and the relative importance of these factors is different for each individual.

Ordinarily, a man wants to retain control of his financial affairs during his lifetime. This is quite normal but it does not necessarily follow that it is wise to hold everything in his own name and then, at death, thrust it all at once into the hands of his beneficiaries.

When people who have never learned how to deal with money are suddenly faced with a large amount they usually either hoard it or squander it. They rarely acquire sudden financial acumen. One way for a man to overcome this problem is to transfer, during his lifetime, some of the ownership and financial control into the hands of his beneficiaries who will eventually receive it.

Such transfers would probably also obtain the ancillary advantage of reducing estate tax and duty but if that were the primary object it would be simpler to merely leave the whole estate by will to a charity and, thus, escape substantially all death duties.

SIMPLICITY

Simplicity is an essential consideration for any estate plan. It must be put into effect by the individual concerned and if they cannot understand it the purpose is almost certain to fail.

Liquidity is too often the only matter for which the need is recognized. But, even though it may be recognized, it is usually grossly over-provided or under-provided. At death there must be sufficient realizable assets to meet current debts, taxes, probate fees, and still leave adequate funds, quickly available, to allow the dependents to continue their own lives.

Life insurance is one obvious answer to this need for liquidity but if the man owns the life insurance policy it would, to some extent, be included in the assets of the estate and incur more taxes regardless of the fact that the proceeds may be paid directly to his widow.

SC League Wants Power To Select Bennett Heir

Group to Publish Party Newspaper

By JOHN MIKA

The British Columbia Social Credit League plans to take steps in the next six weeks to cut Premier Bennett's apron strings and transform itself from a semi-religious "little people's movement" under his direct control into a full-fledged self-governing political party.

This became apparent today on the heels of two announcements in Vancouver by league president George Dreidigger.

He revealed that the league—which has never been allowed to select a leader itself—will move at its Nov. 1-2 convention to establish the machinery for picking the man who will succeed Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Dreidigger also said a four-times-yearly party newspaper will begin publication Oct. 15. Mr. Bennett has shown a long-standing coolness to the idea of a party-sponsored organ.

Mr. Dreidigger said three constituency associations have submitted convention resolutions asking for a study of constitutional changes needed to enable the league to choose its political leader. They want the report of the study put to the 1969 convention for a decision.

He said the resolutions came from Vancouver-Burrard, Surrey and Coquitlam associations but the executive would have put the same proposal before this year's convention anyway if no association had submitted a resolution.

Mr. Dreidigger said the move is necessary for "house-keeping" and did not indicate a lack of confidence in the 68-year-old premier who has led the party for 16 years.

"But the constitution is completely blank on this (leadership procedure)," he added.

Who Would Call Convention?

"If anything happens to the premier tomorrow, there is no procedure.

"We can't go on for ever without the machinery. With the premier reaching an age when some change . . . when the time came, who would call a convention?

"Who would say who could vote as delegates? Perhaps the board of directors but I don't think any member of the board of directors would want to have to make such a decision."

(Mr. Bennett has never called for such a move and, while it would provide a means of replacing him in the event of an emergency, it would also remove his present total freedom to pick his own successor if he wishes.)

Premier Bennett who is still in Europe was not available for comment but it is certain that all eyes will be on him at the convention when the question of studying means for providing an orderly succession comes up for debate and vote.

He has repeatedly met speculation he was planning to retire with a statement that he intends to remain in his post as long as his health and the voters permit.

Mr. Dreidigger also announced that the proposed party paper will be tenatively named The B.C. Examiner but the convention will be asked to give it a permanent name.

Dues To Support Publication

He said membership dues will have to be raised to support the publication which he said would cost less than $10,000 a year to produce. It will be sent free to all on the League's mailing list and will be sold to the public at 50 cents an issue through the headquarters office.

Perhaps significantly, Mr. Dreidigger said the paper was needed because the league has done "a poor job of selling" its policies and philosophy as a political party.

(The opposition NDP and Liberal parties, and even the Conservatives, have found it necessary to establish party news letters but Mr. Bennett, while opposing a party organ on the grounds his movement was not political, has tried to sell his administration's policies through massive free circulation of the government-printed quarterly B.C. Newsletter.)

Mr. Dreidigger said the party paper "will be quite controversial. We will take the liberty of criticizing not only others but ourselves as well.

'It is not going to be a back-slapping, self-congratulating type of newspaper," Mr. Dreidigger added. "We will have guest editorials from labor leaders, from business leaders, from all segments of society."

Moves Will Spur Discussion

Mr. Dreidigger's announcements were bound to start considerable discussion within and without the league as to their significance, particularly since Mr. Bennett's power over the organization has been waning since 1966.

His complete control of the organization sprang from the fact that the B.C. Social Credit League was a small and unnoticed group of monetary reform theorists in the political wilderness who only had presidents, not political leaders, during the pre-1952 years when it consistently failed to elect any of the few candidates it ran in provincial elections.

It went into the confused 1952 campaign, following the bitter break-up of the coalition government, without a party leader although there was a behind-the-scenes fight going on between B.C.-oriented Socreds and Alberta's Premier Manning who was trying to install a lieutenant as the B.C. league's head.

Mr. Bennett, who had dramatically bolted the Conservative Party and joined the unknown Socreds on the eve of the election, was a prominent campaigner along with Pentecostal minister Rev. P. A. Gaglardi during the provincial election.

When the Socreds squeaked into office by one seat after the proportional vote "long count," the leadership question became crucial and the Socred caucus of successful candidates picked Mr. Bennett at a closed-door meeting.

(The night Mr. Gaglardi resigned the highways portfolio last session, a reminiscing Premier Bennett told reporters the widely-held belief that he won the leadership by one vote over Mr. Gaglardi at that 1952 meeting was untrue. He said he was the unanimous choice of caucus.)

The league never held a leadership convention and its only role in the choice was a pro-forma approval of caucus' decision months after the event.

Bennett Blamed For 'Failure'

Since then, Mr. Bennett has dominated the party but his total grip over its affairs was significantly loosened in the 1966 convention where numerous league delegates privately and openly blamed Mr. Bennett and his hand-picked strategy advisers for the party's stunning failure to win an expected landslide in the last provincial election.

That convention bitterly criticized the campaign strategy and failure to consult the "grass roots" and established for the first time a committee of constituency presidents who were to have regular and direct meetings with the Socred MLAs instead of making all contacts through Mr. Bennett personally.

The same league committee was authorized to participate in

Arthur Mayse

If I remember correctly, we suspended operations a couple of weeks ago on an optimistic note.

"Fishes, have at you!" I plunked out on a typewriter that today responds awkwardly to fingers employed at other pursuits. One of these was changing lures in the hope of mending our fishing luck.

But I'm getting ahead of our vacation story, which began when we headed north with trailer in tow.

We put in at Bennett's Point, a campground set amid first-growth Douglas firs, with the prime coho grounds of Oyster Bay out front.

While we settled the trailer on its jacks, we planned what to do with our salmon. Some we'd take up to Willow Point for smoking. Others we'd have canned or frozen, and naturally, we would take down a few fresh-caught coho packed in ice as gifts for friends.

Then, our catch disposed of in advance, we strolled over to the camp office-tackle shop, where we made the acquaintance of Badour.

I can tell you of Badour only that his original is or was a dance mask of the Kwakiutl people. What we saw, brooding on a shelf, was Badour in miniature. Actually, he was one of a pair that differed only in minor detail. They were finely carved from cedar, and we coveted them on sight.

The Indian artist? Betty and Walter Crawford, who took Bennett's Point over from big Paul Neilson last spring, knew him only as "Dool." Occasionally he placed a few of his mask miniatures with them for sale.

British Columbians and Albertans who put in at the camp bought most of them. Americans, Betty Crawford told us, showed scant interest in the masks.

★

We bought Badour, both of him, for the sinfully-low price of $7.50, and gave him a place of honor on the shelf under the front window of our holiday home. Then we rigged up and went fishing.

Let me tell you right now that you are not going to be subjected to a saga of bending rods and squealing reels. We were there, ready and eager. But the fish of the northern run that we counted on hadn't showed up.

You name it, we tried it.

Tom Mac spoons, the old reliable. Coho plugs that had never failed us before. Also herring strip and herring minnows . . . flashtails and bucktails . . . Rex Field buzz-bombs, Crocodiles, and Deadly Dicks.

All these from a tackle-box so loaded that I have to brace myself before lifting it.

We trolled. We drift-mooched and motor-mooched. We cast till our arms were weary.

Meanwhile, word came through from Victoria that southern-run coho were actually leaping into boats and assaulting fishermen in Becher Bay.

★

Even with the froth blown off, that report didn't help matters. Then one evening, a prairie lady who had never taken salmon-rod in hand before boated a nice coho. Not us, though! We caught three dogfish.

I gave Badour a mean look when we came boat-numb and shivering in that night. He brooded back at me in duplicate from his shelf.

"Nonsense!" said Win, when I told her my suspicions. "What could those masks have to do with it?"

After that, we fished less strenuously. Then one morning, we finally took Walt Crawford's advice . . . filled our fuel tank and aimed the outboard rig for Shelter Point up the line.

There, close in to the kelp, a silvery six-pounder grabbed a green flashtail.

"Uh-huh!" I said, while the lone coho of our trip scurried and frolicked. "Badour slipped up this time!"

Back now, with a good though not over-fishy holiday behind us, we have transferred Badour in both his presences to a permanent home. I think he is the great protector of the salmon; but that's only my uninformed guess. Can anyone tell us more about him and the artist who carved him?

Road Change At Elk Lake Advocated

Widening Interferes With Park Plans

The Patricia Bay Highway should be relocated on the proposed freeway route rather than be widened to four lanes alongside Elk Lake.

This was the opinion expressed at the Capital Region Planning board at its meeting Tuesday.

The freeway route should be implemented by Elk Lake rather than widen the road beside the lake to four lanes," said Ald. Edward Lum of Saanich.

His municipality plans to turn all of the east side of the lake into a beach area, he said.

The area, part of the Elk-Beaver Lake regional park, had one of its busiest summers ever last year with 168,000 people crowding the beaches in a three-month period.

ALONG RIDGE

The freeway route, outlined in the massive transportation study of three years ago, would swing Pat Pay away from its present route at Haliburton Road opposite Beaver Lake and take it along the ridge to the east extending well past the northern end of Elk Lake.

The highways department announced last week that the existing highway route will be widened to four lanes. In most places it now is two lanes.

The Capital Region Planning Board, in its resolution, asked the highways department to take "a further look" at the Elk-Beaver Lake section to institute the freeway route from just north of Royal Oak.

The board also agreed:

- That the proposed widening, with the exception of the Quadra-Royal Oak Section, is an intermediate improvement and not the ultimate freeway facility;
- The improvement is welcomed but it is regretted that more of the final freeway plan cannot be constructed at this time;
- It is recommended that the highways department allow in current appropriations sufficient funds to buy the right of way for the ultimate freeway and its parallel access roads;
- Wherever possible an additional width of right of way be acquired to provide landscaping for parkway treatment to ensure for all time an attractive entrance to the capital;
- That the highways department, in both physical design and capital budgeting, allow for the extension of the peninsula freeway to its logical termination in the central city, although this termination was not spelled out.

Cruiser Pulled Off Reef

A cruiser which ran aground near Knapp Island was, towed this morning to Canoe Cove. There were no injuries.

The 27-foot cruiser Belgium Rose was reported to have struck a reef located just outside Swartz Bay.

Ask The Times

Q. To whom do I write to have a congratulatory message sent by the Queen on the occasion of a golden wedding anniversary?

—M. F. B.

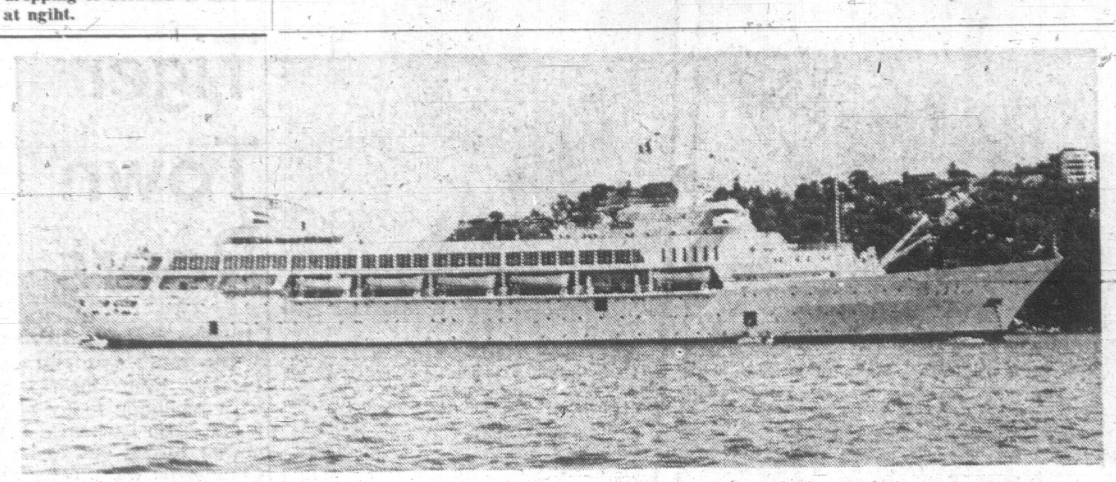
A. The Queen only sends congratulatory messages on occasion of diamond (60th) wedding anniversaries. If congratulatory messages are desired for golden (50th) anniversaries, a letter should be sent to the Secretary, Government House. Messages might then be received from the Prime Minister, Lt. Governor, Premier, Mayor and MP for the constituency of the persons concerned.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps on antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

INDIAN SUMMER?

Sunny respite from the grey skies and rain that began the week should last until the weekend, the Victoria weather office reported today. The outlook is generally sunny but cool, with daytime high temperatures in the low 60s, dropping to between 40 and 45 at ngiht.



Princess Italia will make Victoria a stop on eight San Francisco-to-Alaska cruises next summer.

2,050 to Knock on Doors

Training sessions for team captains in the residential division of United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal began this morning.

At a meeting at the YMCA auditorium, 60 of the division's 100 team captains were shown slides and briefed on this year's residential campaign which begins Oct. 14.

Mrs. Bonner Aust, head of the residential division, said she is pleased by the number of people who have volunteered to canvass for the appeal.

"Some captains already have full teams of canvassers. At this point in our campaign it's most encouraging. But we can certainly use many more."

She estimates that 2,050 volunteer canvassers will be required to cover the residential districts this year.

Psychiatrist Disagrees On Marijuana

A Victoria psychiatrist said today he disagrees with an opinion of the B.C. Medical Association that the drug marijuana is harmless.

"This in contrary to my whole experience," said Dr. Douglas Alcorn, giving evidence in County Court. He said the BCMA made a statement to the effect that marijuana was harmless in a report issued last year.

"The belief that marijuana is harmless and non-addictive has been widely publicized, and there is a widespread belief by some psychiatrists that the laws of this country are unrealistic."

Dr. Alcorn gave evidence at the trial of David Arthur Sainsbury, a 19-year-old Victoria youth who pleaded guilty to trafficking in marijuana from the basement of a house at 821 Kings Road.

ALL TOOK DRUG

The house, which has since been pulled down, was occupied by Sainsbury and several others youths.

Sainsbury said they all took marijuana.

Dr. Alcorn said he examined Sainsbury on two occasions and found no evidence of mental disorder or abnormal behavior.

"He seemed to have absorbed the viewpoint that marijuana is harmless," Dr. Alcorn testified, "and that is an opinion with which I am not in agreement."

Sainsbury was called to the witness stand by his counsel, Norman Prelypchan of Victoria. He said he was born in Victoria and left school about three years ago.

"Why?" asked Mr. Prelypchan.

"I didn't like school and I wanted to get out and work," Sainsbury replied. When asked why he took marijuana, he said:

"We were experimenting."

"Did you hope to establish a happier pattern of life"

"Yes," Sainsbury replied.

Judge Montague Drake called for a pre-sentence report and remanded Sainsbury for sentence until Wednesday at 10 a.m.

RCMP Constable John G. O'Neil said he and another constable caught Sainsbury and other youths in the basement of the house on Kings Road and found they had concealed marijuana behind the door.

Overall Support Of 60 Per Cent Means Merger

An overall vote of 60 per cent in favor of forming a district municipality — not a 60 per cent vote in each of the separate unorganized districts — will be required for passage of the December incorporation referendum of Metchosin-Colwood-Langford.

A spokesman for the department of municipal affairs said today an amendment made to the Municipal Act last year, has made this possible.

"The total vote in the three areas will count," he said. "That is if Longford should vote against incorporation but the votes pooled in all three districts total 60 per cent, the area becomes a district municipality."

Date of the referendum has not yet been fixed, but it's expected to be held at the same time as the municipal and school board elections in December.

PUBLIC MEETINGS

Stan Hiscock, chairman of an incorporation committee, said the subject will be fully discussed at public meetings.

The first meeting will be on Oct. 1 with the local association of Women Electors. It will be held at the home of Mrs. T. C. Chambers, 3383 Aloha Avenue, starting at 10 a.m.

Mr. Hiscock said since last year a committee has been working hard on obtaining information on both the merits and disadvantages of becoming a district municipality.

"Since the per capita grants have been increased, incorporation is a more economical proposal," he said. "But the dollar isn't the real question in this issue."

He said the issue was whether residents wanted to control development.

PRESERVE AMENITIES

"How can we preserve the amenities of the area if we don't control our development?" he asked.

The provincial government presently controlled zoning, he pointed out.

Incorporation, however, is expected to meet with stiff opposition.

A effort was made three years ago to amalgamate the three districts into one municipality, but was abandoned because of the opposition of some local residents.

Andy Cottyn, former Langford and Colwood Chamber of Commerce president, said the same residents will oppose incorporation in December.

"Many of us have lived here for 20 years," he said. "We don't want a bunch of newcomers disturbing our way of life."

Ferry Mechanics Set Deadline

About 100 machinists and mechanics at the Deas dock terminal on the mainland have set a Sept. 30 deadline for some action on wage negotiations with the provincial government.

They handle refitting for the B.C. Ferries fleet and are the only group of ferry workers whose contract terms have not been settled following the strike last spring.

Negotiations have been underway for almost a year now, Norman Thornber, business agent for the unlicensed ferry workers, said today.

The men are fed up and if they don't get some answers by the end of the month have indicated they will take "appropriate action."

NOT EFFECT SERVICE

A wildcat strike would interfere with the tight refit schedule, he added.

"We are doing everything we can to prevent them taking independent action but the situation has been building up for so long. They want definite answers on all their problems and how they are going to be solved."

Tradesmen in the ferry division were promised parity in wages with outside industry and the same treatment given ship and shore-based crews, he said.

Mr. Thornber said negotiations generally with the highways department and government representatives had been most satisfactory with the exception of the Deas problems.

He added that he had received "indications" today that some of the problems might be cleared up by the end of the week but would not elaborate.

Second Line Schedules City Stops

The $20-million Princess Cruises Inc. ship Princess Italia will make day-long stops at Victoria on eight Inside Passage cruises between San Francisco and Alaska next summer, it was announced today.

Completed in Italy a year ago, the 12,000-ton ship has a capacity of 420 passengers in all-first-class accommodation.

Other stops on the 14-day cruises will be Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Ketchikan, Juneau and Skagway, Alaska.

The announcement said cruise fares would be about $495 a person.

The ship now is making West Coast cruises between Los Angeles and Acapulco, Mexico. It is expected to gross $7 million this year.

The company said the Italian-staffed ship will be the first to make regularly scheduled Inside Passage cruises from San Francisco since the gold rush of 1898 and the "largest luxury liner" ever to make the cruise.

OUTSTRIP EAST

Company president Stanley B. McDonald said the west coast will "equal and outstrip the east coast in cruise revenues, schedules and ships," probably within the next decade.

To take advantage of growing possiblities, the company has commissioned construction of the 20,500-ton, 754-passenger Princess Carla to replace the Princess Italia on the U.S.-Mexico trips.

Last month American President Lines announced Victoria will be port-of-call for two of the company's liners scheduled to begin making Pacific cruises in June.

Princess Italia has 213 first-class staterooms, each with private bath, air conditioning, closed-circuit television, telephone and muzak.

The 490-foot ship includes, on its eight decks, a night club, three dance floors, four cocktail lounges, a dining salon, gymnasium and health centre, reading room, movie theatre, card room, swimming pool and open air games areas.

Saanich Collects $6.8 Million In Due Taxes

Saanich has collected 94.78 per cent of its due taxes, it was announced today.

Of the $7,235,502 levy, ratepayers have paid $6,857,697.

The delinquent 5 per cent is being hit by penalties since the due date for taxes was Aug. 19.

Two per cent on the balance owing was added Aug. 20 and will be followed by 4 per cent Sept. 20, 7 per cent Oct. 21 and 10 per cent Nov. 20.

The percentages, said assistant comptroller-treasurer John Bericoff, are cumulative. This means that a person who delays paying taxes until past Nov. 20 will be hit by 23 per cent on the balance owing.

New Kind of Theology Training Planned

A new theological college, to be built on the campus of the University of British Columbia, will be discussed at a public meeting in the Quadra Bible Chapel, 1095 Tolmie, Thursday at 8 p.m.

To be known as Regent College, the new establishment is scheduled to open in the summer of 1970. But a preliminary summer school will be held in temporary premises on the campus in June and July of 1969.

Dr. J. M. Houston, dean of geography at Oxford University, England, has been invited to head Regent College and will be chief speaker at Thursday's meeting.

"Main objective of Regent College will be to train graduates in Christian thought and life," says Charles Ellington of Victoria, a member of the board of governors.

"It will provide an entirely new kind of theological training. We want to create an atmosphere where people from all walks of life can study the Christian faith and relate it to their own profession.

"There is far too much professionalism in our theology today. We want to train men and women so they can relate Christianify to their personal lives and communicate it to those around them."

Mr. Ellington says the new college will offer an intensive one-year course starting in June 1970. Funds will be raised to put up a college building on the campus.

"It will mean a lot of hard work and effort, but we believe there is a real need for such a college. Dr. Houston is an outstanding man of ideas. He will continue as dean of geography at Oxford University until Regent College opens."

Mr. Ellington said Regent College will be entirely independent of Union College, operated by the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Theological College, both on the UBC campus.

"It is not a breakaway from these older colleges," he said, "and it is not a fundamentalist Bible school, as some imagine.

"Its object will be to demonstrate on a secular campus the reality of God in human life and the authority of the Bible for the needs of today."

New Car News

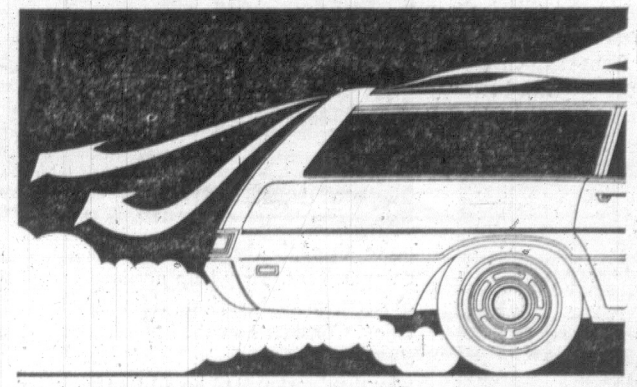
1969-THE CHRYSLER YEAR

Chrysler paces industry with styling of '69 cars

This is the week for Chrysler. The week when the brand-new 1969 cars from Chrysler are on display for the first time, as they are right now, at Dodge and Plymouth dealerships across the country. The week, the first exciting week, of what we confidently feel will be "the Chrysler Year".

This prediction is based on two main factors—styling and Chrysler quality engineering. All the 1969 Chrysler-built cars are restyled, and in the case of all Plymouth Fury, Dodge Monaco and Polara, Chrysler and Imperial models, have completely new bodies. Besides the beautiful aerodynamic look it gives to the cars, the new body has enabled Chrysler engineers to introduce many new features. On Fury, Monaco/Polara and Chrysler convertibles, for example, the roof now folds down behind the rear seat, instead of beside and behind. This alone gives back seat passengers 10½ inches more shoulder room to stretch out and take the air. Windshield wiper arms and blades on all full-size cars in the line now 'disappear'. Fury, Monaco/Polara and Chrysler Suburban station wagons now boast a new (standard equipment) roof-mounted wind deflector (see illustration). Inside, these wagons have been widened and will handily take a 4′ x 8′ sheet of ply flat on the floor. And this year, two-way tailgates are standard on all Chrysler-built wagons.

Then there are the brand-new models, like the hi-performance Dodge Dart Swinger 340, the hot new Dodge Charger 500 and the new Charger "Special Edition" with its leather bucket seats and racy lines. The new 'dress-up options like the flowered 'modtop' roof covering available on Plymouth Barracuda and Belvedere Satellite hardtops, with its matching floral upholstery design if desired. The new convenience options like the Super-Lite driving lamp on Dodge Monaco and Polara. Plus, of course, the many tried and true engineering 'standards' that have made Chrysler products so popular over the years . . . Seven-Stage Rustproofing, Safety-Rim Wheels, Torsion bar suspension, and rattle-free unitized bodies. And the list goes on, and on. These are a few of the reasons we predict with confidence that 1969 will be the Chrysler Year. There are more, a whole lot more, as you will discover when you see the new cars — on display now — at your local Dodge and Plymouth dealer's.



Roof-mounted wind deflector: A new aerodynamic wind deflector vane has been built into the roof of all station wagons in the 1969 Plymouth Fury, Dodge Monaco and Polara, and Chrysler Town & Country lines. By deflecting air downwards over the tailgate, the new vane prevents dirt collecting on the tailgate window, giving the driver excellent visibility in all weather and road conditions.

'69 Dodge Monaco big in everything but price

Throughout the 1969 Dodge line of automobiles, there is a bold new concept of design that is sure to receive massive popular approval. The full-size Dodge Monaco and Polara line, for example, has a totally-new appearance. The car is longer and lower. Large 15-inch road wheels have been added as standard equipment. Among the new options is Dodge's exclusive Super-Lite, set off-centre in the grille. The Super-Lite is an auxiliary driving lamp that complements the low-beam. Designed for use on divided highways, it throws an intense beam beyond the headlight pattern. Inside, as you might expect, the only word is 'opulence' — with a new directional dome light and reading lamp to illuminate it for Dodge Monaco owners.

New Dart Swinger for young-at-hearts

Making its first appearance this year is the new Dodge Dart Swinger "340". This is an unabashed performance car aimed specifically at the youth market. It boasts a hefty 340 CID V-8 engine, a 4-speed floor shift transmission, dual exhausts and heavy-duty suspension. And there should be no doubt in anyone's mind about this looking like a performance car. With bumblebee racing stripes, a special air-scooped 'performance' hood, and some very bright exterior colours, the Dart Swinger 340 lives up to its name — and then some.

Dodge set for new popularity

In total, there are 69 new Dodge cars to choose from in 1969, with a choice of models to suit every conceivable taste. From compact Dart sedans through the performance cars like Swinger 340 and Charger "S.E." to the luxurious Monaco Brougham.

The only foreseeable problem you may have is making up your mind which Dodge to go for. The styling is new. There are new features galore on every car, new options to choose from, new colours to brighten your day and your driveway. And the beauty of it is that all this is backed by the Dodge reputation for dependability and value that grows visibly with each succeeding model year.

Dramatic styling changes in 1969 Plymouth lineup

The big news from Plymouth is Fury. And most of the excitement surrounding Fury is generated by its superb, all-new styling. Most . . . but not all: For a start, there's more of Fury this year. 1½ inches have been added to the length and 2 inches to the width. Apart from better road-holding qualities, these extra inches deliver extra roominess, extra comfort for every occupant of the car.

Two big engineering breakthroughs are to be found in Fury convertibles and wagons. In the convertibles, Chrysler engineers have redesigned the mechanism which operates the soft top. The result is an extra 10½ inches of shoulder room in the back seat! For the thrifty-minded buyer, Plymouth offers the one compact car that has managed to stick to the original compact car idea. Valiant, riding on a 108″ wheelbase, is everything a compact car should be.

Valiant is very economical to operate, it's comfortable even with five passengers riding along, it handles beautifully and has enough options available to make long journeys a real pleasure.

In the mid-size Belvedere series, performance buffs will be happy to hear there is an additional Road Runner model, a convertible. And, yes. The horn still goes "beep-beep"!

Barracuda sports car, plus

The 1969 Barracuda is not only a sporty car! It is a sports car. It handles like a sports car, it moves out like a sports car, it makes you feel like a sports car driver. But Barracuda is more than a sports car when it comes to comfort. There's lots of room inside for passengers. The Fastback even has a fold-down rear seat option which virtually gives you station wagon convenience. Power steering, power brakes, air-conditioning: you name it, you can add it to Barracuda. As for performance, you can drive the economy 225 Slant-Six or move up to a Super Commando V-8 that really moves along. The car's reliability and ability to perform under all conditions were proven recently when Barracuda literally walked away with the gruelling Shell 4000-mile rally.

Three Barracuda models are available. Fastback, hardtop and convertible.

The 1969 Imperial is completely redesigned

Big switch to snowball in 1969

The big switch to the cars from Chrysler began in 1963. During that model year, in an all-out styling-plus-engineering sales campaign, Chrysler Canada sold more than 75,500 new cars from its Dodge and Plymouth dealerships coast to coast. In the '68 model year, just five years later, more than 146,000 Canadians drove proudly home in a new Chrysler-built car. And for this year, we predict even greater success for the cars from Chrysler.

All the new cars from Chrysler are on display right now and are well worth a visit to your local Dodge or Plymouth dealer's. Who knows, you may be tempted to join the big switch yourself!

New suspension for Dodge and Fargo Sportrucks

All light-duty Dodge and Fargo Sportrucks have a completely re-engineered "Cushioned-Beam" suspension for 1969. The new suspension system greatly improves handling and ride, and makes the new Chrysler-built trucks, in the words of a Chrysler spokesman, "the sweetest-driving pickups on the road today". On all Dodge and Fargo Sportrucks, great emphasis has been placed on passenger-car styling and convenience. Interiors have been upgraded in style and luxury. The range of options now includes automatic transmission — with the gear selector lever mounted on the steering column — power brakes, transistor radio and Sure-Grip Differential. See story on back page.

Chrysler, Canada's top-selling luxury car, gets new look

For the past four years, the Chrysler car has been the sales leader in the luxury car class. We are confident that the new 1969 aerodynamically-styled Chrysler will continue to be the sales leader. Behind this story of success lies a tale of determination to place quality engineering ahead of all other considerations. Chrysler engineers are fully aware that styling sells more cars than engineering, but are determined that any product bearing the "Chrysler" name is as close to engineering perfection as man and machine could make it.

The 1969 Chrysler models are dramatically styled. One might even say that the new styling puts Chrysler years ahead of the industry. The cars are longer and wider this year and those extra inches translate into more roominess and luxury inside. All the famous Chrysler engineering features are there — Torsion-Aire ride, Unibody construction, plus a number of new ones, many of which are described elsewhere on this page.

In 1969, the great new Chrysler New Yorkers, 300's, Newports and Town & Country models will have greater appeal than ever to the luxury car buyer.

Introducing the 1969 Imperial

The 1969 Imperial . . . majestic and so magnificently new, has prestige and authority in every line. Completely redesigned, Imperial is five inches longer overall, with increased room inside — every occupant, for example, enjoys the luxury of an extra three inches of shoulder room. Imperial is also heavier this year. In theory, a bigger, heavier car rides better. But the real factor in the ride isn't weight. It's front suspension. Imperial has a chrome-steel torsion-bar front suspension. Torsion bars are used because they ride better on highways, on curves and in traffic. They reduce sway. One additional step has been taken to improve the ride. Imperial's torsion bars have been completely insulated with rubber cushions. So they won't transmit road noise through the frame to the passenger compartment. They help produce one of the quietest, most luxurious rides you will ever enjoy. Consider now the brakes. Imperial has disc brakes at the front. They're better. That's why they're standard on all Imperials.

As you step inside Imperial for 1969, you enter one of the most elegant passenger compartments ever designed. Deep, sumptuous seating arrangements. An instrument cluster that is bathed in soft ultra-violet light. Richly-crafted fittings and appointments. Wall-to-wall carpeting underfoot. And ahead of you as you sit in the driver's seat, a standard engine that will accelerate to 60 mph in only 10.4 seconds, from a standing start.

Imperial for 1969 is a majestic car. It is also an expensive car. And rightly so. When you spend this kind of money, you aren't buying basic transportation, you're looking for the best. And that sums up Imperial for 1969.

The best.

New '69 Dodge/Fargo Pickups with New Cushioned-Beam Suspension are SPORTRUCKS

Sure they look great, inside and out. But you've got to drive one to believe it. New Dodge and Fargo Sportrucks with new Cushioned-Beam Suspension ride like a limousine, handle like a sports car.

The reason? Chrysler took the elastic off the bankroll to completely re-engineer the suspension and steering. A sway bar was added. Springs re-designed. Liners added and a lot more to make these new Sportrucks the sweetest handling pickups on the road.

But that's not all. The new Sportruck not only looks better on the outside, it's a lot more comfortable on the inside. You can even get buckets. Carpeting. The works. All the pizzaz that goes to make driving a pleasure.

Ask your Dodge or Fargo dealer about the new Sportruck...and then drive one...GREAT!

Arthur Mayse

This will soon pass, but since we returned to our reasonably modern and well-appointed house, we have been haunted by a sensation that isn't easy to define.

The ceilings seem too high. Its distances too far.

The feeling of being adrift in a place much too large for us is the direct result of a holiday in which home shrank to the dimensions of a travel trailer.

I don't mean a large one. For grandeur and multiplicity of conveniences, ours is no match for the streamlined rig we came upon in our recent travels.

That one's owner was basking in a lawn chair by his holiday abode when we happened along. We got talking, and he revealed that it boasted not only a shower but a sure-enough bath. Further, he added, the bather wasn't required to soak with knees bent at a grasshopper angle.

We went away impressed, but not envious. For our part, we had about all the comfort we could absorb, sitting on two chubby tires with rock guard hiked up to permit a picture window view of the mainland hills.

Anyway, it struck us that there's something suspect and even a trifle decadent about towing a tub along the highways. A sponge is so much lighter!

★

What we have is a kitchen that can be manipulated without shifting the feet. Ranged across it are a sink fitted with a tap for the rare times when we are hooked up to piped water, and a marine-type pump that draws from a water-tank when we aren't. An icebox is fitted with shipwright cleverness under the three-burner propane stove, and next in line is a counter.

The kitchen doubles as a drying-room for wet clothes. Turn around and you're in the living room—done in Danish, the makers insist—and on its twin settees of upholstered foam rubber, six hungry people have sat down to dine. Come night, it's a bedroom.

Guest-room? That too! It unfolds to make a sturdy overhead shelf, and we used to bump our heads on this before caution became ingrained.

That brings up the subject of trailer manners, and here the keynote is economy of movement. It is, for instance, very bad form to crowd into the kitchen or open the clothes closet door while the cook's at work. Leaving possessions scattered about is frowned on, and if we must pass each other, we do so with elbows tucked into sides.

I expect none of these rules apply to the fellow whose boasting point is his tedious bath. No doubt he can stroll around his perambulating palace with elbows stuck out at right angles.

But again, for most trailer and truck-camper owners, comfort will suffice. We don't insist on absolute luxury.

The comfort I mentioned is the best sort of all, deriving as it does from contrast. To plumb it, you must come in from woods or waters at dark, or maybe even a little after. The chances are that you will be tired, hungry, and like as not in autumn, cold clear through.

Then it's a wonderful thing to open a door, light a propane lamp, and set a kettle on to boil. Sitting soft, warming up with coffee or a hot toddy while dinner's cooking, you have returned to a very real, if temporary home.

★

I am not setting these facts down for trailer veterans, who need no such reminders. A point I'd like to make, though, is that the trailer and its truck-mounted cousin have served to extend the outdoor season.

The camp we quitted on Monday used to be bare, after mid-September, as if a big broom had gone through.

When we left, it held three neat plywood - and - aluminum outfits, had sites reserved for another six due this week, and reservations for October.

For this changed condition, I'm grateful. So, you can be sure, is that other fellow I told you about. I can see him now coming in from a day of steelhead fishing in bitter weather to loll in his steaming tub.

He's welcome to it!

Still, maybe in our next trailer, by a little crowding up here and cramping there . . .

THE CASUAL LOOK is in vogue at Victoria's new free school as teachers and students discuss what subjects will be studied. Classes began this week in a church hall at 520 Niagara Street, with 33 students and three full-time teachers. The free school is dedicated to liberally-oriented education so smoking and free-wheeling debate are in, rules on haircuts and dress out. The school is free in thought but fees range from $30 to $50 a month. Among subjects for study considered, a course on comparative religions and another on sex. Students have also expressed interest in pursuing music, art and other high school subjects.

Reaction as Expected To 'Succession Talk'

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Reaction to the Social Credit League's grass roots effort to change the constitution so the party at large chooses its next leader was entirely predictable when it came today.

Premier Bennett refused to discuss it, his cabinet ministers expressed complete loyalty and gingerly declined to indicate their feelings about succession machinery alternatives while Opposition Leader Robert Strachan crowed delightedly that "Social Credit is in a shambles" and preparing to dump Mr. Bennett.

"It's a question I would not discuss at any time," Mr. Bennett said in London, England, where he had entertained 100 leading businessmen and officials as the province's chief.

"This is a B.C. Social Credit League matter; it is league business. It's up to them and I have no comment."

THREE RESOLUTIONS

George Driediger, league president who revealed there were three leadrship succession resolutions submitted for the November annual convention, said there has been little reaction within the party so far but all of it is in favor of a constitutional amendment to ensure the party makes the choice when the time comes.

He said the proposal did not indicate dissension because it would be applicable only after Mr. Bennett left the post.

But several cabinet ministers, in their comments, mentioned Mr. Bennett's age which, at 68, makes him the oldest government leader in Canada now in office. Average age of the other premiers is 47.

Mr. Strachan, who survived a leadership challenge last year and must face re-confirmation of his position at every annual convention of the NDP, said the Socred resolutions prove "it has never really been a democratic party and now, in its declining years, it is attempting to change.

WHICH MINISTERS?

"But even at this point they are only going to make a hesitant examination of their constitution and even to do that they had to wait until the premier was away.

"I wonder also which of the ministers who are now trying to gun Mr. Bennett down suggested this change be made in the constitution.

"It's obvious that some of the ministers are waxing the floor so they can pull the rug out from Mr. Bennett more easily.

'HAVE NO CHOICE'

"But they don't want to find themselves fired from a ministerial post before the booby trap is set so therefore they have no choice but to pledge undying affection, loyalty and faith in Mr. Bennett," the NDP leader claimed.

The most cautious statement, straddling the succession fence, came from Minister Without Portfolio P. A. Gaglardi who once was considered the major threat to Mr. Bennett's leadership.

The former highways minister said he thought the "present method" was suitable and the next leader would be chosen at an "open convention."

(Mr. Bennett was made leader by the Socred caucus after the 1952 convention, not by a party convention.)

When it was pointed out to him that his statement was self-contradictory, Mr. Gaglardi responded:

'TOO BUSY'

"Well why does it have to be in the constitution? Really I don't know much about this, I have been too busy on other matters.

Trade and Industry Minister Waldo Skillings, the premier's closest personal friend, said he had been away for a week himself and didn't know anything about the proposal.

"Of course, there wasn't any Social Credit party in B.C. until Premier Bennett took over, so I suppose nobody saw the need before for the machinery to find a successor."

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who is considered by many to be Mr. Bennett's protege and likely choice if he retained the right to select his own successor, said brusquely:

CURRENT TOPIC

"I don't think it (leadership) is a current topic. As far as I am concerned, we have proposals for amendments to the constitution from time to time and they are analyzed from time to time by conventions."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, the youngest and believed strongest contender for the top post in the cabinet, said the league convention "is entitled to bring resolutions on any matter.

"But as far as I am concerned, the premier is the Premier and I hope he is there for a very long time."

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, who is believed to be at serious odds with the cabinet's old-guard, volunteered the statement: "I have no leadership ambitions."

He said he was satisfied with Mr. Bennett's leadership and had no preferences among the various courses which could be followed in determining a successor when the need arose.

Resources Minister Ray Williston said the proposal reflects the fact "that we are not all as young as we used to be" and noted Mr. Bennett turned 68 on his current trip outside the country.

ISLANDERS BE PATIENT

An eclipse of the sun Sunday will be visible only along the far eastern Coast of Labrador and Baffin Island in Canada.

Victorians have "no hope of seeing anything," an astronomer with the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich said today.

But patient skywatchers in the capital region have a treat in store — an eclipse is expected to move right up the Pacific coast July 3, 2084.

For the less patient, a partial eclipse will be visible Feb. 26, 1979.

Authors Didn't Bridge The Generation Gap

A recital of Hippie poetry in a blue-lit room smelling of incence disturbed Victoria delegates at a meeting of the Canadian Authors' Association in Toronto recently.

"We found some of the young people attractive," said Mrs. Edith Rive of the Vancouver Island branch. "But a few of them were somewhat unwashed, and their poetry was much the same."

Mrs. Rive said the Canadian Authors' Association attempted to "bridge the generation gap" by inviting Toronto Hippies to give a poetry recital. They chose blue lighting and burned incense.

Vinia Hoogstraten, the national president, "wasn't too pleased," Mrs. Rive said, and some of the delegates left the room before it was over.

Vancouver Island was represented at the convention by Mrs. Rive, Miss Yvonne Stevenson and Miss Muriel Millen. In their report to a branch meeting in the Douglas Building cafeteria, they said the delegates enjoyed other aspects of the convention.

"We particularly enjoyed a trip to Stratford, Ontario, for a performance of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream," Miss Millen said.

Loffmark Adds Boat Toilets, Detergents

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Wednesday took on pleasure boat owners and housewives in his latest attack on the pollution problem. He immediately ran into strong criticism.

Mr. Loffmark, during an interview in Vancouver, revealed he will bring in regulations before next summer to outlaw flush toilets on pleasure craft and ban the sale of certain detergents.

He said both were causing pollution, the boat toilets by discharging human wastes into recreational waters and the detergents by saturating some water courses.

PROPANE UNIT

Mr. Loffmark said the flush toilet ban would not be a hardship because a propane disposal unit is now on the marine market.

A yacht club officer, who wished to remain unidentified, said switching to the propane unit would cause a hardship because it could cost an owner several hundred dollars to make the change.

Both he and Oak Marina operator Robert Wright said there was no pollution problem caused by pleasure craft owners which normally use their toilets in more remote cruising waters because most marina and harbor areas prohibit waste discharge at dockside.

Pressed Garbage Studied

Region Appoints Group To Make Recommendation

A new way of getting rid of garbage, now being used in Japan, is receiving serious study in Greater Victoria.

The Japanese process compresses garbage into a dense mass which is so hard it can be used in construction projects.

The usual method of garbage disposal is open burning, as done in Greater Victoria, or incineration or land fill.

The regional district, which is expected to take over responsibility for garbage disposal, has already appointed a technical committee of municipal engineers to study disposal.

City engineer James Garnett visited Japan last fall to see the compressor system.

NO SMOKE, SMELL

He said it will accommodate every kind of refuse and the advantage over incineration is that there is no smoke or smell and there is a usable and possibly saleable end product.

Compressors are being used in Okabe, Kofu and Yokosuka city in Japan and Portland, Oregon, has ordered one.

Cost of the Kofu compressor was $835,000 and it can process about 140 tons of garbage in eight hours. Victoria area garbage is about 300 tons a day.

Neville Life, Saanich engineer and a member of the regional district's technical committee on garbage disposal, said one of the problems of the compressor is that it would cost $1.5 million to bring and install here.

For something which may have "bugs" in it, this may have "tremendous risks."

Each member of the technical committee is taking an individual method of disposal to investigate and he said the compressor system "will get serious study in the over-all picture."

BEFORE YEAR END

He hoped the committee's report will be made before the end of this year.

The Japanese compressor system, manufactured by Tezuka Kosan Company Limited, uses a hydraulic concentrated pressure press.

A statement on behalf of the company said the process has many advantages over incineration of garbage. It said it is 50 to 75 per cent cheaper, creates no smoke or fumes and produces a valuable end product.

Another feature is that all bacteria in the garbage are killed by the removal of all oxygen. It also does away with the sorting of garbage necessary in incineration because the compressor will take everything.

The processed blocks can be coated with asphalt or concrete and used in construction and land improvement works.

The Japanese manufacturer has received inquiries from Canada, the United States, Australia, Italy, France, Germany, the Soviet Union, the Philippines, Formosa, Hong Kong and Mexico.

Tax Staff First Group Over the Top

One of the first employee groups to report exceeding its 1968 United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal goal is the staff of the taxation division, Department of National Revenue.

C. E. Wesson, division chief, said his 122 employees topped their $2,000 objective on the first day of canvassing. To date, 104 staff members have given $2,183 with a number of persons still to be contacted.

The majority of the contributions were made through the government payroll deduction plan.

Mr. Wesson paid tribute to Ross MacKinnon, who organized and conducted the campaign in the division.

Another early report showing excellent response to the United Appeal came from the permanent staff at the Fort Rodd Hill national historic park.

All six staff members contributed a total of $94, an average of $15.15 each.

There are 23 community agencies and the Red Cross served by the annual drive. This year's objective is $655,000 up about 9 per cent from last year.

Wooded Wonderland of Homes Looks Ahead . . . No Sewers but the Pipes Are There

By ROGER STONEBANKS

In Broadmead, the sewers are laid even though there is no service.

All utility wiring is underground and the developers must approve every house design.

It's that kind of a housing development, and it will cover 713 acres north and south of Royal Oak Avenue, between Patricia Bay Highway and almost as far as the southern shores of Cordova Bay.

The development will eventually house 6,000 people and cost upwards of $50 million.

Saanich planner Tom Loney says that is "a good size anywhere" and while there have been bigger ones in North America, "the size makes it large even on the American scene."

●

It was three years ago that Broadmead Farms Limited, a syndicate headed by Goldon Rolston of Victoria, purchased the land from Rithet Consolidated for an undisclosed price.

Since then, construction has started — and in some cases completed — on 31 houses and a further 85 are in various stages of planning.

Three school sites have been agreed to with the school board and there will be a shopping centre, recreational facilities, over 150 acres of park and recreation area — including the 96 acres encompassing the Rithet bog near the highway — and a possible 60 acres of multiple housing.

●

"Our goal is to establish a community with a very attractive and accommodating kind of environment and in a sense create a populated greenbelt," said Mr. Rolston.

"By proper sizing of lots and parks, we will preserve much of the greenbelt that exists, and there is a need for that in Greater Victoria.

"A lot of residential land available does not have good natural appeal. Godon Head is virtually flat and tree-less in lots of places."

Broadmead will develop with single-family and multiple-family accommodation, although the latter will depend on the arrival of trunk sewers.

The laterals are being laid for the new houses, running as far as the property line. Present sewage disposal is via septic tanks.

●

"Every lot is served with a non-operational sewer," said Mr. Rolston, adding that doing it this way avoids higher costs later by cutting up streets for the pipes.

Areas being developed on the septic tank basis are being restricted to those where effluent will percolate into the ground.

"We are trying to develop in areas that will allow good planning and at the same time percolate," he said. "We and everyone else feel the only answer to orderly development is sewers."

He said the 60 acres that could be developed for multiple-family use could include court-type housing which increases the density but continues privacy.

●

"We want to get away from box-y buildings," he said, "stepping the apartments down slopes among rocks and trees.

"This will be an outgrowth of a lot of plans and considerations and we will have to have sewers," he said.

Asked if there might be any high-rise apartment, he said there is one site which may take a high-rise. If the usual type of single-family housing was used, the slope would have to be cleared and trees destroyed.

Mr. Ralston said plans for apartments, shopping centre and other phases of the development are not being rushed. The development is only entering its second 50 acres in the three years since the property was acquired.

Broadmead Farms sells lots to purchasers who can erect their own houses—subject to design approval by the developer—and it builds houses as well.

He said lots run from a low of $6,600 to a high of $7,800 for 100 feet of frontage. The minimum cost of both house and lot was put at $35,000.

The Rithet bog area will be preserved as a natural recreation area.

Mr. Ralston said the developers have sought approval in principle from Saanich for a comprehensive land use plan, not specific zoning, as "something for us to pattern development on."

While a normal subdivision did not require this, Mr. Ralston said Broadmead wants Saanich to have an idea of what is planned for the future and make suggestions on it.

He pointed out that patio-housing "could be the answer" to land costs in providing accommodation while not creating sub-standard housing.

●

"If we can reduce land costs we would like to work with Saanich on it," he said.

Mr. Loney, as the Saanich planner, said "we agree with the general approach concepts.

"We're quite happy with it. It is fulfilling a certain demand in the market. We would like to see, as the years go on, more mixture of uses and a wider range of economics so they market to a wider section of the population than at the moement.

"They are putting in more than the required services and this determines the selling price of the land and this roughly determines what kind of a house you put on it."

He agreed it is "pretty unusual" to put in the lateral sewer pipes before the service exists but this overcomes tearing up the streets later and once the trunk, or main, sewer is extended it is simply a matter of connecting this to the laterals and then connecting laterals to the individual houses from their property lines.

●

It is not known when sanitary sewers will be extended to the Royal Oak area.

It is beyond the five-year sewerage plan envisaged in the proposed sewerage enterprise. The closest the boundary line comes is the Chesterlea subdivision beside Patricia Bay Highway and opposite Douglas Golfland, where a small treatment plant serves 88 houses.

Centenarian 'Snowed Under' With Tributes

Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson, 100 years old today, was bombarded with telegrams, letters, cards and prone calls.

"I'm just about snowed under," said the lively doctor from his home at 2333 Beach Drive. "I've heard from the Queen, Prime Minister Trudeau and from old friends and acquaintances all over Canada.

"I don't know how they keep track of me."

This morning Dr. Wilson received personal calls from Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson; a representative of Premier Bennett, now in Europe, and many Victoria clergymen.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you please give me the address of the nearest dealer in antique dolls? L.P.

A. According to a spokesman for the Victoria Doll Club, there are no dealers in antique dolls. From time to time antique stores may have them, but it is not a common occurrence. Trading in antique dolls is generally carried out on a private deal basis. Information on this trade may be had by contacting club president Mrs. Ruth Derrick, 1962 Bourchier.
